VERMONT STREET BRIDGE TROUBLES CONTINUE

Over the spring and summer, problems with trash, drug paraphernalia, and homeless encampments on, under, and near the Vermont Street Bridge reached a tipping point for many neighbors of the beloved pedestrian bridge that traverses Washington Street and the 163 entrance ramp.

John Ross, a UHCA Beautification Team member and part of UH ZoneWatch, filed numerous Get It Done reports, and he is a San Diego Police Department (SDPD), and he is a part of UHCA Beautification Volunteer Andy Lange.

A “make-shift ‘room’ was constructed under the north side of the bridge out of scrap plywood and was used by homeless people as an encampment. After weeks of nothing being done, a fire broke out on June 11, and it spread to the hillside, scorching eucalyptus trees as well as the fence and plants of neighboring homes,” Ross told his fellow ZoneWatch team members.

Neighbor and fellow UHCA volunteer Jayson Coleman implored SDPD and others in the community: “I am frustrated. I see a lot of crime in the alley (Pascoe) behind my house, and I call the non-emergency line WEEKLY to no avail. Stolen packages, crack users, stolen motorcycles, drunk, vagrancy, and graffiti have all been caught on my 5 cameras.”

Coleman believes that the issues he’s seeing stem from problems on the bridge and in the neighboring canyon. “Vermont Street Bridge has been less than poetically beautiful these last few years. It has been a stage for vagrancy, theft, intimidation, and less than sanitary conditions. It is my belief that if the bridge is taken care of, making it impossible for people to congregate and or live under the bridge, it would deter users, stolen motorcycles, drunks, vagrancy, and graffiti have all been caught on my 5 cameras.”

Coleman asks us to “Please keep vigilant. Make sure you introduce yourself to your neighbors and talk about the issues. If anything odd happens, reporting is the only way to document the problem. We are the eyes and ears of our neighborhood, and it will remain OUR neighborhood only to the degree we ourselves get involved.”

One person passed out, another sitting on bridge, with large cart blocking traffic.

Unfortunately, as soon as one problem was addressed, more followed. UHCA Beautification Volunteer Andy Lange has been submitting numerous Get It Done reports with no results, and ultimately contacted the Mayor’s office with a list of frustrations from neighbors that he and his wife Mary collected:

- 10th Ave.: I was assaulted on the bridge by a homeless person for being gay. A police report was filed, and my assailant was found, but the officer involved recommended I not file charges because “...the person is not of sound mind and the case will go nowhere...” I don’t feel safe crossing the bridge alone.

Summer in the Park Recap

It was deja vu all over again—many comments about “just like old times,” as though time hadn’t stopped for the concert series. It was our Field of Dreams. Put on a show and they will come. And they did: neighbors, families, friends, and visitors came to enjoy, the music, and food and forget about the world at large. And that is why the University Heights Community Development Corp. resumed its Summer in The Trolley Barn Park event for the 24th year. We didn’t want the pandemic to shut the event again as it did in 2020 and 2021. Enjoy the photos, and you will see why this event won’t go away—it is celebrating COMMUNITY, and what better place than in our neighborhood park that we made happen!

School Bond Measure in November

Will Fund Safety, Health, Repairs, and More

On July 26, the SDUSD Board of Education voted to place a $3.2 billion General Obligation Bond Measure on the November general election ballot. The bond is called “San Diego Student Safety, Health, and School Repair Measure,” if approved by 50% of voters in November, will immediately fund $296 million towards school security, and student health and safety.

“This won’t result in a tax increase for taxpayers,” SDUSD District D board member Richard Barerra said. “The previous bond measure passed in 2012 is retired, and this new bond measure will replace it.”

The recent spate of school shootings around the country has caused great concern among educators and parents alike, and the immediate impact of hardening school security is part of a multi-pronged approach to help keep schools safe. According to Barerra, “It’s about multiple elements—technological and physical—to try to guard against situations.

While previous bond measures have covered some security upgrades, more are needed, and faster. Some of the improvements this bond measure will fund include emergency communications systems, fencing, secure single-entry points to campuses, lighting, security cameras, and automatic door locks. The remainder of the bond measure will fund:

- Universal Transitional Kindergarten School Facilities
- Major Repairs, Renovation, and Modernization of School Facilities
- Classroom Technology and STEAM facilities to improve Student Academic Achievement
- School Accessibility and Code Compliance Upgrades
- Energy Efficiency and Sustainability
- Quality Neighborhood Schools
- Vocal and Performing Arts Education Facilities
- College, Career, and Technical Educational Facilities
- Specific Charter School Projects

Stay tuned, and more importantly, stay involved in this process. We will continue to update the community as this bond measure progresses.

