Utah’s quest for statehood lasted longer, involved more political intrigue, and garnered more national attention than any other US territory. While Utahns—especially the Mormon population—hoped statehood would grant them increased political autonomy, the several decades of refusal by LDS Church leadership to denounce polygamy stalled even the most carefully executed political schemes.

Even without the albatross of polygamy, the territory presented a unique set of challenges. Lingering distrust toward the federal government blurred the lines separating church and state. LDS leaders considered themselves anointed by God to lead the government. Officials sent from Washington to dilute LDS control found themselves in hostile, dangerous terrain.

Aware of the complexity of this fifty-year struggle, historian Edward Leo Lyman carefully traces the key figures, events, and cultural shifts leading to Utah’s admission to the Union. Utilizing an abundance of careful research, Finally Statehood! is a definitive attempt to understand the state’s history on both a local and national level, with each political roadblock, religious conflict, and earnest attempt at compromise meticulously examined under the vantage of time.

Edward Leo Lyman was a professor of history at Dixie State University in St. George, Utah, and formerly at California Polytechnic University and California State University San Bernardino. He is the author of The Arduous Journey: Salt Lake to Los Angeles; A History of Millard County, Utah; Political Deliverance: The Mormon Quest for Utah Statehood; and San Bernardino: The Rise and Fall of a California Community. He has had articles published in Arizona and the West, Brigham Young University Studies, California History, Dialogue: A Journal of Mormon Thought, Idaho Yesterdays, Southern California Quarterly, and the Utah Historical Quarterly.
Dayna Patterson has produced a book obsessed with motherhood and daughterhood, ancestry, and transition—of home, family, faith, and the narratives woven to uphold the Self. In her debut collection of poetry and lyric essay, Patterson grapples with a patriarchal and polygamous heritage. After learning about her mother’s bisexuality, Patterson befriends doubt while simultaneously feeling the urge to unearth a feminist theology, one that envisions God the Mother taking pride in her place at the banquet table.

Joseph Smith’s Death Mask

Lacking time travel, this pale imprint is perhaps as close as I can get to a ghost, the slope of nose prominent, chin cleft, broad forehead, and those sensuous lips like a woman’s. They almost-smile, serene, withhold a trove that slant rhymes eternity

Dayna Patterson is the author of three chapbooks, most recently Titania in Yellow. Her creative work has appeared in POETRY, Crab Orchard Review, Gingerbread House, and Whale Road Review. Her poem “Eloher” won the A Mother Here: Art and Poetry Contest in 2014. Her essays and poems have been nominated for the Pushcart and Best of the Net anthologies, and her piece “Contents” was a Best of the Net finalist in 2018. She is the founding editor-in-chief of Psaltery & Lyre and a coeditor of Dove Song: Heavenly Mother in Mormon Poetry.
Every great book has a great backstory. Here well-known historians describe their journeys of writing books that have influenced our understanding of the Mormon past, offering an unprecedented glimpse into why they wrote these important works. Writing Mormon History is a must-read for historians, students of history, scholars, and aspiring authors. The volume’s contributors are:

Polly Aird
Will Bagley
Todd Compton
Brian Hales
Melvin Johnson
William MacKinnon

D. Michael Quinn

The majority of the essays appear here for the first time.

Joseph W. Geisner is an independent Mormon researcher. He has published in the Journal of Mormon History, Sunstone, John Whitmer Historical Journal, Irreantum, and elsewhere. With Lavina Fielding Anderson, he created the chronologies for Confessions of a Mormon Historian: The Diaries of Leonard J. Arrington, 1971–1997. He is currently on the board of directors for the John Whitmer Historical Association. He and his wife live in northern California, where they provide residential services for people with developmental disabilities. The Geisners are the parents of three children.
These eighteen essays span more than thirty years of Lavina Fielding Anderson’s concerns about and reflections on issues of inclusiveness in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, including her own excommunication for “apostasy” in 1993, followed by twenty-five years of continued attendance at weekly LDS ward meetings. Written with a taste for irony and an eye for documentation, the essays are timeless snapshots of sometimes controversial issues, beginning with official resistance to professionally researched Mormon history in the 1980s. They underscore unanswered questions about gender equality and repeatedly call attention to areas in which the church does not live up to its better self. Compassionately and responsibly, it calls Anderson’s beloved religion back to its holiest nature.

Lavina Fielding Anderson, president of Editing, Inc., is a member of the Editorial Advisory Committee of Signature Books, former trustee of the Mormon Alliance and, with Janice M. Allred, co-editor of the Case Reports of the Mormon Alliance. She is former editor and/or copy editor of the Journal of Mormon History, the Association for Mormon Letters Annual, the Ensign, and Dialogue: A Journal of Mormon Thought. She is the editor of Lucy’s Book: A Critical Edition of Lucy Mack Smith’s Family Memoir (Signature Books, 2001) and is currently researching Lucy’s Life: A Biography of Lucy Mack Smith. She is the recipient of the Grace Fort Arrington Award for Distinguished Service (1991), the O. Marvin Lewis Award for Best Essay (1995), the Special Merit Award for Exceptional Service (1995), the Eve Award (1999), and co-recipient of the John Whitmer Historical Association award for Outstanding Bibliographical Essays (2005).
Examining Brigham Young’s legacy requires an understanding of his secular ambition and his religious zeal. A formidable leader in both his church and his country, Young’s abilities coincided with the colonizing zeitgeist of nineteenth-century America.

