

MUSIC WORKERS ALLIANCE

June 2nd, 2020

The Honorable
Thom Tillis
Chairman
Senate Subcommittee on Intellectual Property

The Honorable
Chris Coons
Ranking Member
Senate Subcommittee on Intellectual Property

To the attention of:
The Subcommittee on Intellectual Property of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary

We'd like to submit the enclosed material for the record of the June 2nd, 2020 subcommittee hearing: "Is the DMCA's Notice-and-Takedown System Working in the 21st Century?"

This report relates to the Music Workers Alliance's Economic Justice in the Digital Domain (EJDD) petition, launched on April 10th, 2020. With over 5,000 signatures, this petition represents the largest ever unified expression of musical artists across genres demanding economic justice in the digital domain.

The EJDD petition calls on YouTube, Google and Facebook to pay 1% of their ad revenue to a relief fund for the "content creators"—whose unpaid labor generates much of their wealth—for the duration of the Covid-19 shutdown of live performance. Furthermore, recorded work is not a viable income alternative due to the mass copyright infringement enabled by section 512, so the petition calls for these corporations to put an end to infringement by adopting Standard Technical Measures.

The failure to adopt STMs has produced an environment overly reliant on Notice & Takedown. Notice and Takedown only gets triggered once harm has already occurred. We should improve N&T but simultaneously implement technologies that address the broader context and reduce reliance on what was supposed to be just one part of the broader response to online infringement.

Our petition coincides with the long-awaited release of the US Copyright Office report on section 512. MWA calls on Congress to act on the report findings and provide USCO with regulatory authority to oversee the development of STMs.

With live performance shut down, music workers' ongoing call to address online infringement by adopting STMs carries new urgency.

Thank you,

Olympia Kazi and Marc Ribot

Economic Justice in the Digital Domain (EJDD) Petition

A CALL BY MUSICAL ARTISTS FOR BASIC FAIRNESS IN THE DIGITAL MARKETPLACE

TO: SUSAN WOJCICKI, CEO, YOUTUBE; SUNDAR PICHAI, CEO, GOOGLE; MARK ZUCKERBERG, CEO, FACEBOOK

The Covid-19 pandemic has exposed many weaknesses in our social safety net and labor laws. The predicament of musical artists — the original gig workers — is particularly poignant. With live performance shut down, the vast majority of the music sector has lost the economic means for basic survival. Most, if not all, of the income forfeited is never coming back. Not long ago, many musicians, DJs, and sound performers could have made it through this period by relying on the sales of recorded music. Today, online corporations, YouTube above all, have distorted that market by enabling near-limitless unauthorized distribution of recordings without the artists' consent or compensation, while Google and Facebook profit from linking to such content.

Nearly half of music listened to online is heard on YouTube, where third-party users can illegally upload copyrighted material with near impunity.

At the same time YouTube pockets ad revenue on this infringing content without any repercussion, because the Digital Millennium Copyright Act establishes “safe harbors” protecting corporations from lawsuits in the case of illegal activity by third-party users of their platforms. Ad revenue based on illegal uploads of musical artists' content will continue through this extended period in which live music is entirely shut down.

In this moment of crisis, musical artists' ongoing call for basic fairness in the digital marketplace takes on a new urgency.

In the name of economic justice for the creators of recorded musical products, we make the following demands:

1. Immediate Disaster Relief Fund for Music Workers:

We call on all major corporations profiting from the distribution of music to contribute 1% of their ad revenue during each month that live performance remains shut down into an emergency fund to be administered by artist relief organizations with long-track records of assistance to performing artist communities, such as MusicCares, The Actors Fund, Sweet Relief, and The Jazz Foundation. We applaud both Sony and Netflix for already having donated $100 million each towards Covid-19 relief efforts.

2. Reduce Copyright Infringement by Establishing “Standard Technical Measures”:

We call on Google, YouTube, Facebook, and other major online corporations, in coordination with a wide net of music industry organizations — including representatives of independent labels and content creators — to immediately establish and empower a working group tasked with examining steps, including standard technical measures, that could address infringement in order to create a more sustainable online music ecosystem that sustains culturally diverse production and promotes economic development and small and medium-size enterprises.

Many people across the world are turning to music to get through these unprecedented times. If we want the people who create that music to survive in this pandemic and the economic fallout that will follow, we need to fix an untenable situation: music workers need economic justice in the digital domain now.

