SSILA Travel Award

The SSILA Travel Committee has awarded a small stipend to Marcia Damaso Vieira (Sao Paulo, Brazil) to partially reimburse her travel expenses to the Summer Meeting, where she gave a paper on “Mbya Guarani Long-distance Anaphora.”

Some money remains in the Travel Award fund, and the SSILA Travel Committee welcomes inquiries from members (especially those residing outside the US and Canada) who are in need of support for travel to this winter’s Annual Meeting. The Committee will review all applications with care. Contact:

Other members of the Committee are Kathryn Josserand and Spike Gildea.
1997 donations specially earmarked for the Travel Award fund have so far totalled approximately $250. Although this amount is supplemented by an appropriation from the Society’s general fund, contributions that are specifically designated for the Travel Award are the best way of assuring that the Society can continue to help scholars in need of such support to be able to attend our meetings. Your generosity will be appreciated.

Further improvements at SSILA website

Our webmaster, Jon Cutting, has recently uploaded a “Book Announcements” database to our website. This database contains all of the book notices and short reviews that have appeared in the SSILA Newsletter since the October 1987 issue--about 650, in all. Visitors to the website may now search this entire file by author, title (or title words), or any other word or phrase they wish to search for.

Already available at the site is a similarly searchable “Journal Contents” database that contains all of the notices of articles that have appeared in the “In Current Periodicals” section of the Newsletter since October 1987.

(In case you’re wondering, the October 1987 issue was the first that was prepared in the present computer format, so this is as far back as we can easily construct a database. If material in earlier issues is to be included it will have to be keyed in by hand, or put through a scanner and checked carefully for accuracy. -- Any volunteers?)

55.3 CORRESPONDENCE

Instrumentals

>From (palancar@socrates.berkeley.edu) 15 Sept 1997:

My name is Enrique Palancar. I am a graduate student from Universidad Complutense of Madrid, Spain, and visiting at UC Berkeley until November. I am working with typology, and am writing my dissertation on the extensional semantics that instrumental markers and constructions display cross-linguistically. My goal is to account in cognitive terms for this grammatical state of affairs.

During my stay at Berkeley I would like to get hold of material from Native American languages. I would be grateful for any information or references on instrumentals in American languages. I will post a summary to the SSILA Bulletin.

Language and violence

>From Leon Trahtemberg (ftrahte@amauta.rcp.net.pe) 19 Sept 1997:

My name is Prof. Leon Trahtemberg. I am a School principal in Lima, Peru, and I am also very active in the media dealing with topics in education (a weekly newspaper column and radio program). I am trying to get information about language and violence, in particular the idea that an increase in the knowledge of (an indigenous) language may help people to express their aggression and reduce active violence. I have heard that this kind of investigation already exists, and wonder if you know something about it.

>From Peter Bakker (linpb@hum.aau.dk) 3 Sept 1997:

A surprisingly large number of dictionaries of American Indian languages are available on-line on the web. There is a good web page for on-line dictionaries (maintained by Robert Beard, Bucknell University) with links to 13 American Indian dictionaries, as well as to a grammar or two. The address is: <www.bucknell.edu/~rbeard/diction.html>.

The links you will find there are to dictionaries of Arawakan/Taino, Guarani, Klamath, Lakhota, Maya, Mayanga, Miskito, Navajo, Ojibwe, Potawatomi, Quechua, Seneca, and Ulwa.[*FN]
Some are, of course, rather amateurish, while others are really very good. Check them out!
