Winds of Memory (1992)
This film by Felix Zurita reveals Mayan life and culture in Guatemala today, five centuries after the "discovery" of America by racist, Christianity-led western European imperialists and colonialists. The Tzutuhil Indians of Santiago Atitlan, a lakeshore village among volcanoes, seek to regain control over their lands, communities and lives. Overrun by tourists by day, haunted by the military and death squads at night, the Indigenous Mayan reveal the disjunction of their current lives: they exorcise death and demand truth and justice by exposing mass graves; they practice a religion where ancient gods reappear as Christian saints; and they daily suffer the racism, exploitation and repression of the descendants of the western European conquerors. As Mayans defy their repressors in order to practice Mayan rites, interviews with General Benedito Lucas Garcia, former Commander-in-Chief of the Army, and the Bishop of Santa Cruz de Quiche reveal the harsh repercussions of Columbus' voyage which are still felt by Mayans today.

General

Los Civilizados: Alemanes en Guatemala (1998)
Por Uli Stelzner y Thomas Walther, 130 min.
En Guatemala existe desde hace más de un siglo una pequeña pero muy influyente colonia alemana. Su prosperidad empieza con el Boom del café en los años 1870, y continua en forma casi ininterrumpida hasta el presente. Convencidos de pertenecer a una cultura superior, tratan de imponer de una forma colonizadora a Guatemala su modelo de civilización. Los viejos barones de café muestran fotos descoloridas, y a partir de su historia se constituye la historia oficial: la historia de la colonización. Pero la mirada se desplaza desde el patrón hacia el trasfondo, hacia el otro, hacia el indígena quien soporta las palmaditas. La película retrata varias generaciones de familias. Cuenta sin comentarios posiciones del Siglo XX, posiciones que a traves del tiempo han sido relativizadas, más no así modificadas. Una película que recorre cuestiones de poder, identidad y civilización.

The invisible genocide of women in Guatemala (2011)
This film addresses the use of rape of women in the context of the U.S.-backed genocide in Guatemala against Mayan peoples. More than 100,000 women were raped in the 36 years of the Guatemalan genocides in which at least 200,000 people were killed and over 50,000 disappeared. In this video, photojournalists Ofelia de Pablo and Javier Zurita interview survivors and document the ongoing forensic and legal investigation that has been used in the genocide trial against former generals Ríos Montt and Rodriguez Sanchez.

No More Evictions! The Struggle for Indigenous Land in Post-War Guatemala (2014)
In rural Guatemala, a highly unequal land ownership structure inherited from centuries of colonialism and decades of dictatorship is now being compounded by a corporate land grab. "No More Evictions!" takes us to the Polochich valley in eastern Guatemala where indigenous Q’eqchi’ communities who have begun to reclaim their ancestral lands must now face the double threat of agribusiness and mining. Though the Guatemalan civil war (1960-1996) is formally over, both local and foreign corporations, including Canadian mining companies (Skye Resources & Hudbay Minerals) unleashed violence upon indigenous campesinos with impunity, giving many Q’eqchi’; the distinct impression that the war isn’t really over.
