PRESIDENTS MESSAGE
SPRING 2018
At last spring has arrived and the trustees and officers of Lansingburgh Historical Society have just about finalized the event schedule for the season. We hope you will partake of at least some of the events and enjoy the changes at Melville House as they unfold.

As always, we welcome your input for events or suggestions. Our trustee meetings are the 3rd Wednesday of the month from March through November starting at 7PM at Melville House. We invite any member to come to any of these and just listen or offer any ideas or suggestions. Our open house events are generally the 2nd Saturday of every month March through November from 10-2 unless otherwise noted. Come explore the house and the wonders of the attic museum and learn some interesting facts about the Burgh and the Melvilles.

This season marks our annual membership drive. Please consider upgrading your membership. It sometimes feels as though it takes more than a village to preserve this 1786 house and we most certainly need your support. Find interesting facts about the Burgh on our website or check for events on our Facebook page.

Enjoy the crocus, daffodils and tulips which are on their way.

John Ward

An “L.” Road.
A movement was Monday set on foot working to the construction of an elevated road between Troy and Lansingburgh. The road is to be surveyed through the alley between John and Congress streets [Fourth Avenue and Third Avenue] in the ’Burgh, and several gentlemen deep in railroad schemes are said to have interested themselves in the project.

HEN Peter the Headstrong, of stubbornest will,
Was sent out from Holland, commissioned to fill
In New Netherland province a Governor's chair,
The people all knew by his obstinate air,
By the stamp of his foot and the wag of his head,
That he meant to be minded in all that he said;
And that naught but the soberest, solemnest fun
Would ever find vent from this son of a gun.
Descended from captains, he too in the fight
Had led on to glory, but never for flight,
And in reaching the former by acting, not talking.
Had lost an extremity needed in walking.
By closely observing, his people soon learned
To compass his movements, wherever he turned:
For the index that showed what old Peter intended
Was not in his face, but the limb that was mended.
So they watched with sly glances the silver-clad peg
That served as a mate to his natural leg,
And whenever, in argument, down came the stump,
And smote on the. floor with a resonant thump,
Not a tongue further wagged, but, with looks mild and meek,
The Dutchmen all listened for Peter to speak.
Still they liked the old hard-headed, obstinate soldier,
For than he none e'er lived who was kinder or bolder,
And during his reign all his subjects rich got,
While their faces grew broad and their bellies waxed fat.

One morn, at Manhattan, this Governor great
Sat weighing in Council grave matters of state,
When a stout-bodied Dutchman bounced into the room,
On whose face were depicted the terrors of doom.
"Your Highness," he said, having got back his breath,
"I have seen, God preserve us! a portent of death.
Just now in the river that flows by our town
Appeared a great monster, whose color was brown:
My glass, as I raised it, was wanting in strength
To disclose to my vision his terrible length:
And then through his nostrils the water he threw
So high, that it fell not in rain but in dew:
And so swift did he rush 'gainst the stream pouring down,
That he banked up the waters and flooded the town;
But he's gone up the river, and much do I fear
That tidings of woe we directly shall hear."

Then Peter called out, "Bring to me my state pipe
And a pound of tobacco; I don't like the stripe
Of the tale which you tell, and must presently think;
For if at such pranks we should knowingly wink,
The Yanghees from Hartford perhaps will come next
With a Puritan parson, all sermon and text,
Bringing onions and rum to Manhattan's fair isle,
And all sorts of notions our maids to beguile."