Statements by Prominent Musical Artists in Response to EJDD Campaign

“With so much financial destabilisation for musicians it is more important than ever for digital profit sharing to be equitable and fair.” Beth Orton

“Online streaming and illegal uploading of recordings has decimated our professional income. This needs to change.” Charles Lloyd

“YouTube is one of the worst things that has happened to musicians!” Ahmad Jamal

“The musicians are the originators of the art, and always the last to get paid. We are told "play for free, for the exposure". People die from exposure. Auto mechanics, plumbers and electricians don't work for free. Pay the musicians.” David Lynch

“...Who would even look at digital platforms without our content which at this point is essentially stolen by multi-billion dollar tech companies? Pay people! Pay the musicians, the artists, the writers. Also pay the delivery guys, the rideshare drivers and everyone else who gets screwed in the digital economy and pay them right!” Sally Timms, Mekons

“I think it's atrocious that the owners of YouTube have gained billions in wealth since COVID while most musicians have lost virtually all of their performing income. COVID has illuminated just how damaging YouTube's abuse of the safe harbor is. YouTube stole one half of our livelihood, and COVID stole the other. How ironic that YouTube and Google have capitalized on both.” Maria Schneider

“This crisis continues to underscore the immense creativity of today's musicians, which is simply appropriated by tech platforms for their own profit. While musicians continue to imagine a cultural response to our current climate their work is taken without payment. We need a new model of artist pay that matches the realities of the way artists create today. If tech companies want the content that drives mass viewership to their platforms they need to pay for it.” Austin Wulliman, JACK Quartet

“All my work is shut down through June, with more cancellations expected. If we don't deal—NOW—with the mass online infringement that has destroyed our ability to make money from recording, then soon WE'RE going to be shut down.” Marc Ribot

EJDD Campaign Information and Prominent Signatories

On May 31st, 2020 the Economic Justice in the Digital Domain petition had 5,042 signatories, it was launched on April 10th, 2020 and participants were asked to indicate whether they were (1) musical artists whose work has been infringed online; (2) musical artists whose work has not been infringed online; (3) representatives/owners of a label that has had its music infringed online; (4) other music industry persons who supports these demands; or (5) concerned music fans and allies of musical artists. More than half of the signatories identified as musical artists; 1,438 of them claimed infringement. Another 226 identified as owners/representatives of labels claiming infringement on online platforms.

Prominent signatories include Bela Fleck, Bill Frisell, David Lynch, Dee Dee Bridgewater, Elvis Costello, Esperanza Spalding, John Zorn, Kronos Quartet, Laurie Anderson, Nora Jones, Rhiannon Giddens, Roger Daltrey, Rosanne Cash, and Wayne Shorter.

Background Data Research

QUICK NUMBERS ABOUT THE ARTS/MUSIC INDUSTRY

The value of arts and cultural production in America is significant. In 2015 it was $763.6 billion, amounting to 4.2% of gross domestic product, contributing more to the national economy than construction, mining, utilities, insurance, and accommodation and food services industries. In 2015, 66% the country's adult population attended a live visual or performing arts activity.

Music, a subset of the larger arts and cultural production, is a $43 billion industry, and live performance accounts for about half of it.

There are hundreds of thousands of musicians in the USA. In places like New York City and Los Angeles, artists (a larger group that includes musicians) make up a significant part of the workforce — at least 4% to 8%.

COVID-19 IMPACT ON THE MUSIC INDUSTRY AND RELIEF RESPONSE

The music industry has been devastated. Since mid March, all live performance in the US has come to a standstill. Experts are saying that this might last through fall 2021.

“Larger gatherings — conferences, concerts, sporting events — when people say they’re going to reschedule this conference or graduation event for October 2020, I have no idea how they think that’s a plausible possibility. I think those things will be the last to return. Realistically we’re talking fall 2021 at the earliest.”

95% of artists have experienced income loss as a result of COVID-19, with an average decline in estimated income for the year amounting to $27,000.

The aid offered by the US federal government for artists is inadequate so far. $300 million in aid to arts organizations in the CARES ACT is less than 7% of the demonstrated short-term need documented by Americans for the Arts that amounts to $4.5 billion.

Germany is allocating 180X MORE than the US so far for artists, freelancers, and others in the same situation (50 billion Euros ≈ 54 billion Dollars).

“Our democratic society needs its unique and diverse cultural and media landscape in this historical situation, which was unimaginable until recently. The creative courage of creative people can help to overcome the crisis. We should seize every opportunity to create good things for the future. That is why the following applies: artists are not only indispensable, but also vital, especially now.”

QUICK NUMBERS ABOUT MUSIC, STREAMING, AND SOCIAL NETWORKS

Only 36% of music consumers worldwide attend concerts, gigs, or festivals. Most (86%) music consumers listen through on-demand streaming (audio and video).

Half of the time spent listening to on-demand music happens on YouTube.

