Performing Arts Medicine, 3rd ed.
© 2010 Science & Medicine, Inc.

Notice: With ongoing research and improvements in technology, the information and applications discussed in this text are constantly changing and are subject to the practitioner's professional judgment and interpretation in accordance to the clinical situation. Readers are advised to check the most current information provided by the manufacturers of drugs and technologies to verify the recommended usage and/or dose, method and duration of administration, and contraindications. It is the responsibility of each practitioner, relying on experience and knowledge of the patient, to determine diagnoses and best treatment for each individual patient and to take appropriate safety precautions. Neither the authors, editors, nor publisher assume any liability for injury or damage arising from use of the information in this publication.

Photographs: All photographs appearing on the covers, front pages, and title pages of chapters in this text are intended to portray only artistic performance, and their use does not imply or represent the presence of any medical condition in these performers.

Cover photos courtesy of (T–B): M. Peters, University Singers, John J. Cali School of Music, Montclair State University, Upper Montclair, NJ (#1), B. Robson (#2), R. Lederman (#3), N. Sakai (#4), Yang Yu, Fotolia (#5), and M. DeLuca (#6). Background, National Archives (Josef Hofmann at the Metropolitan Opera, Nov 1937). Title page (page i) photos courtesy of (L–R): I. Wispur (#1), R. Sataloff (#2), B. Robson (#3), and A. Babin (#4).

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication data [in preparation]

Performing Arts Medicine, 3rd edition p.; cm.
includes bibliographic references and index.
I.

© 2010 Science & Medicine, Inc.
All rights reserved. Printed in USA.

This title is also available as an e-book at www.sciandmed.com/PerformingArtsMedicine.

No part of this publication may be reproduced, copied, reprinted, or transmitted in any form by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopy, recording, or information storage and retrieval system, without the prior expressed written permission of the publisher.

Permission for photocopying material in this volume or for use in academic course-packets, electronic or print, may be obtained by paying a fee through the Copyright Clearance Center, 222 Rosewood Drive, Danvers MA 01923, USA, www.CopyRight.com.

Published by:

Science & Medicine
PO Box 313
Narberth, PA 19072
www.sciandmed.com
800-888-0287 / 610-660-8097
fax 610-660-0348
Contents

Foreword to the 3rd Edition
Cho-Liang Lin
... vii

Foreword to the 1st Edition
Gary Graffman
... viii

Foreword to the 2nd Edition
Charles Dutoit
... x

Preface
The Editors
... xi

1 The Evolution of Performing Arts Medicine
Susan E. Harman
... 1

2 Etiologies of Medical Problems in Performing Artists
Alice G. Brandfonbrener
... 25

3 Neurological Problems of Performing Artists
Richard J. Lederman
... 51

4 Ophthalmology and the Performing Artist
Michael F. Marmor
... 77

5 Hearing Loss in Singers and Other Musicians
Robert Thayer Sataloff, Joseph Sataloff, and Caren Sokolow
... 87

6 Medical History in Voice Patients
Robert Thayer Sataloff, Mary Haukshaw, and Joseph Anticaglia
... 103

7 Physical Examination for Voice Patients
Robert Thayer Sataloff
... 121

8 Common Medical Diagnoses and Treatments for Voice Patients
Robert Thayer Sataloff
... 133

9 Temporomandibular Joint Disorders, Facial Pain, and Dental Problems in Performing Artists
James A. Howard
... 151

10 Respiratory Dysfunction in Vocalists and Wind Instrumentalists
Robert Thayer Sataloff, John R. Cohn, and Mary Haukshaw
... 197
11 Musculoskeletal Problems of Instrumental Musicians
Richard A. Hoppmann

