Symptoms of Borderline Personality Disorder differentiate suicide ideators from attempters to a greater extent than capability for suicide and fearlessness about death.

Symptoms of BPD $d = .59$, $p < .001$

Practical Capability $d = .40$, $p < .001$

Fearlessness About Death $d = .08$, $p = .55$

REFERENCES

---

IMPLICATIONS

- Borderline personality disorder features may be a meaningful contributor to the progression from ideation to attempts
- Assessment of BPD features may inform suicide risk assessments
- Critical analysis of capability for suicide and its subcomponents is necessary to validate leading ideation-to-action theories