What a summer! I hope you’ve been enjoying it with your family and friends. It’s been a busy season here in UH. We kicked it off with the UH Block Party 25th Anniversary celebration for the UH Sign, had a group marching in the SD Pride parade, and enjoyed 4 weeks of Summer in the Park concerts. In between these events, there have been teams of volunteers conducting ongoing cleanups, keeping a watchful eye in the neighborhood, and maintaining new trees. We’ve also been working behind the scenes at UHCA expanding the board with new members, welcoming a bunch of new volunteers working on the UH News and events teams, and increasing our reach with other community associations as we try to navigate the vast range of changes that San Diego is going through.

In this issue, we’re continuing with Bill Ellis’s informative primer on community planning with Part 2. With so much change happening at the city planning level—including the new Parks Master Plan implementation, new Complete Communities initiatives, and changes to how the community planning groups work with the City—it’s important for citizens (also known as voters!) to understand how these changes impact our neighborhood, businesses, and properties.

I’m thrilled that our own Carmen Cooley-Graham was elected to the North Park Planning Committee in July. Carmen is a business owner and a passionate voice for UH on the NPPC and will act as our liaison to that group. She joins our UHCA Vice President Shu McGraw who is the liaison to Uptown Planners, and together they will help ensure that UH voices are heard in both of the planning groups that influence and advise the City on development, land use, and overall planning for our community.

Working with the two planning groups and the coalition of University Heights Community Development Corporation and University Heights Historical Society has been an important way for UHCA to ensure that our voice is heard by our elected officials. And that voice is more important than ever, with major projects changing our community and more on the way. With critical decisions coming up on the redevelopment of the Normal Street Education Center and the potential installation of restrooms in Old Trolley Barn Park, it’s important that we continue to gather community input and reflect what our residents and businesses want back to the City. Your participation in surveys, community meetings, and UHCA events is an important part of that connection and communication.

Thanks for being UHCA—for your commitment, volunteering, and participation. You are what makes UH a stronger community and I’m proud to be a part of it.

I’m proud to be a part of this community, and UH a stronger part of San Diego. Thanks for being UHCA—for your communication. Participation is the key to our success and we continue to gather community input and feedback, both from surveys, community meetings, and UHCA events. A portion of your membership is tax-deductible to the extent allowed by law. For more info, email membership@uhsd.org.
How Land Use Planning Is Organized in the City of San Diego

This is the second part of a four-part series, "NEIGHBORHOODS IN TRANSITION: WHO DECIDES OUR FUTURE?" focusing on how community planning works in San Diego. The full series is available online at www.uhsd.org/neighborhoodsandtransition.

Land use planning in the City of San Diego is guided by the General Plan, the Community Plan, and the Municipal Code, which specifies zoning details. It is important to note that if there are conflicts between the General Plan, Community Plans, and Municipal Code, the Municipal Code takes precedence.

The San Diego General Plan

The planning process begins with the General Plan of the City of San Diego. According to the City’s website, "The City’s General Plan is its constitution for development. It is comprised of 10 elements that provide a comprehensive state of citywide policies and further the City of Villages smart growth strategy for growth and development."

General Plan elements include Land Use and Community Planning, Mobility, Urban Design, Economic Prosperity, Public Facilities, Noise, and Historic Preservation.

Community Plans

The City is comprised of 52 Community Plan Areas that divide up the city. Each area has its own Community Plan with a set of elements similar to the General Plan but more specific to its plan area. For example, the Residential-Medium Land Use category defined in the Community Plan is translated into the associated Base Zone RM-2-5 in the Municipal Code. This zone allows up to 29 units per acre, requires a setback from the property line of at least 15 feet, and sets a maximum height of 40 feet. There are many other specifications as well.

The Community Plan Land Use Element identifies the location of residential, commercial, and mixed-use areas and also defines how many residential units that can be built on an acre of land. As a reference, the typical lot size in University Heights is about 50 feet x 150 feet or .17 acre. Examples of Community Plan Land Use categories include the following:

- Residential Low (single family homes): 5-9 dwelling units per Acre (DU/AC)
- Residential Medium: 16-29 DU/AC
- Residential Very High: 74-109 DU/AC

In addition, the Community Plan Urban Design Element "guides future development to ensure that the physical attributes that make Uptown unique will be retained and enhanced by design that responds to the community’s particular context—its physical setting, market strengths, cultural and social amenities, and historical assets while acknowledging the potential for positive growth and change."