12 The Instrumentalist’s Arm and Hand: Surgery and Rehabilitation
Ian Winspur and Joan Warrington

13 Therapeutic Management of the Injured Musician
Bronwen J. Ackermann

14 Foot and Ankle Injuries in Dancers
George T. Shybut

15 Low Back and Lower Extremity Injuries in Dancers
Fredric A. Kleinbart and Heather McElroy

16 AIDS: Implications for the Performing Arts Community
K. Holly Gallivan and Robert Thayer Sataloff

17 Psychiatric Issues and Performing Artists
David A. Sasso

18 Psychological Aspects of the Development of Exceptional Young Performers and Prodigies
Kyle D. Pruett

19 Psychological Aspects of Voice Disorders
Robert Thayer Sataloff

20 Psychological Issues in the Clinical Approach to Dancers
Bonnie Robson

Index

... 207
... 229
... 247
... 271
... 285
... 311
... 319
... 343
... 353
... 381
... 393
Performers endure constant pressure and stress by being on stage under the glare of the spotlight. Our fingers, hands, arms, back, and larynx endure the same. For me, the mechanics of being a violinist need to be intricate, delicate, and precisely coordinated. A minor aliment can throw the playing into potential chaos. A small amount of compensation can lead to the worsening of the situation and can create an unexpected and unwelcome secondary side effect. And the subsequent ripple effect can cause further trouble. And then there are major injuries that can be debilitating and can stop a great career at the peak of the performer’s power.

The wear and tear of playing an instrument are unseen by the audience, yet the consequences are all too familiar to many professional musicians. Often, we tend to ignore the pain and hope it just goes away. I am one of them. But after a few too many bouts of this and that, I have come to realize good medical care is an indispensable part of a musician’s arsenal.

I have had the pleasure of knowing wonderful doctors who care greatly about the well-being of musicians. They understand the special needs and the rigors of playing an instrument at the highest level. And most important, they know we need to get back out on stage. For many, it’s not just an innate desire to perform, but it’s their way of earning a living. For a soloist or a freelancer, there is no equivalent of baseball’s disabled list—no performance, no income.

That’s why I want to take this opportunity to salute those doctors who can help us get back to top form. Although they cannot practice for us (I sometimes wish they could), their skill and dedication enable us to resume playing and to do so with comfort and confidence. I want to say “thank you” and to wish these doctors and health care professionals continued success and progress so musicians can bring their artistry to audiences everywhere without hindrance.

Cho-Liang (Jimmy) Lin
Houston
November 2009
Foreword to the First Edition

It is with the greatest pleasure (enhanced, I admit, by the tiniest glimmer of smugness) that I write the foreword to this timely volume. As one pianist victim of performance-relation dysfunction, I am constantly reminded of how far the medical professional has come over the last few years toward recognition of specific physical problems incurred by performing artists in the line of duty. Today, the idea of a book devoted to arts medicine is, while perhaps not exactly routine, nevertheless perfectly comprehensible. A decade ago, the very subject did not exist.

A decade ago, medical assistance—and, to a great extent, even medical sympathy—for an affliction such as mine was unavailable. In 1979, when I first sought help for a hand problem, my symptoms were described by the physicians I consulted as “bizarre” and “exotic.” Today, similar symptoms in pianists are known to be not uncommon. Ten years ago, when I first sought help, I was considered to be either slightly crazy or terminally ill. Today, an instrumentalist similarly afflicted stands a good chance of obtaining at least an intelligent diagnosis. Ten years ago, I was bounced back and forth among a dozen orthopedists and neurologists, none of whom really wanted to have anything to do with me. Recently, I had the deliciously evil pleasure of lecturing a ballroom full of orthopedists and neurologists about the error of their ways.

Ten years ago, mine was a voice in the wilderness. Today, much of the undergrowth in that wilderness has been cleared away, and a pianist with symptoms similar to mine may visit performing arts clinics in Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, and in many other cities throughout the United States. Practically every week I receive information about new medical clinics for treating ailments of performing artists. For this I am grateful. I am also grateful to have been instrumental—albeit inadvertently—in the development of this new medical subspecialty, and also in alerting musicians—performers, teachers, and students alike—to the physical hazards they face. Simple awareness of these dangers on the part of the musician, as well as the musical and medical advisors, may go a long way toward prevention. If I had only known 12 or 15 years ago what almost every pianist now knows about these physical perils, I probably could have arrested the development of my problem before it became incapacitating.

