HudBay Minerals CEO and President David Garofalo is confronted at the Canadian Club of Toronto, while presenting on a panel “The Challenge to Lead”

BElOW: Media communiqué from the Mining Injustice Solidarity Network

Along with the Guatemalan company CGN (Guatemalan Nickel Company), Hudbay Minerals is a co-defendant in Canadian courts on 3 overlapping civil lawsuits related to the murder of Mayan Qeqchi community leader Adolfo Ich, shooting-paralyzing of German Chub, and gang rapes of 11 women.

More Information / What To Do: see below

*****

Today, the Canadian Club of Toronto invited major players in Canada's mining industry to a formal luncheon and panel discussion entitled “The Challenge to Lead.” However, attendees who have ties with communities impacted by these Canadian operations, expressed grave concern. Given the poor track record of Canadian mining companies at home and abroad, individuals were left questioning the legitimacy of Canada's extractive industry claiming leadership in Corporate Social Responsibility.
(“Canadian Miners, The Challenge To Lead. Are Corporate Criminals Taking Leadership?” Flier handed out by the Mining Injustice Solidarity Network at “The Challenge to Lead” event. The QR barcode pictured links smartphone users to a video testimony of Rosa Elbira - to view: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dSGuDk4cnz4 - who was raped by the police and HudBay's security forces during the forced eviction of her community in Guatemala. Shortly after fliers were distributed, event staff scrambled to retrieve and confiscate them. Photo: Rachel Small)

Pierre Lassonde, Chairman of Franco-Nevada Corporation, moderated a panel that included David Garofalo, President and CEO of HudBay Minerals, Rob McEwen, Chairman and Chief Owner of McEwen Mining, and Piotr Pikul, Partner at McKinsey & Company, on the challenges and opportunities facing the Canadian mining industry.

Rachel Small, an attendee who has worked with Latin American communities near a number of Canadian mines, said: “Canadian mining companies have a long track record of committing human rights and environmental abuses at their mines around the world. We're handing out these fliers that say 'Corporate Criminals Taking Leadership' to point out how absurd it is that a company like HudBay, infamous for its poor social and environmental record, can speak at an event like this about being 'global leaders' in the industry.”

After the fliers were distributed, event staff scrambled to retrieve and confiscate them.

In fact, HudBay Minerals made headlines last year when it became the first Canadian company to be tried in Canadian courts for crimes committed at mining operations overseas. Plaintiffs are trying to hold HudBay Minerals accountable for the actions of private security employed by the company, who allegedly shot and killed Adolfo Ich Xaman, a teacher and community leader in a town near their Fenix mine in Guatemala. Another lawsuit against the company alleges that private security gang-raped 11 women during a forced eviction from land to which the women and their Mayan communities hold ancestral rights according to a ruling by the Guatemalan Constitutional Court. These cases are proceeding in the Superior Court of Ontario.

McEwen Mining’s reputation is less than stellar. A 2012 complaint that communities near McEwen Mining’s Los Azules project in Argentina filed with Canada’s Corporate Social Responsibility Counsellor claims that the company lied about the impact their open-pit copper mine would have on glaciers in the area, and that it violated a number of international standards. McEwen Mining refused to engage with the claim, effectively ending the only government process communities have access to in Canada to bring forward complaints.

Monica Gutierrez, an attendee from the Mining Injustice Solidarity Network (MISN) responded after the panel: “These companies do have an international reputation, as they claim, but it's definitely not one of trust or one that Canadians should take pride in. What does it say about Canada, if these companies, with their terrible records, are claiming leadership in setting the future direction for our country?” In reference to the question of mining companies adhering to local laws, panelist Piotr Pikul said: “You just have to do it”. Communities near Canadian mines globally are waiting for companies to comply with this imperative.

******

More Information/ What To Do
Defensora, a film by Rachel Schmidt that documents the lives and vision of the Mayan Qeqchi people, and their efforts to seek justice in Canadian courts against Hudbay Minerals. View trailer / organize a screening / more information: www.defensorathefilm.com

Join an Educational Delegation to Guatemala, May 31-June 8, 2014
Mining Injustice ~versus~ Community well-being and the Environment, in the context of on-going struggles for truth, memory and justice for the genocides and repression of the past. Hosted by Rights Action and SMAK (Sustainable Mining Alliance of the Kootenays). Contact: info@rightsaction.org

Information about lawsuits: www.chocversushudbay.com

Tax-Deductible Donations (Canada & U.S.)
To support Mayan Qeqchi efforts to defend their community well-being and attain justice for the harms and violations suffered, make check payable to "Rights Action" and mail to:

- United States: Box 50887, Washington DC, 20091-0887
- Canada: (Box 552) 351 Queen St. E, Toronto ON, M5A-1T8

- be a monthly credit card donor (Canada & U.S.)
- to donate stock, contact: info@rightsaction.org

*******
Comments / Questions: info@rightsaction.org
Get on/off our listserv: www.rightsaction.org
Please re-post and re-publish this information
*******