Municipal Code Zoning

Underlying the Community Plans are the Zones defined in the San Diego Municipal Code, which "help ensure that land uses within the City are properly located and that adequate space is provided for each type of development identified. Base zones are intended to regulate uses; to minimize the adverse impacts of these uses; to regulate the zone density and intensity; to regulate the size of buildings; and to classify, regulate, and address the relationships of uses and land buildings." The Municipal Code further specifies the height, density, setbacks, and other details of construction in each area.

Notice: The information in this newsletter is for planning purposes only. Please refer to the City's website for the official current zoning and planning information.

Understanding how land use planning is organized in the City of San Diego is essential for community members to participate effectively in the planning process and to ensure that the urban fabric and character of City planning continues to be maintained.

Nature in the Neighborhood
Plants with a Thirst for Wetlands

As summer winds down, so do most native plants, saving precious water for core functions only. Plants growing near streams where the soil stays moist through the summer are the exception to this rule. This month, we’ll visit some species (in addition to last month’s willows) that normally grow along rivers, streams, and lagoons but have found a home in our neighborhood where we can see them up close, without getting our feet wet.

Our specimen has the deeper lobes, long central “finger,” and smooth (not toothed) leaf edges of a Western Sycamore, but the leaves are somewhat hairy below, like a London Plane.

Look for a native rush (Juncus sp.) growing nearby in the parking strip. Remember, “rushes [the stems] are round, but sedges have edges.” These grass-like plants grow in all kinds of wet places and are hard to tell apart, but note that these flowers or seeds (both are tiny and brown) grow along the stem, not just near the tip.

Behind you, inside the fence and along the alley is a California Rose (Rosa californica), perhaps with the rose hips still hanging near the top (please don’t pick!). It forms dense thickets beneath willows and other streamside trees, along with other native vines such as Wild Grape (Vitis californica) and Poison Oak (Toxicodendron diversilobum). There’s grape growing in this yard too, but the fruit is too big to be from our native species (also don’t pick!).

Continue around the corner to (1420) Campus Street, where you’ll find a tall, trimmed-up Mulefat (Baccharis pilularis) towering over the upland natives. Our specimen has the deeper lobes, long central “finger,” and smooth (not toothed) leaf edges of a Western Sycamore, but the leaves are somewhat hairy below, like a London Plane.

Conveniently located in University Heights

From Park Blvd, head west on Monser Street (in 1639), where you’ll find a Western Sycamore (Platanus racemosa) bursting out from the parking strip. In nature, these graceful trees grow up to 100 feet tall in wide canyon bottoms, such as San Clemente Canyon, just south of SR52. This tree may be a hybrid between our native sycamore and its horticultural cousin, London Plane Tree (Platanus x acerifolia), which grows erect and can form stately rows, unlike our sprawling native Sycamore.

Our fountain hedges are no match for our specimen. This one has separate male and female flowers, but they’re all tiny and white.

Under that Coyote Brush, you’ll see a great home-made fountain overflowing with yerba mansa (Anemopsis californica). Yerba Mansa means “tame herb,” reflecting its use externally on sores and cuts and internally for coughing and kidney problems; it was drunk as a blood purifier. This is the sole representative of the Lizard’s Tail Family (Saururaceae) in California, and it is truly unique with its broad, red-tipped leaves and erect cones of white, magnolia-like flowers that evolved back when beetles and the like were the only pollinators around. You’ll also see another small rush (Juncus sp.) growing in the fountain.

If you haven’t seen it yet, you might take a detour on Cleveland Street to compare the leaves of the Arroyo Willow (Salix lasiolepis) with the Mulefat you just examined.

Finish your wetland walk on Maryland with another rush – the distinctive Southwestern Spiny Rush (Juncus arundinaceus), with its tiny seeds/flowers clustered near the sharp-pointed (acute) stem tips. Jam your palm down on a stem and you’ll remember this species! Our largest local rush can be found growing in large patches in San Diego’s lagoons and estuaries, such as in Penasquitos Lagoon off Carmel Valley Road.

Let’s Keep Fighting the Good Fight

Recent federal legislation and SD City Council’s updated Climate Action Plan have given environmentalists reason to feel hopeful lately. It’s exciting to think that our city can actually help make a dent in climate change and that there really can be cleaner air in our future.

