FOREWORD

Dear reader

Retail media advertising is on the ascendancy. Once the new frontier, it is now being hailed as the third big digital advertising wave following search and social.

The Carousell Group is Greater Southeast Asia’s largest recommerce platform for driving the region’s circular economy. Our marketplaces - Carousell, mudah.my, Chợ Tốt, Refash, Laku6, OxStreet and OxLuxe - are synonymous with shopping sustainably and social ethics. The Interactive Advertising Bureau Southeast Asia and India (IAB SEA+India) is the regional industry association for the digital advertising sector in Singapore, India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, Vietnam and the Philippines. Our research partnership has resulted in two major regional surveys to date - Attitudes in Asia Towards Saving, Spending, Shopping and Sustainability and Millennials and Sustainable Purchasing.

We are delighted to bring you this 2023 research report from a collaboration between The Carousell Media Group and the IAB SEA+India on the State of Retail Media Advertising in Southeast Asia.

The survey results show brands and agencies already have retail media advertising as part of their current media mix, with 99% of respondents planning to increase their retail media spend over the next 12 months. So powerful is retail media in fact, that 70% of advertisers are seeing an improvement in performance from retail media networks over other channels.

Retail media advertising provides brands with a deeper understanding of consumer behaviour, the ability to deliver personalised offers and advertisements, the real time ability to track ad impressions to purchases so campaigns can be tweaked on the fly; and - the Holy Grail of marketing - closing the transaction loop through the ability to transparently measure ad performance.

The largest retail media networks globally - Alibaba.com and JD.com - are in China where retail media spend represents 40.7% of all digital ad spend within the country compared to 14.5% in the USA and there is strong growth within the APAC region including the Philippines (up 20%) and Vietnam (up 18%).

What is particularly interesting from our survey results is that 44% of respondents say they will advertise on a retail media network even if they do not have any products listed on that marketplace. For marketers, investing ad spend in a retail media network compatible with their own brand values, and those of their customers, is a major consideration.

For example, 95% of millennials in Southeast Asia and Hong Kong feel that purchasing pre-owned items is more sustainable. In fact, today’s consumers of all ages are looking beyond the window dressing of products and back to the whole manufacturing process and logistics chain of brands. They expect to see sustainable practices and social responsibility so it is important for brands to align themselves with a brand suitable retail media network.

We would like to thank everyone who brought this third research report to fruition, in particular the respondents who took the time to share their current practices and future plans relating to retail media. Thank you also to the project teams from the Carousell Media Group and the IAB SEA+India.

If you wish to discuss retail media opportunities with the Carousell Group’s marketplaces, please reach out to mediagroup@thecarousell.com. Questions or feedback about this report can be sent to hello@iabseaindia.com.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The 2000s was the search era for digital advertising, where advertising budgets were drawn from offline media into online. Building on this, from 2010 new growth came from social media, and from 2020 new growth is coming from advertising on retail networks. As you can see from the graph below, Google dominated the search era, Facebook the social era, and now retail marketplaces such as Alibaba and Amazon are becoming the dominant players in the era of retail media. The graph also illustrates how the growth is cumulative, each era laying the foundation for the next wave of growth, each layer still growing resulting in this exponential curve.
RETAIL MEDIA NETWORKS (RMNS)

Retail media networks are the next big advertising channel, driven by the explosive growth in ecommerce during the pandemic. Retail-owned digital platforms sell ad space giving advertisers access to the retailer’s first-party consumer data. Advertisers can use this shopper data to connect with consumers across their buying journey and at the point of purchase.

In Southeast Asia alone, there are 460 million internet users so the opportunities for brands to leverage retail media to access new consumers is vast. Retail media represented 11% of global digital ad spend in 2021 and forecasts this to grow by 60% by 2027.
WHAT MAKES RETAIL MEDIA SO ATTRACTIVE?

1. Driven by first-party data built around consumer buying and shopping behaviours - real-time insights about consumer preferences that enrich a brand’s connection to customers - the North Star for marketers.

2. In-built closed-loop attribution - ads delivered in context in a retail environment, connecting advertising impressions to purchases, enabling brands to measure real time ad performance and strategically adjust tactics.

3. Privacy-compliant replacement for cookies.

4. Ads can be delivered at the point of purchase, where consumers are making buying decisions.

5. Provides targeting capabilities such as personalised messaging which advertisers can send when a consumer is browsing or at point of purchase.

6. Provides for performance and brand-driven full-funnel campaigns.
What makes retail media so attractive?

7  Brand safe.

8  Solves many needs of brands
- TV ratings in decline, the same budgets chasing less and less inventory which is pushing prices up for ads - brands need to look elsewhere
- Digital ads facing deprecation of third-party identifiers, cookies, mobile ad IDs
- In-store digital media - more consumer data entering store environments creating opportunities for new digital applications and new media environments
- For brands and businesses with minimal or no online presence, retail media provides a wide-reaching way to drive traffic to their businesses

9  The varied inventory of retail media networks essentially matches brands to consumers - people have a range of needs and interests and retail media networks have a corresponding range of products and advertising inventory.

10 In 2023 retail media ad spending will account for nearly 1 in 5 advertising dollars.
RETAIL MEDIA NETWORKS IN ASIA

In Asia, we have homegrown digital retail media networks including Carousell, Alibaba and Flipkart (these are part-owned by Walmart USA), JD, Grab, Lazada, Tokopedia and Shopee.

In culturally and geographically diverse and mobile-first Southeast Asia, the growth of retail media is driven by super apps as well as ecommerce platforms. Super apps can track a consumer’s data signals throughout the day - whether they’re browsing food, fashion or football - and deliver the right product or services in real time at the point where they are most receptive.

Non-endemic brands such as car manufacturers and financial services companies are increasingly accessing first-party data to reach the right audiences who are ready to purchase. Understanding people’s shopping journey and purchasing behaviours can reveal milestones in life - such as another baby on the way - triggering the delivery of targeted advertisements for cars or minivans; or life insurance.