I cannot refrain from relating here, though I digress somewhat, that in March 1647, when a strong ice flow from above had made the river fresh as far as the sea — at normal tide, fresh water comes down to twenty or twenty-four miles from the sea — two fairly big whales swam more than forty miles up the river. One turned back and became stranded, later freeing itself at a spot eleven or twelve miles from the sea where four others were stranded in the same year; the other beached itself not far from the great Cohoes Falls, forty-three miles from the sea. The animal turned out to be quite blubbery, and the people of Rensselaerwijck boiled off a good quantity of train oil.
Moreover, as the carcass lay rotting, the stench infected the air to such an extent that it was noticeable nearly two miles to leeward.
What may have made this whale ascend the river so far, i.e., forty miles from the nearest salt or brackish water, I cannot say, unless its appetite for the multitude of fish it encountered tempted it and thus drew it from its habitat.

van der Donck, Adriaen. Beschrywinge van Nieuw-Nederlant. Amsterdam: Evert Nieywenhof, 1655.
To the floor of the chamber he brought down his peg
And steadied himself on his flesh-and-blood-leg;
Then looking around, with an air grand and grim,
Said aloud in firm tones, “Let the animal swim!”

So the animal swam 'gainst the wind and the tide,
Caring not if the river were narrow or wide,
Rushing on like the tempest, and marking his path
With the terrible waves of his foam-breathing wrath.
As he passed by Fort Orange the gunner awoke:
“The Yanghees from Hartford!” was all that he spoke,
Then opened the gates, and, with breeches in hand
And pipe in his mouth, rendered up his command.
But soon 'mid the islands off Rensselaerswyck's shore
The animal floundered and snorted and tore.
Stuck fast in a quicksand, unable to go,
He blew out his life in a chorus of woe,
While the Donderberg mountains re-echoed his pain,
And rolled out their thunder o'er valley and plain.

As the spring floods subsided, the yeomanry came
To see the great monster without any name;
Among them a skipper, renowned on the sea,
With a knowledge of fishes like Barnum, P. T.
This skipper climbed up on the animal's back,
Then wandered about on a varying tack,
Pulled away at his flippers, examined his tail,
And said to the Dutchmen, “This here is a whale.”
As when in years later, obedient to fate,
The rocks flowed with oil in a neighboring state,
And hundreds forsook their homes, firesides, and friends
For the spot where the stream of petroleum wends,
So now from the hillsides, the plains, and the town

The people all came where the animal brown
Lay dead on the quicksand, with hatchets and saws,
And axes and cleavers, and meat-hooks and claws,
Determined to turn to their own private use
What before they had thought was a public abuse,
Prepared in great kettles his blubber to broil,
And try the great whale into barrels of oil.
The Skipper Jan Symensen ruled in the roast,
With Borssum and Stogpens and burgher Van Voorst.
Then Dirck Cornelissen came in for his share,
As did Jansen and Claessen, — which surely was fair.
Govert Loockmans was there with the Criegers and Pieters,
And Volckertsen, Symon Pos, Teunissen Meters;
Jan Tyssen, the trumpeter famed for his blowing,
And Wolfert Gerrittsen, a master at mowing;
Rutger Hendrickxen, ale-maker equal to Taylor;
Cornelis Tomassen, both blacksmith and nailor;
Carstenssen, the millwright, Laurensen, the sawyer,
And Adriaen van der Donck, sheriff and lawyer;
Jansen Stol, who at Beverwyck managed the ferry;
Pieter Bronck, at whose tavern so many got merry;
Gerrittsen van Bergen, the owner of acres;
The sportsman renowned, named Harry de Backers,
Of whom it is told that one day out of fun
He killed eleven gray geese at a shot from his gun;
Pels Steltyn the brewer, and Jacob Wolfertsen;
Cornelis Crynnesen, Cornelis Lambertsen;
Claes Jansen van Waalwyck, Claes Jansen van Ruth,
And Megapolensis, a preacher of truth,
Who afterwards sent his son Samuel to college,
Where he rapidly grew both in size and in knowledge;
Sander Leendertsen Glen, a skilled Indian pedler,
And Mynderts der Bogaert, a quarrelsome meddler,
Of whom it is said, having got in a passion,
He strove to throw over in murderous fashion
A man whom in anger he caught by the throat,
As the twain were a-sailing one day in a boat;
Jan de Neger, the hangman, the colonie's Haman;
Jan Willemsen Scuth, and Jan Jansen van Bremen;
Antonie de Hooges, who to Anthony's Nose
Gave his name on the Hudson, and Andries de Vos;
Jan Labbadie, carpenter, native of France,
Who oft at Fort Orange led many a dance;
Gysbetsen, the wheelwright, who frequently spoke;
Jansen Dam, who in Council delighted to smoke;
Burger Joris, whose smithy stood under a tree;
Adriaensen van Veere, a freebooter free;
And Pieterse Koyemans, called Barent the miller,
Whose name in the manor was ever a pillar
Of strength, and his brothers Dave, Jacob, and Arent,
Who shed lustre and fame on the name of their parent.
Besides these, there came an unnamable throng,
With titles so twisted and jagged and long,
That were I to try to record them in rhyme,
I should fail in my language, my rhythm and time.
They would lengthen too much this unerring detail
To tell how by piecemeal they cut up the whale;
How the doughty old knights of the broadsword appeared
When they brought down their blades as if nothing they feared;
How the butchers with cleavers dealt terrible blows,
And the children all scattered for fear of their toes;
How Harry de Backers, with cracking report,
Kept on shooting his gun off to keep up the sport;
How Skipper Jan Symensen smoked and drank toddy
Till he could not distinguish the whale from his body;

