When everything's closed, watch Brooklyn-themed films

The Brooklyn Paper has produced a list of locally-themed films and TV shows to watch while almost everything else is forbidden. One is “High Maintenance,” which follows a bicycle-riding weed dealer throughout his day. Another is “High Fidelity,” a film starring Zoe Kravitz as a lovesick record store owner in Crown Heights. “All Hail Beth” from Downtown arts organization BRIC focuses on a Brooklynite who wakes up one day as the Babylonian goddess Ishtar. And “She’s Gotta Have It” follows Fort Greene artist Nola Darling as she struggles to choose between her three lovers.
