Position Title: Farm Manager

Our Vision:
We envision an America where the institutional injustices concerning Land, Race, and Money, which are rooted in a history of extraction and exploitation, both spiritually and materially transform toward justice, equity, and repair. It will require the redistribution of resources, the equal sharing of knowledge and information, cross-racial and personal healing based on a worldview of interdependence, and the active acknowledgment of the Earth and soil upon which all life depends as sacred.

Our transformative vision is a regenerative society made whole and living in balance.

Our Mission:
Our mission is to seed rural justice and end rural racism through new systems that serve Black agricultural communities.

The Project:
The support we provide for Black farming communities is based on Afro-Indigenous regenerative farming practices in the growing of specialty rice in the System of Rice Intensification (SRI) method, (dry land, raised bed), as we also learn from them. We test and trial many varieties of rice, cover crops, field peas, beans, sesame, moringa, etc, primarily foods from the African diasporic foodways. We experiment with rotation crops, cover crops, regenerative agriculture principles and other methods of sustainable farming to share with the farmers in our cohort. We also focus on cooperative economics via a farmer-governed rice mill operated by a cooperative of Black farmers. Through an act of reparations, Jubilee Justice has been given the deed to the property including the building that is the home of the rice mill. Our flagship Black farmer rice project supports Black farmers throughout the southeastern U.S.

Jubilee Justice is currently leasing land on the Inglewood Farm in Alexandria, LA. This location serves as our home base, for testing, trial experimentation, and production. The work we do in Louisiana is experimental, innovative and institution building for Black farming communities. The growing of SRI rice has not been grown to this scale in the Southeastern U.S.A. before now.
