CELEBRATING 25 YEARS OF CFEVA POST OPEN STUDIOS!

The Center for Emerging Visual Artists proudly presents the 25th annual Philadelphia Open Studio Tours (POST). POST was founded in 1999 by artist Karen Brown with 13 participating artists. The event grew exponentially, overseen by a visionary group of dedicated volunteers. In 2005, Ed Bronstein and the volunteers approached The Center for Emerging Visual Artists (CFEVA) to take on the management and production of POST as a program to ensure its lasting impact on artists in Philadelphia.

Now, a core program of CFEVA's mission and artist services POST thrives as a city-wide event, presenting over 150 artists each year to thousands of visitors who attend free of charge. POST illuminates the connections offered through the practice and experience of arts within day-to-day life. Witnessing art in the making allows each visitor to learn how creative endeavors contribute to the cultural fabric of our complex city. Visiting artists at work in their studios fosters a community that values artists as neighbors and engines of our creative economy. It breeds understanding and participation in the local cultural community.

MEET THE PHOTOGRAPHERS

The Center for Emerging Visual Artists (CFEVA) is grateful to have an extraordinary team of volunteers for our annual events. A very special thank you to this year's photographers, who have captured the stunning images of CFEVA Artists in their studios featured in print, on our website, and on social media. We are thrilled to highlight them and their achievements in this year's Philadelphia Open Studio Tours program.

Sammy Rivera is a Puerto Rican artist based in Philadelphia, PA. With street photography as his primary focus, Sammy incorporates other media into his craft such as bookbinding, sewing, ink transfers, and painting. An award-winning photographer and graduate of Antonelli Institute of Art & Photography, his work has been published in multiple issues of Palette magazine, issue 24 of Contemporary Art Review Los Angeles (Carla), and Issue 1 of Habitual Art Magazine. Sammy has exhibited his work in several group exhibitions throughout the tri-state area, as well as a duo exhibition in 2017 entitled "Euphemism", and a 2018 solo exhibition at the Arte Richmond gallery, each in Philadelphia. In January 2024, Sammy celebrated the release of his photobook, Chapter Black, with a solo exhibition at Unique Photo in Philadelphia.

SAMMYRIVERAPHOTOGRAPHY.COM

Olivia Horwitz is a Philadelphia-based film photographer focused on black and white film work and darkroom printing. She documents urban decay, countercultural environments, and architectural features that catch her eye.

Fascinated by analog photography and printing processes, Olivia bought her first film camera and started taking darkroom photography classes during the summer of 2021. The ability to be involved in every step of the photo-making process - taking the photo, developing the film, and printing from the negatives - is what attracted her to this medium. Eager to learn and dig into the details, Olivia quickly traded in her point and shoot for a Canon AE-1 and taught herself how to shoot with a single-lens reflex camera. She uses photography as a means of exploring both new and familiar places and making connections to the people and communities around her. Alternatively, printing is a means for Olivia to introspect and reconcile her perception and memory of personal experiences with the information captured on film. She draws inspiration from Cheryl Dunn, Dave Schubert, and Wolfgang Tillmans, as well as contemporary art, underground music culture, design history, and city life.

When Olivia's not shooting or in the darkroom, she's engaging with art in other ways: taking classes at Fleisher Art Memorial, volunteering for local arts organizations, and visiting the city's art museums and galleries. Building on her experiences in the vintage industry and non-profit arts world, she is pursuing opportunities in curation and exhibition management. Olivia holds a B.A. in Comparative Literature and Society from Columbia University.
