Take Action and Learn: Food Justice and Insecurity Resource List

The Great Big Jewish Food Fest + The Marlene Meyerson JCC Manhattan

Food justice and insecurity are always important issues, but during the Covid-19 pandemic, the need to support these issues is more amplified than ever. If you're looking to learn more about food justice, its connection to Judaism, and ways to take action and give back, take a look at our resource list.

Learn:

• A guide to learning about food justice, security and sovereignty
• How Covid-19 is impacting food pantries in NYC
• Children, hunger, and Covid-19

Connect:

• Volunteer and give back with Met Council, which runs the largest Kosher food pantry system in the United States
• Get involved with MAZON, a Jewish organization working to advocate on behalf of those struggling with hunger

• Check out Masabia, a certified kosher soup kitchen network and food pantry in Brooklyn and Queens, New York City.
