The university profiled here ranks among the United States’ most respected business schools and has received prestigious awards and recognitions for quality and scope of its innovative management curriculum. The program’s undergraduate management students receive in-depth support and resources from the school’s Career Center, including the opportunity to identify their own strengths, skills, interests, and values. They also explore jobs, organizations, and industries through informational interviews and networking activities.

A senior career coach now serving as Interim Associate Director of Student Services noted, “The Career Decision Profile gives us the opportunity to show students the value of knowing their own strengths, identifying barriers that may hold them back, and reflecting about their career choices. The assessment is not just an “add-on” for our course…it’s a core component of helping students learn to make key decisions and evaluate their own levels of confidence. Equally important, the results of the assessment have given us, as faculty members and advisors, visibility into the individual challenges students face, so we can help students individually as needed.”

The university profiled here ranks among the United States’ most respected business schools and has received prestigious awards and recognitions for quality and scope of its innovative management curriculum. The program’s undergraduate management students receive in-depth support and resources from the school’s Career Center, including the opportunity to identify their own strengths, skills, interests, and values. They also explore jobs, organizations, and industries through informational interviews and networking activities.

A senior career coach now serving as Interim Associate Director of Student Services noted, “The Career Decision Profile gives us the opportunity to show students the value of knowing their own strengths, identifying barriers that may hold them back, and reflecting about their career choices. The assessment is not just an “add-on” for our course…it’s a core component of helping students learn to make key decisions and evaluate their own levels of confidence. Equally important, the results of the assessment have given us, as faculty members and advisors, visibility into the individual challenges students face, so we can help students individually as needed.”

About Career Key

The Career Decision Platform from Career Key helps faculty and advisors get to know their students better, faster so they help students make thoughtful, confident career and education decisions. Career Key offers the only online career decision readiness assessment, the Career Decision Profile®. The platform’s combination of research-based inventories, the Career Decision Profile and Career Key Discovery, a unique Holland-based assessment, provide all the diagnostic data and insights to effectively target and evaluate student advising and success interventions.

For more than 20 years, secondary schools and higher education institutions including Kansas State University, University of Minnesota, University of Alabama and Union County College have trusted Career Key to enhance their academic advising, career services, First-Year Experience, TRIO and Gear Up programs.