At the time I first became conscious that something was very wrong with the way my right hand was functioning at the piano, there was literally no place for me to go, and no doctor who would really listen to what I was saying. My symptoms were so specialized that I needed a keyboard to demonstrate convincingly what was wrong. I had no pain, no numbness, no tingling. Only in certain very specific, extended positions of my right at the keyboard—playing a series of octaves, for example—did my trouble surface. I was able to play the first octave normally, but the act of striking each subsequent one caused my fourth finger to draw in more and more, dragging the fifth along with it as my hand contracted and, of course, I hit wrong notes. It was never any different. My hand could always normally negotiate certain patterns at the keyboard and, just as predictably, could never negotiate certain other patterns without contracting. I tried to articulate these symptoms verbally; I demonstrated physically as well as I could on examining-room tabletops. I was tested for all sorts of neurological blockages, tangles, injuries, and diseases, but when no abnormality could be found, I was regarded with exasperation as one of these mentally unbalanced artists—“aren’t they all?”—and sent away.

Hard as it is to believe as I write this, not quite 10 years later, when occurrence of performance-induced dysfunction is so widely accepted, none of the 18 doctors I consulted during the fall and winter of 1979 would even consider the possibility that my disability might have been caused, or at least triggered, by playing the piano. Either I was nuts or, as some of the specialists decided, I must be suffering from one of several disorders of the central nervous system. “See? Those two fingers are curling, the earliest symptoms of Parkinson’s disease,” I was informed by one world-famed neurologist. “But,” I reminded him, “only on my right hand” (the hand that gets most of the slamming). “Don’t worry,” he soothed me. “Your left hand will start to curl soon, too.”
Ultimately, the nature of my performance-induced injury was finally recognized early in 1980. My experience led my friend and colleague, Leon Fleisher, whose right hand had been disabled for many years, to seek consultation as well. After a New York Times article appeared about our plight, instrumentalists from all over North America began to solicit help regarding physical disabilities possibly related to their work. By the summer of 1982, musicians with physical dysfunctions had begun to discover that what they had previously considered to be their unique miseries were, in fact, widely shared. Soon, doctors began to realize that most of the physical complaints of the musicians they examined were attributable, at least in part, to the mechanics of playing or in some cases simply holding their instruments.

And now, thanks to the extraordinary and continuing publicity that the field of arts medicine receives, such information is virtually common knowledge. Now we know that inflamed tendons and nerve compression, if not motor control disorders, are fairly typical afflictions of instrumentalists. We know that violinists can suffer neck, shoulder, and arm pain simply because of the way they grip the instrument. We know that trumpet players are prone to develop outpouring of the upper airway from the strain of hitting high notes. We know about harpist’s cramp and flutist’s skin eruption and bassoonist’s thumb, and even that the height of a cellist’s chair can cause formerly unsuspected difficulties. Performers have become infinitely more aware of the dangers that await in the pursuit of their daily routines.

I know that my piano students today are far more conscious of what they are doing physically at the instrument than my contemporaries and I were when we were students. Certainly I am more aware of my students’ physical behavior at the instrument. If they complain of any strain of if they sustain any kind of injury that interferes even slightly with their playing, I advise them not to play at all until they can use the injured part of the body normally. By “normally,” I mean what is normal for them, because there is no absolute right or wrong way to hold the hand, arm, wrists, etc., or to sit at the instrument. It has to be done in the way that is most natural for the individual—and there are almost as many different ways of playing naturally as there are individuals who play.

I think the most I can do as a teacher is to make sure that my students learn to be aware of what they are doing. They should learn to be conscious early on if they are sliding into physical habits that distort their natural position. This new awareness brings with it, unfortunately, the side effect of sometimes being too self-conscious, but I guess that is a lesser evil than permitting potentially devastating habits to take over, as happened with me.

