Get on Board for More Housing Choice Around New London Station

Equitable transit- oriented communities are mixed-use neighborhoods with an array of housing options (including affordable homes), near train stations or CTfastrak stations.

Who Benefits from Equitable Transit- Oriented Communities?

WORKERS & EMPLOYERS:
- Reduce commute times and transportation costs by using transit instead of cars
- Have more reliable schedules
- Get more customers through foot traffic from new residents

HOME-SEEKERS:
- Have more choices of where to live
- Can live closer to work, shops, and restaurants
- Walk and exercise more, improving overall health

TOWNS AS A WHOLE:
- Expand the grand list and increase tax revenues
- Keep essential workers close by
- Reduce per-unit infrastructure expenses because units are near existing infrastructure

New London’s Current Zoning Landscape

New London’s zoning code already allows 4+ family housing around its train stations. In fact, the city leads amongst neighboring towns in allowing multi-family housing as of right.

However, New London zoning officials can create even more opportunities for multi-family housing near transit. By modernizing the city’s zoning code and removing unnecessary mandates like minimum parking mandates, New London can become an even better model for transit- oriented development across the state.

Curious about parking? Eliminating minimum parking mandates would:
- Reduce our dependency on single occupancy vehicles
- Reduce housing costs and allow over 100,000 housing units to be built citywide
- Decrease our carbon footprint and traffic congestion

Convinced change is needed? Use our Advocates’ Playbook!

Let’s show elected officials that the time for equitable transit- oriented communities has come. Check out our Playbook, online at www.desegregatect.org/be-the-change!

It’s up to you to ensure that your town benefits from this opportunity: a common- sense housing solution that helps everyone.

Find out more at: www.desegregatect.org/toc