Monthly Recap

By Samantha Hampton
Owner of Creative Community Promotions

Have you ever had a project on your plate that proves to be an even bigger job than planned?

Whenever I take on a new project I dissect it thoroughly. I want to make sure it is right for me, my company, and my community. However, even after all of the initial assessment and focus, a project can be underestimated due to a multitude of factors.

What happens when you are exhausted, frustrated, and out of time?

I will share with you what I do...

I stick to the plan. Although at times when the project is proven challenging regardless of how seasoned you are at your job... just stick to the plan. The plan ultimately is to complete the project and get as creative as possible to accomplish the goal. Easier said than done. I know!

It's okay to struggle. It's not okay to give up.

Gabe Grunewald

It doesn't matter who we are, it is inevitable that from time to time we will fall down. We will feel that the task at hand is too tough, and in extreme cases, we will want nothing more than to give up. Our success can be measured in how we deal with situations like these.

So let's say you didn't quit and you "stuck to the plan," now what? Often I bite off more than I can chew. I am always chasing the next big project, goal, and dream. I find myself more times than I am willing to admit in the position of staring at a project that has grown in size. I have realized that for myself it isn't that I poorly assessed it. It is that I was ambitious to challenge myself and add more complexity to it.

So now what? How do you bounce back and find the energy to get to the finish line? When you are down and want to quit, work hard to think of all the things you have accomplished before, no matter the size. If you say that you don't have any achievements, you need to think harder. We all do! It is crucial to have the mindset that setbacks and obstacles are necessary. All great leaders and every single successful person goes through this process. You and I are no different. So press on and just get through it.

Currently, right now I am coordinating a conference. My FIRST conference I might add. The challenges that come with this task can at times feel like they are pulling me down. Self-doubt, exhaustion, frustration, and defeat are all feelings I have felt in the last few months. When I feel like giving up I clear my head and remind myself that I am not alone and have a phenomenal support team. I work hard to stop thinking about quitting and worrying about the worst case. Instead, I remind myself of what I do best and work towards that. My hope for you is that when you face your next obstacle you remind yourself how resilient you are.

You are not unique for wanting to quit it happens to everyone! Push through, you got this...

Glass By Heather

By Heather Dawson

For over 15 years, glass artist Heather Dawson has created and shared happiness through the vibrant colours of her glass art. She is passionate to share her knowledge and ignite creativity within others.

Each year in April, Heather runs a Daffodil Campaign, in support of the Canadian Cancer Society. "Since the pandemic restricted the live daffodil fundraiser, which I had participated in for years, I wanted to find a way to continue to help support the fundraiser. With last year's contribution of $300, I'm looking to grow the contribution size again this year. It's amazing how many people I have been able to connect with. across Canada, through campaign." With small window ornaments, as well as some larger items such as lanterns and décor, a portion of the proceeds of every daffodil sale will be donated to the campaign this year.

While the pandemic has brought new ways communicating, including offerina workshops through Zoom, Heather is looking forward to teaching in-person classes at her Teulon studio again this year. "I've taught beginner stained glass classes, as well as beginner fusing. It's always a lot of fun seeing the beautiful outcome of someone's first try at glasswork. Even if solder lines are crooked or don't quite line up the way they should, the glass always outshines the imperfections and students are proud of their creations."

Domes in the Orchard

By Shel Zolkewich

Stay in a Dome!

"There's something about staying in a space without corners that instantly puts you at ease," says Shel Zolkewich, owner of Domes in the Orchard, a new vacation rental resort near Meleb, MB.

Domes in the Orchard provides off-grid, petfriendly, private glamping experiences in the heart of the Interlake. Guests are treated to the rare quiet that only a stay in the country can provide. This is a time for slow strolls through the pasture, in-depth examinations of wildflowers, ears open to serenading coyotes, and eyes skyward to bright constellations, says Zolkewich.

"It's camping for sure, but we've taken away a little of the discomfort," she said. Each of the three-season, geodesic domes is outfitted with a queen bed, ultra-comfortable seating, a highefficiency woodstove, solar lighting, a small meal prep area and a private outhouse. The Magpie is now open for bookings, beginning April 29. The Dutton One will be ready a little later in the spring.

"We'll be adding a wood-fired sauna, named Sweaty Betty, as soon as some of this snow decides to leave," Zolkewich added.

It's 10 minutes to the charming town of Arborg with its world famous Arborg Bakery, meandering Icelandic River and a farmers market at the Multicultural Heritage Village. And Gimli is 20 minutes away, offering shopping, a museum, coffeeshops and the beach.

"We live on the property but our house is mostly out of sight. You may hear Sammy barking at the cattle that come onto pasture in June. And you'll likely hear the roosters too. Sorry," she said.

Painted Hours

Galloping about,
we hop aboard
And shout
Spoken words sorrows we feel
as a tyrant slaughters young and old across Ukraine,
warriors of the heart
fight for the mother land,
With nectar of the Gods,
Families leave their home
for safety,
get away from violent fire works of destruction
raining down on innocent civilians, their sufferings beyond our comprehension...

Open windows to sunshine

And revered moments honoring their struggle

Throughout the land

we celebrate victorious souls

For our peace is theirs, heartfelt,

And finally,

Humanity will win...

The Many Gifts of Struggle

By Kate Hanson

Looking back, when times felt hard or unbearable, I discovered they were actually gift experiences! Sounds a little nutty, so let me explain. If there's one thing we can be sure of, it's that everyone has known struggle. Whether they define it as a hardship, crisis, nightmare, tragedy, or a failure, struggle is a shared experience.

Reflecting back on three of the most difficult times in my life: being sexually assaulted, about 8 years of health complications with a diagnosis in my early twenties, and having a baby, seriously sick for the first 4 years of life, before receiving a diagnosis. All three stand out as life-changing, traumatic experiences. In hindsight, I see the Gift in each experience. I'm not saying I wanted these experiences or that I would wish them on my worst enemy, but I've come to a great place of loving myself through these experiences. They are parts of what makes me, me.

Assuming you've experienced struggle (namely focusing on the last couple of years but can apply to anything you've endured) I want to bring you the peace and optimism I have discovered because our perception is everything. Here are some potential Gifts from the last couple of years:

- Forced to make changes you were putting off
- · A chance to level up skills in leadership, customer service, and passion projects
- Time to consider why you're doing what you're doing and whether that "why" still matters
- · A gratitude for community, family, friends, new relationships, and collaborations
- · Your personal success story of perseverance, starting over, resilience, and growth

As we go forward into 2022, we carry with us wisdom and experience. We discovered what really matters and to not take today for granted. If you're still feeling stuck in how to move forward, come see me at the 2022 Survive and Thrive Conference on April 23rd. I look forward to connecting with you.