For it is really only through education—and thus prevention—that we can keep these physical problems at bay. Treatment for many such dysfunctions is still in the experimental stage and so far some of them cannot be reversed. So it is up to those at risk to inform themselves about these dangers, how to avoid them, and what kind of medical help is available when necessary.

I think, therefore, that this book should be of immeasurable usefulness to performing artists of all kinds. I hope that it will prove similarly invaluable to members of the medical profession as well, particularly when presented with hand symptoms by a pianist, or foot symptoms by a dancer, or throat symptoms by a singer, or lower back symptoms by a cellist. To be sure, it is necessary for physicians to investigate all possibilities of disease. By all means, scan the brain and probe the psyche. But it is also crucial to remember that the very act of performing can also be injurious to a performer’s health.

Gary Graffman
Philadelphia, 1991
Foreword to the Second Edition

The evolution of arts medicine has been of great interest and importance to all of us involved in the performing arts. Instrumentalists, singers, dancers, and other artists require bodily near-perfection in order to deliver optimal artistic performance. For centuries, it has been clear that artistic performance can be undermined by bodily frailties and illnesses. Some such illnesses are coincidental, afflicting everyone in the population, but producing disproportionate effects on artists who may be disabled by “minor” ailments. Other dysfunction may actually be caused by performance itself. Unfortunately, until the 1980s, performers received little help and understanding from the medical community. The development of arts medicine has changed that, providing expertise and easy access to enlightened medical care.

Performers depend upon excellent physical condition to practice their arts and generate their livelihoods. Similarly, impresarios, conductors, and business people depend upon the health of performers in order to maintain the business structure that brings artistic performance to the public and financial support to the many people required for the survival of the performing arts. When a performer develops pain, weakness, or other health complaints that may affect performance, it is extremely important to be certain that medical and performance judgments are correct and based upon scientific expertise. Inappropriately allowing an injured artist to perform may produce not only a poor concert, but also prolonged or permanent injury. This may end an artist’s career and potentially generate undesirable liabilities for management. Allowing a sick or injured artist to perform may also damage a performer’s reputation even if serious injury does not occur. For a younger artist, poor performance and reviews may substantially damage or delay a career. However, cancelling performances unnecessarily also does more damage than just disappointing the public and leaving the costs of a canceled concert. Cancellation can also damage a performance career by making especially a young performer miss an important “break,” or by giving the performer a reputation for unreliability. Consequently, it is a great comfort to performers, conductors, and management to know that there are arts medicine specialists who understand the special demands and problems of performers, the importance of a sick or injured performer to other artists involved in a planned concert, and the responsibilities and demands of management. As a conductor, for example, when I am confronted with a sick singer the day before (or of) an operatic performance, it is essential that I have access to a laryngologist I trust. I must know that the evaluation my singer receives will be grounded in the latest concepts of vocal arts medicine, that the physician will make every effort to get the performer onstage if it is safe to do so, and that if the performer is allowed to sing, he or she will make it through the performance without suffering serious injury or having his or her voice fail halfway through the opera. Similarly, when the laryngologist determines that the singer cannot perform, I must have confidence that that decision was correct and unavoidable. Twenty years ago, such medical expertise was rare or nonexistent. Now, it is available in many major cities around the world and is becoming more widely available each year.

Performing Arts Medicine should be available to both physicians and performing artists. It is the second edition of the first textbook on this important subject. It provides guidelines for physicians interested in learning about and caring for the specialized problems of performers. It also provides information useful and understandable for performers and their teachers. Acquiring such knowledge helps performers understand their bodies and avoid injuries; and it puts them in a much better position to assess the quality of the medical care they receive when health problems occur. The book was written not only as a medical reference, but also as a text for use in pedagogy courses at music schools. Teachers and performers will be well served by learning the principles and facts between these covers, and by participating actively in the acquisition of new knowledge and the further evolution of performing arts medicine.

