About CIS

Our Mission

We strive to promote solidarity and cultural exchanges between Salvadoran locals and people from all over the world. Through running different programs, we support the surrounding communities and strengthen a culture of solidarity, which includes respect for diversity, equitable relations, and mutual support among human beings. Our aim is to motivate and mobilize the community members towards social and economic justice and human dignity.

CIS store works under the following fair trade principles:

- Artisan groups work interactively and cooperatively
- Artisans are paid up front for goods—nothing is left on consignment
- Artisans are paid a fair wage
- CIS provides/coordinates training workshops
- Products, whenever possible, are made of local materials.
- Artisans stay actively involved in their local community, sharing their values and benefits through various projects.

We sell fair-trade products that are hand-made by Salvadoran artisans who have been profoundly committed to the community development.
The CIS store works with people from communities all over El Salvador to promote economic empowerment and independance. Your purchase small or large makes a huge difference in allowing the artisans to provide food and education for their children, as well as to give back to their community. In addition, by buying our crafts you are supporting initiatives for an alternative economic model and positive social change for Salvadoran communities.
Jaragua

Location: Tonacatepeque, San Salvador

Taller Jaragua is one of a kind, and not just because of the unique natural creations they produce. As José Vasquez put it, “We are building a dream.” This dream includes having a way to feed their families without working in sweatshops, as well as using their workshop as a forum for education.

They have a Community Library and Formation Centre with projects including art therapy classes, a girl’s soccer team, an Andean music group, a Women’s group, and English and Math classes.

They work mainly with coconuts and seeds.

Layala

New to CIS in 2014, LAYALA makes jewelry made of recycled copper, seeds, stones and other natural products. The name is a tribute to Prudencia Ayala, writer and women’s rights activist.

LAYALA often uses natural product found in the forests surrounding Cinquera, a village repopulated after the war.

Jesus Obrero

Location: Soyapango, El Salvador

Started in February 1991—one year before the signing of the peace accords would bring an end to the decade-long Salvadoran Civil War—this workshop had already begun to establish themselves and rebuild their community after living and fighting through war for over ten years. Each piece is a collaborative work—each artist working with their strength—a process that allows the artisans to work from their homes, taking care of their families.

Originally founded in La Palma, the style of painting that characterizes their products is that of the folk art of the region, started by the art-naïf master Fernando Llort in the tumultuous years before the war officially began.

They work with wood items and can customize almost anything.
Mujeres Tinecas

Location: San Martin, San Salvador

This group began in 1997 when a group of women in an impoverished community decided they needed to do something to provide a better quality of life for themselves and their families. Their name comes from the city they reside in. They make a variety of products, most notably their work with paper on their quilled cards and jewelry made out of recycled magazines.

Vivaz

Location: San Luis Los Ranchos, Comasagua

Formed by a group of driven women who wanted to change their lives and the lives of those within their community, Vivaz is a women’s cooperative responsible for producing personalized, quality uniforms and indigo fashion products. Responding to women’s disenfranchisement and their limited opportunities to generate independent, sustainable, financial income, forming this cooperative allowed these women to gain financial independence and a sense of self worth. The “añil” or indigo dye they use is indigenous to the region, used by the ancient Mayas, and further burgeoned into a major export under Spanish colonialism, before being displaced by artificial dyes.

La Confecciones La Colorada

Location: La Isla Tasajera, La Paz

Trained in creating stylish bags using the brightly coloured, traditional, hand-woven cloth from San Sebastian, El Salvador (a city known for its hand-weaving since at least the late 19th century), this industrious group of women from the isolated Tasajera Island have made strides in creating opportunities for themselves, and training in sewing. Having pulled themselves out of financial dependence and/or sweat shop labour, this cooperative provides a sense of community amongst the women, to help each other through trying times, while being their own boss. Currently undergoing the accreditation process to become a legally recognized Salvadoran cooperative, they hope to secure government contracts for school uniforms, as a great source of stable income.