Rebates on electric cars continue—for those who can find a qualifying car to purchase. And there will be new grants and rebates available within the coming years to assist San Diego homeowners switch away from natural gas to electric appliances. University Heights residents—even those who could really use the help—won’t find as much financial assistance as folks in less advantaged communities will receive (such as the $10 million in solar power system funding recently earmarked for homeowners living in many of San Diego’s communities of concern), but the end goal of reducing methane and CO2 emissions will benefit everyone in the city.

It’s great to celebrate the environment’s recent legislative wins, but we probably shouldn’t breathe a collective sigh of relief and go back to business as usual. A lot of GHGs will be pumped into the atmosphere before those “Net Zero” deadlines roll around over the next 10-25 years. SDG&E’s parent company, Sempra, is still fracking its heart out to reach more natural gas, leaking methane into the atmosphere at catastrophic levels. And they’ve just artificially lowered their electricity rates ahead of customers receiving mailers comparing SDG&E rates to those of the clean-energy community power companies, ostensibly to get residents to leave San Diego Community Power and return to buying fossil fueled electricity from SDG&E. After the “choice” window ends, SDG&E rates are planned to increase next year (Voice of San Diego tinyurl.com/yu7p3v5v).

That’s just one example among many of how the recent “Net Zero sometime in the future” news is just a starting point. Our individual choices to stay with SD Community Power, consume less stuff in general, produce less garbage, use public transit or our bikes instead of cars, etc., are also all helpful. Really, the most important thing we can do is to use our power as citizens and consumers to cause large-scale change now. We have a lot of choices about what we buy or whether we buy anything at all and about whom we elect to public office. Let’s make our voices heard and keep fighting the good fight.

What ideas do you have for advancing real, large-scale change as soon as possible? Should we try to get an influencer to go viral with a “show us your bus pass” TikTok campaign? Team up with a local news weather guy to start an all-electric-stove cooking show? Lobby the city to start taking gas appliances in exchange for Home Depot gift cards?

Let’s build on the momentum of recent government commitments and get something done!

Send your ideas to Sustainable@uhsd.org and we’ll publish them in an upcoming edition.

Cookies with the Cops

We started Zone Watch about 25 years ago because it does “take a village” to stop crime and quality of life decline. Such is the case with the Vermont Street Bridge. You may be aware of the problems: homelessness, open drug use, loitering and sleeping on, under, and near the bridge.

C’mon, people! Where are PATH and other moneyed resources to help these unfortunate souls? Neighbors who live near the bridge are fed up. The rest of us should be, too. People are afraid to cross the bridge for fear of being accosted.

To bring attention to these and other issues, University Heights Community Association will sponsor a “Cookies with the Cops” Wednesday, September 14, from 6:30 pm at Old Trolley Barn Park. We invite you to join us to thank the people who take responsibility to care for our community—from the Vermont Street Bridge and surrounding area, our parks and open spaces, and our streets.

Our police officers have taken a serious hit recently. A diminished work force and anti-police sentiment hamper their morale and their ability to respond to us. Please join UHCA to thank them for their service to University Heights.

WHAT ARE YOU READING?

Spy x Family

Spy x Family is a “manga” series. Manga are Japanese comic books/ graphic novels. Often there is also an anime (Japanese animated series) of the manga book series, though that is not always the case. Since manga are Japanese, all of the books and comics are written and read from right to left, even the English versions, which are read from front to back, with the characters’ speech balloons arranged from right to left.

The plot of Spy x Family follows a character named Twilight, who is a spy and needs to build a “family” to carry out his next mission. Little does he know that the child he adopts is a telepath, and the woman he marries is an assassin.

There are nine volumes in the Spy x Family series so far. I have finished Volume 5 (the 5th book). Each book is organized in chapters which usually mark a shift in setting.

My favorite thing about Spy x Family is its comedy that comes from the confusion of having a spy, assassin, and telepath in the same household. I also really like the way that characters’ emotions are displayed/ represented by their facial expressions, which makes the story come to life.

I have not watched the anime of Spy x Family on Hulu yet, but I am planning on watching it once I read the rest of the manga.

I would recommend Spy x Family to someone who hasn’t read manga yet because it is a lot less overwhelming than other manga series in the number of books it contains as well as its content.

EDITORIAL

Restrooms at Old Trolley Barn Park, Again, and Again

At our June UHCA community meeting, Benny Cartwright with Councilmember Whitburn’s office let attendees know that the Mayor’s office would be conducting a survey to gain community input about adding a “comfort station” in Old Trolley Barn Park. The Mayor’s office quietly launched that survey on August 6 with a cut-off of midnight August 22.