Charles Dutoit
Montreal, 1998
Preface

Performing Arts Medicine, 3rd edition, provides a unique compilation of expert insights into all areas of performing arts medicine. The well-received first edition published in 1991 was the first modern textbook on the subject and helped launch the field. Like sports medicine, arts medicine addresses the special challenges associated with super-normal function. This book reviews the history of performing arts medicine, provides an overview of the causes of medical problems in performing artists, and offers expert, comprehensive chapters by world-renowned specialists on neurological, ophthalmological, vocal, auditory, respiratory, musculoskeletal, psychological, and other problems encountered by performers. The book also includes chapters on adaptive equipment and instrument modification for musicians, physical therapy, and other topics. This unique text was written to be valuable not only for physicians, but also for performers and teachers. Although it was designed originally to be used as a medical text and reference, it is also ideal for use in music pedagogy courses. The information contained is as valuable for music and dance professors and performers as it is for physicians.

The first edition of Performing Arts Medicine (1991) was the first modern textbook in a new and exciting field of medicine. It was written because of a compelling need for information among physicians, performers, teachers, and therapists. Educational information has been difficult for most people to acquire because of the interdisciplinary nature of arts medicine. In recent years, the development of arts medicine has become possible because of collaboration among physicians, performers, music teachers, acting teachers, physical therapists, speech-language pathologists, nurses, dance instructors, and others who have not traditionally worked closely together. Teamwork has resulted in a new understanding among all the professions and the bridging of language barriers that have traditionally hindered performers’ access to treatment.

Interested physicians have risen to the special challenge of arts medicine. In most other areas of medicine, we are given wide latitude in our definition of “normal.” Arts medicine does not permit such imprecision. The difference between 95% recovery of an injured finger and 100% recovery may mean the difference between a world-class performing career as a violinist and obscurity. Arts medicine physicians are learning to recognize the subtle differences between normal, supernormal, and perfection by performers’ standards.

In addition to interdisciplinary teamwork, the development of performing arts medicine has been assisted through basic science research and new technology. While an enormous amount of clinical and basic information remains to be discovered, and although performance applications of many of our new insights remain unexplored, it is clear that the field of arts medicine is firmly established. Its development is a proud saga of creative professional response to a neglected public health need.

The second edition was written to summarize new information about arts medicine. Since its publication in 1998, interest in arts medicine has continued to expand among physicians, teachers and performers. The third edition updates and expands chapters from the first and second editions and serves as a compendium of the latest information in each of the primary subspecialties of performing arts medicine. Each chapter includes an introduction to the concepts and terminology that should make this book valuable not only as a medical reference but also as a textbook for performing artists and educators who are interested in health and medical aspects of pedagogy.

Chapter 1 traces the history of performing arts medicine from the 1700s to the present. Chapter 2 offers an overview of the causes of medical problems of performing artists in various musical specialties. Chapter 3 provides a succinct summary of neurologic disorders affecting performing artists and it includes illustrative case reports. Chapter 4 offers insight into the special visual needs of performing artists and their specialized management. Chapter 5 reviews the problem of hearing loss in singers and other musicians, including issues of occupational hearing loss associated with exposure to pop and classical music performance. Chapters 6, 7, and 8 offer in-depth information about diagnosis and treatment of disorders of the voice affecting singers, actors, and other professional voice users. Chapter 9 is an extraordinary, comprehensive discussion on the temporomandibular joint and dental issues that affect musical performance.

Chapter 10 discusses the issues of respiratory dysfunction in singers and wind instrumentalists and the impact of even subtle obstructive lung disease. It highlights special treatment considerations required in singers. Chapters 11 and 12 review the unique impact of musculoskeletal dysfunction in instrumentalists and important principles of treatment of arm and hand dysfunction in performers. Chapter 13 expands on the special challenges of therapy in the injured instrumentalist. Chapters 14 and 15 focus on problems in dancers including not only foot and ankle injuries, but also orthopedic injuries elsewhere in the body that may be associated with dance and may impair dance performance.
Chapter 16 reviews HIV infection and its important impact on the performing arts community. Chapters 17 through 20 provide comprehensive coverage of psychiatric and psychological issues affecting performers and the considerations that guide management in this special population.

