The Rev. Kathryn Mary (Kammy) Young Receives Local Hero Award

The Rev. Kathryn M. (Kammy) Young
Director of Contextual Education and Lecturer in Contextual Theology
The School of Theology at Sewanee

...was the headline of a 2011 Jacksonville, Florida, news release. Bank of America presented this philanthropic award to Rev. Young for her work in spearheading an initiative to increase access to quality early literacy centers for children of low-income families as part of the bank's Neighborhood Excellence Initiative program. Young led a group of 20 volunteers committed to addressing root causes leading to high school drop-out. Recognizing through research that the gaps that appear in school readiness in kindergarten tend to persist throughout the school years, and in Duval County, Florida, the racial gap in achievement scores of high school students was already evident when children began school. As a result of Young's leadership, 1,000 more children were enrolled in quality Voluntary Pre-K programs and 230 more received full-day vouchers

In Remembrance

Reading from The Book of Remembrance is a cherished tradition at the annual meetings of the Episcopal Church Women of the Diocese of North Carolina.

All ECW branches are invited to submit a list of members who have died since the previous Annual Meeting for inclusion in The Book of Remembrance.

If you have a name or names you want enrolled in the book, they must be postmarked by Thursday, October 20, 2016 in order to be read aloud at the Annual Meeting on November 4th, 2016.

A Book of Remembrance enrollment form is offered here. It can also be found in the Annual Meeting section of the ECW's web site (www.ecw-nc.org) and in section IV of the ECW Handbook. You may submit multiple names, but please put only one name on a form.

THIS YEAR'S HISTORY FOCUS

“Bridges of Hope: Churchwomen At Work in the Mill Mission Era”

Between 1895 and 1930 more than 30 “mill missions” were added to the list of Episcopal churches in North Carolina. An important feature of the successful missions was the presence of paid (not much!) women workers, from both North Carolina and beyond. Many were deployed and paid by the United Offering, as it was known until 1920. In addition to the official United Offering Workers, others were recruited and paid by the local diocese or sponsoring parish. These workers identified closely with this era’s settlement work movement which sought to improve all aspects of life among newly displaced groups: education, recreation, hygiene, personal development, and religious training. Their work was complimented by the dedicated spiritual, physical and financial support offered by many Woman’s Auxiliary groups throughout the state.

In addition to a short introduction by Lynn Hoke, ECW Archivist/Historian, we will also have an exhibit documenting the history of several mill missions. And – you will hardly be able to miss seeing a multitude of table cards, as seen below, each with a short description of how a different woman or group was engaged in “bridge building” during this era of dislocation, disorientation, and sometimes despair.

“A Great Deal of Social Service Work is Done”

At All Saints’ Church in Roanoke Rapids the women are organized into four circles of the Woman’s Auxiliary and a branch of the Ladies’ Guild. The first circle, the regular parish auxiliary, meets every week. The first week in the month is given over to study. A great deal of social service work is done and great enthusiasm is shown in the study classes. Weekly study classes are held in Lent. The second circle is composed of young business women, who are busy in the banks and mill offices all day and do their Church work at night. They do a good work in supplying the clothing for an orphan at the Thompson Orphanage. Their parish worker reads The Spirit of Missions at every meeting. The two circles of the women who work in the cotton mills are purely missionary in character.

The Rev. Lewis N. Taylor, “A busy Parish Among the Cotton Mills of the South” Spirit of Missions, March 1925, p. 171

Pledging TO Make It All Possible

The constitution and by-laws of the ECW of North Carolina state, “To have voting privileges (at the Annual Meeting) a Branch must have paid a pledge to the Diocesan Church Women’s budget for the current year.” These funds help to carry out the work of women’s ministries throughout the Anglican Communion, our country, our province and our diocese.

While our yearly gathering is open to all, those branches current with their pledge are entitled to send up to five voting delegates to Annual Meeting. Anyone belonging to a church that does not have an ECW branch and who would like to participate in the Annual Meeting as a voting member can pay $10.00 in the name of their church and be entitled to voting delegate status.

The diocesan ECW treasurer, Mary Hawkins, has mailed statements to current pledging branches. If you didn’t receive your statement or have questions about it, contact Mary Hawkins at treasurer@ecw-nc.org or (919) 682-4647.

enabling them to afford the quality programs offered through the state. In her acceptance remarks, Young quoted a portion of Martin Luther King, Jr.’s 1967 speech, “Where Do We Go From Here?” Young said that while she is committed to doing the just and right thing for children in the community “...it took 1,200 people coming together across boundaries that often divide us to put power behind our love and make those changes for their well being... and we’ve got to keep doing that... to make even more far-reaching changes in our public education system, restorative justice programs, homelessness prevention, and unemployment issues.”

At the time, Rev. Young was Associate Rector for Spirituality & Justice, Christ Episcopal Church, Ponte Vedra Beach, Florida, and Chairperson of the Interfaith Coalition for Action, Reconciliation & Empowerment, Jacksonville, Florida, Education Committee.

At present, Rev. Young is the director of contextual education and lecturer in contextual theology for the School of Theology at Sewanee, The University of the South. Young brings 24 years experience as an Episcopal priest, with broad experience in both large and small church ministry. She has been a proactive leader for her diocese and congregations in implementing creative ministry development, and innovative programs and technology to promote increasingly faithful mission and ministry.

When asked about her new position Young said, “This position will be a new challenge and a great step toward fulfilling my goal to help shape the direction of Episcopal Church leadership, mission, and ministry for the next generation. I will draw on my strengths of working with people from all walks of life and celebrating the wonderful diversity of creation as a God-given gift for enriching our lives and deepening our faith and love.” In explaining what contextual education meant to her Young said it is all about relationship. It is cultivating the hope and courage and wisdom to discover together the next steps in responding to God’s transforming work in this unique place, with these precious people, at this particular time.

Rev. Young is a proud mother of two grown children, George and Lucy. She is married to the Rt. Rev. George Dibrell Young, III, Bishop of the Diocese of East Tennessee.