INTERNATIONAL REGATTA AT TROY.

The boat-house of the Mutual Boat Club of Albany, from which the competing crafts were launched at Troy, is a curiosity, being made of the hull of a canal-boat. The bow contains parlor, sitting-room and dressing-room; the stern serves as boat-house, and, through the kindness of the Mutuals, was used for housing the boats of all competitors. The illustration shows the method of launching the shell-boats for the single scull races on the third day. The competitors in this race were Tyler, of Boston; Smith, of Atlanta Club, New York; Randall, of Portland; and Piepenbrink of Albany; and they held well together as far as the flag-boat, from which point the struggle was between Smith and Randall, the latter winning in consequence of a foul. Our illustration includes a view of the grand-stand, on Whale Island, and the railroad-bridge across the mouth of the Mohawk River [Between Green Island and Van Schaick Island].

Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper.
November 2, 1867: 101, 107.
How Mynderts der Bogaert got into a fight,
And was whipped by Van Porg, to the people’s delight;
How Jansen Dam swore, and how Labbadie capered;
How Neger, the hangman, got sulky and vaporred; —
These matters are treated by Munsell’s grave pen,
In his volumes of Annals, now numbering ten.

At the end of a month from the time they began,
The oil ceased to flow, which so freely had ran.
Of the whale naught remained but his carcass and spine,
On which crows came to breakfast and oft stayed to dine.
An account which was kept showed the end of this toil
To be seventy-nine barrels five pipkins of oil.
Thus light was increased, and spread through the land,
Springing forth from the whale lying dead on the strand;
And down to this day in some houses they show
The oil which kind Providence once did bestow;
For the vessels in which it was placed, like the cruse
Of the widow, ne’er lessened, though ever in use;
And the good vrouws felt certain that oil would abound
If the vessels that held it were kept clean and sound.

But the ghost of the whale lingers still round the spot
Where they tried out his blubber in caldron and pot.
And in spring, when the ice in the river goes down,
And rushes in torrents past Albany town,
When the water submerges the docks and the street,
And boats take the highway intended for feet,
Then often dread blows break the silence of night,
And the children start up with a terrible fright,
And mammas in their nightcaps look ghastly with fear,
As the sound from the river falls full on the ear.
Well the oldburghers know that the wandering shade
Of the monster is roving and will not be laid.
And though ages have passed since he gave his last groan,
And no vestige remains of his vertebrate bone,
Still the noise of those blows, as it breaks on the sense,
Makes the breathing come hard, and the muscles grow tense;
For then in mid-river the ghost of the whale
Is flapping in madness his horrible tail.