We anticipate continued rapid advancement in all of the specialties of arts medicine and look forward to including not only new medical developments but also additional subspecialties in future editions. We hope that this book will serve the medical community well not only directly but especially through its use in music school classrooms. We also hope that the information provided helps familiarize more students and teachers with potential medical problems associated with performance—and that this knowledge helps prevent such problems in an increasing percentage of performers in coming years.

Robert Thayer Sataloff
Alice G. Brandfonbrener
Richard J. Lederman
July 2010
Performing Arts Medicine
Index

A

Abdominal breathing 368
Abuse, physical, and TMD 163
Achilles tendonitis 272, 274
Achilles tendon 272
Achilles tendon rupture 273
Acne mechanica 179
Acquired immunodeficiency syndrome. See AIDS
Acupuncture 261
for TMD 185
Ad Aquapendente, Fabricius 4
Adenoids 203
ADHD. See Attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder
Adolescence, and prodigies, 347
Aerodynamic measures 127
Flow gottography 127
Forced expiratory volume 127
Forced vital capacity 127
Functional residual capacity 127
Glottal resistance 127
Inspiratory capacity 127
Pneumotachography 127
Tidal volume 127
Vital capacity 127
Age 29, 30, 54, 137, 248
Risk of injury 29
and Wind players 42
Aging, and voice 137
AIDS 48, 57, 136, 139, 178, 311-316
CDC staging system 314
Diagnosis 312
Mechanism of infection 312
Nurtion 315
Symptoms 312
Transmission 316
Treatment 314, 315
Women 316
Airflow rate testing 199
Mean flow rate 199
Phonation quotient 200
Airway reactivity-induced asthma in singers (ARIAS) 204
Alcohol 46, 57, 115, 140, 199, 331, 336 and Sleep bruxism 165 use by dancers 385
Alexander technique 10, 14, 17, 215, 222, 330
Allergies 37, 43, 109, 122, 136, 202, 203
in Wind players 43
Intradural injection 202
Radioallergosorbent test 202
Skin testing 202
Allergic rhinitis 203
Alopecia 360
Alprazolam 331
Alternative therapy 8
Alzheimer’s disease 30, 54, 56, 339
Amateur singers 106
Amenorrhea 297, 305, 384
American Academy of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation 12
American Alliance for Health, Physical Fitness, Recreation and Dance 9
American Alliance of Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Dance 17
American College of Sports Medicine 15, 18
American Music Teacher 17
American Occupational Medical Association 12
American Physical Therapy Association 12, 18
American String Teacher 8
American String Teachers Association 7, 17
Amphetamines 359
Amnesia 60
Amyloidosis 143
Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis 58, 131
Arachidonic acids 139
Analogues 214
Androgens 114, 139
Anemias 122, 139
Anesthesia and singers 114
Ankle injury 271, 272
Achilles tendon 272
Achilles tendonitis 272, 274
Anterior impingement 276
Lateral tendons 274
Medial tendons 274
Posterior ankle impingement 275
Sprain 276-277
Ankle sprain 276-277
Annulus fibrosus 286
Anorexia nervosa 339, 362, 384, 385
Anterior ankle impingement 276
Anterior cruciate ligament 299, 302, 303
Injuries 302, 303
Anterior dental open bites 175
Anterior inferior iliac spine 292, 293, 296
Anterior knee pain 299, 302
Anterior superior iliac spine 292, 293
Anterior tibial stress fracture 305
Antihistamines 115
Anticonvulsants 188, 325, 360
Antidepressants 324, 331, 334, 359, 361
for TMD 187
Antihistamines 115, 136, 203
Antipsychotic drugs 165, 325, 333, 335, 361, 362
Anti-reflactive lenses 81
Anxiety 125, 165, 321, 326-332, 336, 337, 358, 359, 363, 364, 386. See also Performance anxiety and β-blockers 140, 330, 361 and TMD 158
and Voice 140
Anxiolytics 331, 361
Aphasia 60
Aphonia 356
Apophyseal avulsion fractures 293
Appetite suppressants 362
Arabesque 286, 290
Antipsychotic 325
Arms pain 229, 243
Arterial blood gas 202
Arthritis 9, 104, 163, 166, 208, 219, 242
Degenerative 30 and Joint laxity 30
Arthrodesis 232, 242, 244
Arthrography 161
Arthroplasty 242, 244
Arthroscopy 190, 276
Articular cartilage lesions 304
Arts medicine specialty 13, 18
Articular dislocation 203
Articular erosion 122
Aspergillosis 137
Asthma 43, 109, 198, 204, 331
Exercise-induced 136
in Wind players 43
Athletics, and risks for musicians 46
Attachment theory 381
Attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder 338
Atrial palpitations 325, 362
Audigram 88
Auditory system 88
Auriculotemporal syndrome 170
Australian Society for Performing Arts Healthcare 16
Avascular necrosis 294
Tie 284
Avalon fractures foot 278
Avicenna 4

