It can take more than 500 years to form two centimeters of topsoil – the outermost layer of soil which has a high concentration of nutrients and is crucial for crop growth. Avoiding soil disruption helps keep this top layer healthy and productive.