

Works Cited

Duffy, John. History of Public Health in New York City, 1625-1866, Volume 1. New York City, Russell Sage Foundation, 1968.

Gifford Jr., George E. "Botanic Remedies in Colonial Massachusetts, 1620-1820." The Colonial Society of Massachusetts, vol. 57: Medicine in Colonial Massachusetts, 1980, pp. 263-288, www.colonialsociety.org/node/1215. Accessed 29 June 2020.

Hatfield, Gabrielle. Encyclopedia of Folk Medicine: Old World and New World Traditions. Santa Barbara, ABC-CLIO, 2004.

McCulla, Theresa. "Medicine in Colonial America." Colonial North America at Harvard University, 2016, <https://colonialnorthamerica.library.harvard.edu/spotlight/cna/feature/medicine-in-colonial-north-america>. Accessed 29 June 2020.

Tannenbaum, Rebecca J. "'What Is Best to Be Done for These Fevers': Elizabeth Davenport's Medical Practice in New Haven Colony." The New England Quarterly, vol. 70, no. 2, 1997, pp. 265-284.

Todt, Kim. "'Women Are as Knowing Therein as the Men': Dutch Women in Early America." Women in Early America, edited by Thomas A. Foster, NYU Press, 2015, pp. 43-65.

Wolfe, Missy. Insubordinate Spirit: A True Story of Life and Loss in Earliest America, 1610-1665. Lanham, Rowman & Littlefield, 2012.

Figure 1

Dodoens, Rembert. Histoire des Plantes. 1557. Wellcome Collection, <https://wellcomecollection.org/works/ezfdb368/items?canvas=1>.

Figure 2

Culpeper, Nicholas. Culpeper's English Physician and Complete Herbal. 1790. Biodiversity Heritage Library, <https://www.biodiversitylibrary.org/pageimage/3588511>.