Rolling out another survey about such an important issue to our community—one that has been surveyed numerous times in the past—is frustrating to many residents (as seen in the comments on the City’s survey). Starting and concluding the survey in a narrow window of time when people are on vacation, when UHCA is unable to help promote participation through this newspaper and our upcoming September community meeting, is even more troubling.

Not capturing important data from people responding flies in the face of the “data-driven approach” that the city purports to be using to make this major decision. The City’s survey doesn’t ask about respondents’ distance from the park, mode of travel, or number of children.

The CCHU survey, which was delivered to the Mayor, Park & Recreation Director, and Councilmember Whitburn in April showed 72% of respondents against this idea. As this issue goes to press (August 19), 84% of registered respondents to the City’s survey are against it. We implore our elected officials to listen to the community—your constituents and voters—before making such a dramatic change that a wide majority of directly affected University Heights residents are against. This is not our opinion, this is the well documented voice of the community.

The good news is that daily bicycle use is averaging over 150 trips in total, in both directions. Supporting what a number of cyclists have mentioned in several media interviews, nearly a quarter of cyclists on average choose to travel in the vehicle traffic lanes. Overall, based on San Diego Traffic ADT data from 2019, the bicycle trips on this section account for approximately 2.6% of all traffic across the 5 days measured.

Meade to El Cajon

The Winslow project is still under construction with planned completion sometime this winter, and this section of Park was left alone both for the resurfacing and restriping. The Winslow will have 370 residential units, a CVS, and 542 parking spots (62 for retail) with entry/exit points on Park and on Meade. The additional traffic, especially at that intersection, and overall configuration will need to be addressed as the project comes online.

El Cajon to Lincoln

This section, along with the remainder of the block to University, has generated numerous complaints at both North Park Planning Committee meetings and on social media, with parking access changing block-by-block from “floating” (bike lane between car and curb) to curbside, to parallel, diagonal head-in, and diagonal reverse-in.

Carmen Cooley-Graham, Director of the J.A. Cooley Museum, has been vocal about the City not working with the community on implementing a better plan. “We reached out to the Mayor’s office, City Attorney, and Councilmember dozens of times, our petition has over 1,700 signatures, and we feel like nobody is listening,” Cooley-Graham said. “I want to support this city, but we need better planning and implementation. Several of the businesses that are affected are discussing a lawsuit.”

Many UH residents have expressed support for safer cycling, and a growing number are making use of the new bicycle lanes. It’s hoped that with some additional reconfiguration of parking in the commercial zone on the 4600 block, increased parking along side streets, a safer and consistent implementation, and increased education and enforcement of parking regulations, that some of the problems can be addressed. —Marc Johnson though they were sprawled out, they weren’t completely blocking anyone’s ability to get through. Recently, I’ve also noticed more feces on the bridge. I don’t know if it’s human or animal.”

The problems have been growing and have gotten the attention of not just CSSB, but also the San Diego Reader, which ran a long-form story from a former UH resident, Ian Anderson, who lived next to the bridge.

Lange added, “During my weekly UH Day, around 12 noon. I was out for a walk. I see people sleeping on the bridge. I do not feel safe. Sometimes there have been up to 4 people. On July 27, around noon, there were 3 guys doing drugs on the bridge.

Lincoln Ave.: I’m afraid to walk across the bridge between 6:00-7:00 a.m., so I no longer make it part of my daily walk. Last week, I saw several of the homeless fighting over who’s turn it was to work/panhandle the median along Washington Ave.

Vermont St.: I have never felt unsafe crossing the bridge over the past 6 years; however, of late, I’ve taken to carrying pepper spray out of caution. Somewhere around 7/22, there were 2 younger men sitting on the sidewalk at the end of Vermont on the UH side. There was trash strewn all around them including drug paraphernalia, and by their behavior they appeared to be quite high on something. I tried calling the non-emergency line but after 30 minutes gave up and hung up.

10th St.: I had an experience on Father’s Day, around 12 noon. I was out for a walk with my four year old son and there was a group of probably four homeless guys camped out on the bridge and were blocking 2/3 of the bridge. I didn’t have my kid with me—I probably would have told them to move along.

Johnson Ave.: In April, Aaron and I went to change the Vermont Street trash can because it looked like it could burst. There was a homeless man in his 20s yelling, swinging his arms around, and acting aggressively. Prior to that incident, there was another homeless man raving out loud and trying to climb up the siding of the bridge.