Globally, social networks are used to share and talk about music.

23% of Instagram users talk about music on the service;

30% of Facebook users share links to music using the Facebook app;

35% of WhatsApp users share links to music using the app

VALUE AND COMPENSATION

As musician Paul McCartney mentions in a letter of support for the Copyright Directive, there is a “value gap” in which media platform companies are able to profit from copyrighted material without adequately compensating the artist.

“The value gap is that gulf between the value these platforms derive from music and the value they pay creators.”

— Sir Paul McCartney

PUBLIC SENTIMENT AND GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO INTERNET PLATFORMS

77% of Americans say major internet and technology companies like Facebook, Google, Amazon and Apple have too much power. 59% of Americans believe elected officials and political candidates are paying “too little” attention to issues dealing with technology and technology companies.

DMCA AND STANDARD TECHNICAL MEASURES

The ultimate burden of policing copyright infringement on major platforms such as YouTube falls on the artist and the copyright owner, as set out by the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA)

“[t]he DMCA makes it my responsibility to police the entire Internet on a daily basis. As fast as I take my music down, it reappears again on the same site—an endless whack-a-mole game.”

— Maria Schneider

Source: <https://www.regulations.gov/document?D=COLC-2015-0013-89806>

“if our music was taken down, it would almost immediately return on another site or even the same site. We were spending more and more resources on the take down notices, and we were consistently getting less and less in return. Eventually, we decided to stop sending the notices altogether. It was simply an exercise of throwing good money after bad. So time and again, we released product realizing more and more that we had no real way to stop its unauthorized use and the erosion of its commercial viability.”

— Eric Hilton, Thievery Corporation

Source: <https://www.regulations.gov/document?D=COLC-2015-0013-89806>

“Why does Google make it so damn difficult to send a DMCA notice? Google has designed cutting edge online tech, but its DMCA procedures are something out of the Dark Ages. That’s no accident.”

— Ellen Seidler, filmmaker

Source: <https://www.regulations.gov/document?D=COLC-2015-0013-89806>

STMs are defined as “technical measures that are used by copyright owners to identify or protect copyrighted works and have been developed pursuant to a broad consensus of copyright owners and service providers (...) This provision is arguably one of the most important parts of the DMCA, but, to date, it has had zero impact. The reason? Online corporations reaping ad based and data mining profits have failed to participate in a process to form consensus on measures that should qualify as STMs.

https://copyrightalliance.org/ca_post/twenty-years-dmca-notice-and-takedown/

With our petition for Economic Justice in the Digital Domain, the Music Workers Alliance calls on all stakeholders to come together to draft these urgently needed protections, as advocated in the Digital Millennium Copyright Act over 20 years ago. Should the stalling continue, we will call for congressional oversight to ensure respect for artists’ rights.

The DMCA was written in 1998, when AOL was still the largest corporation online and neither YouTube nor Facebook existed. In addition to Standard Technical Measures, other parts of the law — for example the antiquated and ineffective Notice-and-Takedown process — need to be reformed. Most of the needed reforms are contained in the “Music Community Response to the U.S. Copyright Office Inquiry on Section 512 of the DMCA”. In addition to being supported by Major Labels (RIAA), Indie Labels (A2IM), and publishers (NYMPA), it is supported by ASCAP, BMI, SESAC, the AFM, SAG-AFTRA, and nearly every major other membership-based organization in music. We support it too and look forward to achieving the goal of economic justice for indie musicians and DJs in the digital domain.

About the Music Workers Alliance

Music Workers Alliance is an organization of, by, and for independent musicians and DJs. Our mission is to further Musician/DJ empowerment through collective economic and political action.

We came together because we are fed up with unfair treatment and lack of benefits, contracts, and representation. We're launching this alliance to improve our working conditions and amplify our voices in the political and economic decisions that affect our lives. We call on all independent musicians and DJs to organize, speak up and take action.

We're close allies of the NYC Artist Coalition, the action group that advocates for the safety and preservation of grassroots cultural spaces. MWA's members work in many genres — Jazz, Rock, Funk, Hip Hop, Dance, etc. Our musician/DJ activists are affiliated with Arts for Art, Building Beats, Discwoman, Indie Musicians Caucus and the Jazz Committee of Local 802 AFM, MOMENT NYC, Musicians for Musicians, Sound Mind Collective, Underground Producers Alliance, and many other organizations.

In the past year our group has been active. We met with City reps and asked for a Music Census. We went to Albany and educated decision makers about the unintended consequences of gig-worker legislation. At the outbreak of Covid-19 we asked for much needed government relief for ALL gig economy workers and we are now calling for economic justice for content creators in the digital marketplace.
