Ways to Celebrate the 2021 National Week of Making

May 17–23, 2021

1. HOST AN EVENT

   Whether it’s a webinar, DIY class, wine and weld, sewing circle, large or small, in-person or virtual, consider hosting an event during the Week of Making. Share your event with the world by putting it on the Week of Making Calendar – simply fill out the form at:

   https://www.nationofmakers.us/national-week-of-making

2. SPOTLIGHT YOUR MAKERS

   We know you have some incredible makers in your spaces and places – the National Week of Making is a great time to showcase and spotlight their incredible work. Consider creating a page on your website, and highlighting your awesome makers each day during the week on social media. Tag @nationofmakers (Twitter) and @officialnationofmakers (Instagram) and #WeekofMaking2021 on social media, and we’ll be reposting your tweets, reels, and stories all week long!

3. BE A MAKER ADVOCATE

   The National Week of Making is an excellent time to tell your local and federal policymakers about the impact that makers are having around in your local area, across the country, and around the world. For some tips on how to engage in maker policy, check out our advocacy 2-pager at:

4. MAKE SOMETHING!

   Whatever you do during the week of May 17–23, make sure you MAKE something. Large or small, collaborative (socially distanced and masked) or individual, we want to see what you’ve made, Nation of Makers! Share your awesome creations on social media (tag #LookWhatIMade #WeekofMaking2021), or by emailing them to us at info@nationofmakers.us. We’ll be showcasing your creations throughout the Week of Making!