Lange added, “During my weekly UH volunteer clean-up of the bridge—picking up trash and using a leaf blower, I’ve seen several homeless people on the bridge for three out of the past four weeks. Even Department, Environmental Services Department, SDPD’s Neighborhood Policing Division, CalTrans, and all of the other agencies that work in this space… We will continue to prioritize the Vermont St. Bridge and the surrounding neighborhood and canyon, and politely request that you continue to advocate and make our offices aware of the issues you observe.”

Lange responded to Zeiser, “Would you tell me what that means in real life, non-political-speak terms? What changes/outreach/enforcement should we expect, and not expect, to see in the coming days, weeks, and months?”

Due to the growing number of problems here and in other parts of our neighborhood, UHCA will be hosting a Cookies with the Cops on September 20, at 6 p.m. at Old Trolley Barn Park (see announcement on page 5). Come to meet your neighbors, hear from and talk with the Planning Department, SDPD’s Neighborhood Policing Division, CalTrans, and all of the other agencies that work in this space… We will continue to prioritize the Vermont St. Bridge and the surrounding neighborhood and canyon, and politely request that you continue to advocate and make our offices aware of the issues you observe.”

Discretionary approvals are granted at the discretion of a City decision-maker and may require a public hearing by a Community Planning Group, the Historical Resources Board, Planning Commission, and/or the City Council. These are public meetings where the community may provide input on proposed projects.

The City Council is elected by the voters. The Planning Commission and the Historical Resources Board are nominated by the Mayor and approved by the City Council. The Community Planning Group members are elected by residents, business owners, or their representative in the Community Planning Area. It is important to understand that Community Planning Groups are only an advisory board to the City. They do not decide, they just recommend.

Ultimately, the City makes the determination to grant or deny a construction permit.

Overview of the City of San Diego Construction Permit Process

The City of San Diego Development Services Department (DSD) requires a permit for projects such as new construction, additions, remodeling, or repairs to electrical, mechanical, and plumbing systems.

DSD will evaluate the project to see if it conforms to zoning and other applicable Municipal Code regulations. If it does, the project will be approved “ministerially” without any public input.

As opposed to “Ministerial Review,” some projects are subject to “Discretionary Review,” which requires a decision-maker to exercise judgment and deliberation. Common reasons for discretionary review include proposals that:

- Deviate from zoning requirements. For example, a proposed building may exceed the height or density limits prescribed by zoning.
- Involve historical or potentially historic resources. Proposals that include structures over 45 years old are subject to Potential Historical Resource Review;
- Modify a previously conforming use;
- Are located in environmentally sensitive lands;
- Are located in the Coastal Zone.

AN ECLIPSE AND A FELINE EPIPHANY
How Nicole and Chris went from the corporate world to sole proprietors of “Whiskers & Wine: Cat Lounge & Cocktails”

Back in August of 2017, while celebrating Chris’ 40th birthday and witnessing the total solar eclipse in Charleston, South Carolina, Nicole and Chris were curious about a business with lines outside the door. This business was “Pounce Cat Café,” a place where people went to have a drink or coffee and hang out with cats. The concept resonated loudly for the cat-loving couple.

Nicole worked as a Director of Human Resources for a large corporation in Orange County. Chris had his own practice as a consumer law attorney in San Diego.

Inspired by the cat café in Charleston and wanting to start their own business together, the couple began looking for places in San Diego where they could realize their dream of opening up their own cat café. In 2018, they found 2856 Adams Avenue.

They quickly began working with an architect and contractor to transform the building into their dream. They started the permitting process in 2019. Unfortunately, once the pandemic hit, the work came to a halt. However, they remained committed to their business model.

Eventually, work resumed on the cat café, and Nicole and Chris got lucky and won the liquor license lottery. They built a small kitchen to make quick, healthy meals that can be easily made to order: think flatbreads, salads, and paninis. The full liquor license also sparked a name change, from “Whiskers and Wine” to the more elaborate “Whiskers & Wine: Cat Lounge & Cocktails.”

Nicole and Chris also partnered with “Saving One Life San Diego,” a no-kill animal rescue and sanctuary dedicated to cats. The idea is that “Saving One Life” will provide a supply of adoptable cats to live at “Whiskers & Wine.” The cats will have cage-free reign of the place, with comfy beds and water stations scattered throughout the café. The cats’ litterboxes will be tucked away in a cats’ only zone, aka “the cat cave,” where they can take a break from the lounge if they like. There is also a cat wall for the cats to climb up to the second floor without interfering with people on the stairway. People can bring their food and drinks upstairs to hang out on the “catio,” a covered patio enclosed with mesh screens to keep the cats safe while allowing them to experience the outside.