By 1877, some four hundred Mormon settlements spanned the western frontier from Salt Lake City to outposts in Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Wyoming, and California. As prophet of the LDS Church and governor of the proposed State of Deseret, Young led several campaigns for Utah statehood while defending polygamy and local sovereignty. His skillful and authoritarian leadership led historian Bernard de Voto to classify him as an “American genius,” responsible for turning Joseph Smith’s visions “into the seed of life.”

Young’s diaries and office journals reveal a man dedicated to his church, defensive of his spiritual and temporal claims to authority, and determined to create a modern Zion within the Utah desert. Editor George D. Smith’s careful organization and annotation of Young’s personal writings provide insights into the mind of Mormonism’s dynamic church leader and frontier statesman.

George D. Smith is a political science graduate of Stanford University, with an MBA from New York University. In 2016, he was awarded an honorary doctorate of humanities from the University of Utah. Throughout his career, Smith has served on the boards of several civic and philanthropic organizations, including the Commonwealth Club of California and National Public Radio. In addition to articles on Mormon history, he is the author of the award-winning Nauvoo Polygamy and editor of An Intimate Chronicle: The Journals of William Clayton, and Religion, Feminism, and Freedom of Conscience.
The Ancient Order of Things
Essays on the Mormon Temple
edited by Christian Larsen

EXCERPT
“This volume seeks to capture the power of the Mormon temple from a historical perspective, both in the context of its time and in the lives of those who worshipped there. The authors explore aspects of the temple and its history that span time and tradition. While this volume makes no attempt to be all-inclusive, it does seek to gather together unique facets of temple scholarship in one place. … Each author explores her or his topic while remaining mindful of the sensitive nature of the temple for believers. Both scholars and observers—whatever their beliefs—will find, I believe, much of interest in this collection.”

Faith and Intellect
The Lives and Contributions of Latter-day Saint Thinkers
Leonard J. Arrington
Foreword by Philip L. Barlow

EXCERPT
“These essays are written in the historical tradition of exemplary lives. I try to give a vision of greatness in both intellect and faith among selected LDS leaders. The men and women described are human beings, with observable imperfections, but they exhibited, I believe, intellectual vitality, spiritual power, and moral courage, and appealed to ‘the better angels of our nature.’ God’s spirit shone through their writings and actions.”

Utah Politics
The Elephant in the Room
Rod Decker

EXCERPT
“I argue that a key to understanding Utah politics is resistance offered by the Latter-day Saint Church and its members to American social changes. Latter-day Saints choose differently from most Americans in matters of morals, sex, and families. They refuse the sexual revolution that swept not only the United States but other developed countries generally after World War II, as people married less, had more sex and more babies outside of marriage. Old laws designed to promote traditional families by forbidding abortion, pornography, and gay sex, among other things, were struck down by federal courts. Traditional families consisting of a married man and woman and their children declined. In opposition to these trends, Latter-day Saint leaders made traditional families and the old morality central to their preaching.”

River Fever
Adventures on the Mississippi, 1969–1972
Will Bagley

EXCERPT
“Below St. Louis the liberated river deepened, narrowed, and picked up speed. As it surged southward, it became less populated and poorer. The towns were fewer, funkier, and farther apart; we saw river walls and dying main streets and heard soft rural Missouri accents. At night we sought protection behind towheads or in chutes, a foot above the rushing water, dreaming about rivers only to wake up and drift all day down the immense and mysterious river. We drew closer to the weather and nature and ourselves every day. We saw an America we hadn’t known existed.”

Confidence amid Change
edited by Harvard S. Heath

EXCERPT

“I then said that the First Presidency further recommend that when any member of the General Authorities desires to write a book, that the Brethren of the Twelve or the First Presidency be consulted regarding it. While the author need not get the approval of these Brethren, they should know before it is published that a member of the General Authorities wants to publish a book. I said it may seem all right for the writer of the book to say, ‘I only am responsible for it,’ but I said ‘you cannot separate your position from your individuality, and we should like the authors to present their books to the Twelve or a Committee appointed.’ I asked the Brethren of the Twelve to convey this information to the other General Authorities. On motion, this became the consensus of the Council.”

An Unarmed Woman
John Bennion

EXCERPT

“When I reached the first huge room in the store, I saw Brother Apollo standing on the other side of the glass case, a candle set in front of him. He glared at the candle, shaking his head and moaning. ‘We are ruined.’

‘Brother Apollo?’

He didn’t seem to hear. Light flickered across familiar objects, transforming them. The dress J. D. and I had chosen hung against one wall, looking like a spirit of a person, just rising toward heaven. A saddle hanging from its scrap cast a strange moving shadow.

‘What in the name of God?’ J. D.’s voice came from the next room. I hurried through the short hallway, following the light.

Sister Apollo stood over something on the floor. When she saw me, she turned, her arms spread out. ‘You don’t want to come in here.’”