Those who love cats but whose allergies do not, can watch the cats cavort about from behind a glass wall, while still enjoying a drink or snack.

“Whiskers and Wine” is planned to open just as this issue of UHCA News goes to press. The staff has been hired, and the first group of cats arrived mid-August so Nicole and Chris could observe how they responded to the environment and acclimated to the surroundings.

The café’s hours will be afternoons and evenings every day except Monday. While walk-ins are allowed, it is encouraged that people reserve their time slot online. Check the website for details: www.whiskersandwinebar.com. To limit the number of people in the café at any one time to avoid stressing the cats, there will be a 1 hour and 15-minute time limit per person per visit. Once everything is up and running, the café will offer special events such as local artist mixers, cat yoga, and special tastings.

Nicole and Chris hope their customers enjoy the food and drink, and their time with the cats. They also hope some of their customers will leave with more than a full stomach and a smile. Customers who come to the café and fall in love with a kitty can fill out an online application via their partner, “Saving One Life,” and begin the adoption process for their favorite cat.

BIRNEY BUZZ

Birney Welcomes Back its Bees for the New School Year

Our Birney Bees returned to campus on August 29 after a summer filled with fun, adventure, and a bit of fundraising. The Friends of Alice Birney Elementary (FOABE), Birney’s parent-led fundraising organization, was able to run a successful Family Fun fundraising event on July 16. Community members donated funds to park next to Birney during the San Diego Pride parade while parent and student volunteers collected donations and directed cars. According to Fran Daly, FOABE president, “Pride parking went very smoothly and FOABE was able to raise $6,500 for the Birney BB program!” The school’s “specials” classes, which include art, gardening, and Spanish, depend upon these fundraising efforts; FOABE thanks all those who contributed and volunteered.

Another tradition continued this summer was the Big Reveal, where students have the opportunity to find out who their teacher is for the new school year. Students also played on the playground, and parents set up tent and met one another. The PTA provided pizza and soft beverages.

Many students excitedly anticipate who their teacher will be each year, so the Big Reveal is a big deal around Birney. Olivia P’2nd grade, said, “I am really looking forward to finding out who my teacher is and meeting her. I am really, really, really looking forward to meeting new friends.” Anabel CF, shared her hopes for her 3rd grade teacher: “I hope my teacher is funny, smart, and kind.” Students were also eager to reunite with each other; Ilana CF, 3rd grader said, “I’m looking forward to being with my classmates again. I miss them.”

This year marked the most “normal” start to a school year for students since 2020. Due to the pandemic, during much of last school year, students were clustered by class, even at recess and lunch, in order to reduce exposure. The COVID school year students will have a bit more freedom. Jackson L said he was looking forward to “being in 4th grade and school being more normal. In 4th grade I hope I am can play in the field or wherever I pick.” Parents are also excited about the return of in-person school events, such as Family Fridays, which are a large part of what helps to build the Birney community.

In the first fundraiser, FOABE is partnering with Boon Supply to provide a catalog of great items for Birney families to purchase and sell. Additionally, six items of Birney spirit wear have been added to the fundraiser this year for all fans of Birney Elementary. The fundraiser will run from September 9 – October 7. If you would like to get involved in the Birney community by volunteering or making a donation, please contact FOABE at uhapsfriends@birney.org.

FROM DISTRICT 3 COUNCILMEMBER WHITBURN

Greetings Neighbors,

I hope you are enjoying the final days of summer and have had some time to enjoy the many things that make University Heights and San Diego so great—especially at this time of the year.

Last month, I was at the final concert of the University Heights Community Development Corporation’s Summer in the Park Concert Series and what a wonderful evening that was! It was nice to see hundreds of neighbors out enjoying a beautiful evening in Old Trolley Barn Park with a great performance by the incredible Sue Palmer & Her Motel Swing Orchestra. Due to the pandemic, these concerts had not been held since 2019 so I was very glad to see the return of the series this summer—and it was a success! Thank you to everyone who has weighed in, and I will be sure to provide you with an update soon.

Over the summer, my office also heard from many residents about safety concerns on and surrounding the Vermont Street Bridge. Residents shared that many felt unsafe crossing the bridge, especially at night, and felt that accessibility is often blocked when unhoused individuals sleep on the bridge or create encampments. Often, trash, debris, and human waste have been left on the bridge, and this extends to the canyon and areas immediately surrounding it. Our office has been hard at work escalating every single concern that has been shared with us, while coordinating with the Mayor’s office to find solutions to the challenges this important pedestrian corridor continues to be facing.

I am pleased to report that a number of efforts are underway to increase safety on and around the bridge for all. CalTrans and the City coordinated efforts on Monday, Aug. 8 to clean up the areas surrounding the bridge under each entity’s jurisdiction, and plans are in the works to have regular cleaning efforts in this area. We know that there have been issues here for years, and we encourage residents to continue reporting things they see to the City’s Get It Done app, and forwarding those case numbers to Benny Carwright in our office (bcarwright@sandiego.gov) for items that don’t seem to be handled in a proper amount of time.

I appreciate all of the active University Heights neighbors who continue to contribute much of their time and resources to make this one of the best neighborhoods in town! I look forward to seeing you around town in the upcoming weeks and months!

Pet of the Month

Norma

Last year we lost our beloved Beagle, Stella, at 12 years of age. It took me almost a year to even consider having another dog. When I began thinking about it searched Pet Finder for Beagle mixes. And that was it! One of the pictures that came up was of Norma, a Beagle/Sherpa mix. We adopted her through the Baja Animal Sanctuary.

Having never adopted a dog before, I decided to check with my vet, Dr. Lewis at Harmony Animal Hospital, who had not only heard of the organization and the wonderful work they did, but had also donated to them. After some advice from the amazing vet tech, Darrell, I decided to arrange the meet and greet. The Baja group has runs for all the dogs by similar size and age, so Norma was already socialized. They have events at local pet stores around SD county and bring the dogs up by appointment. You foster the dog for 2 weeks, and after that, they make the adoption final. They even stress that if for any reason you can’t keep the dog, they’d rather you return the dog to them. Their staff was very conscientious and warm.

Norma is very social and loving. She greets everyone in the neighborhood, pets and people alike. Norma loves the beach, walks, her toys, and her bone. Her best buds are Ginger and Cal. We are thankful for Cal’s tireless energy! Being the same age, they wear each other out. A quick study in her dog training classes, Norma is about to graduate to the next level. Six months old and already 34 pounds, she is an avid bird watcher and curious pup. She is also a comedian, which I suspect is the Beagle in her. I feel very lucky to have adopted her.

SEPTEMBER AT THE LIBRARY

Hope you had a wonderful summer and were able to dive into some lovely reading and outdoor activities in the Summer Reading Program, Read Beyond the Beaten Path. Did you participate in the popular Where’s Odi? scavenger hunt and collect your custom button featuring Odi in our own University Heights neighborhood? Stop in and let us know if you particularly enjoyed a beach read this summer.

If you didn’t get to all the reading you had planned, the longer autumn nights had planned, the longer autumn nights are now refreshed and ready to get back to your usual routine. At the Friends of University Heights Library, we are working on our plans for the 2022-2023 year, including holding elections for open Board of Directors positions.

We have several officers on our Board of Directors whose terms are up this fall. For several years now, we have struggled to find enough board members, so if we do not have enough board members, we will be forced to close our Friends group. Please consider joining the UH Friends as a Board member.

The UH Friends provides much needed financial support to our library branch. If the UH Friends is forced to close, our branch would not be able to offer the programs, events, materials, equipment, and even furniture that the UH Friends provides funding for.

We need your support to continue to provide the help our branch needs to continue to be a great resource for the community. For information about becoming a board member, please contact us at info@friendsofuhlibrary.org.

Thank you for your support.

SEPTEMBER PLUME

Sometimes you don’t know how much you love something until you don’t have it. University Heights experienced that over the last two years when the pandemic forced the cancellation of the much loved Summer in the Park concerts, produced by the UHDC. This annual neighborhood get-together takes a lot of hands to make it happen, a lot of sponsors and participating vendors to help us out, and it’s all orchestrated by one dedicated powerhouse of a lady... Ernie Bone.

Ernie puts it all together, rounds up the sponsors, encourages businesses to participate with table top displays, she coordinates the permits, electrical, cleaning, and manages to do it with her trademark smile and wit. For the concerts, and so much more that she has done and continues to do to help make UH a better place, Ernie has our eternal gratitude and a (virtual) cluster of gold-dipped plumes!