B

β-adrenergic-blocking drugs. See β-blockers β-blockers 7, 11, 58, 140, 330, 331, 361
Back pain 36, 60, 209, 221 in Bassists 36
Bagpipe 44, 174, 241
Ballet 11, 271, 265, 381
Banjo 38
Barbiturates 140
Barrett’s esophagus 137

393
Hallux valgus 279
Hallopenis 335, 361
Hamstring injuries 287, 292
Hand Clinic 8
Hand dominance, in string players 36
Hand pain 2, 3, 221, 229, 236
Assessment 237
Surgery 230
Indications 230
Modifications of technique 231
Therapy 233
Treatment 237
Hand position in pianists 32
Hand surgery 229-245
Harkness Center for Dance Injuries 18
Harp
Posture 37, 38
Playing techniques 37
Thoracic outlet syndrome 38
Headache evaluation 198
Headache 55, 153, 165, 169, 319
Health insurance 14
Health Promotion in Schools of Music Project 16-18, 225
Healthier Dancer Program 18
Hearing acuity 121
Hearing loss 5, 44, 60, 87, 114, 122, 137
Classification of 90
Central 91
Conductive 90
Functional 91
Mixed 91
Sensorineural 90, 91
Legal aspects 99
Music-related hearing loss 94-99
Occupational hearing loss 92
Occurrence 92
Prevention 93
Treatment 100
Personal stereo devices 98
Psychological consequences 92
Hearing loss and voice 137
Hearing loss asymmetrical 92, 93, 94, 96
Hearing loss causes 87, 90
Hearing loss in:
Audiences 97,100
Big band musicians 94
Choir singers 97
Dance bands 95
Instrumentalists 93, 94, 97
Music students 94
Opera orchestra 92
Percussionists 95
Pianists 94
Pop musicians 95, 96, 97
Rock musicians 93, 94, 95, 96, 98
Symphony orchestras 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98
Violinists 93
Hearing loss neural 90
Hearing loss noise-induced 91
Hemorrhage 142
Hemorrhoids, in wind players 43
Henson, RA 6
Herma 43, 286, 296, 298
in Wind players 43
Herniated lumbar disk 60
Herniation spinal disk. See disk herniation.
Herpes simplex 43
Heterotopic ossification 294
Highly active antiretroviral therapy. See HAART.
Hip injuries, in dancers 291
Dislocation 294
Femoroacetabular impingement 295
Hamstring strain 292
Hip pointer 286, 294
Labral tears 294
Ligamentum teres 286, 296
Myositis 286, 293
Myositis ossificans 294
Subluxation 294
Thigh contusion 293
Hip pain nonspecific 296
Hip pointer 286, 294
Hippocrates 4
History of patient 198, 199
HIV transmission 312, 313, 316
HIV-related dementia 314
HIV 44, 45, 57, 311-316
Hobbies 229, 248
Hobbies and TMD 184
Hochberg, Fred 7
Holistic 29
Horowitz, Vladimir 32
Hormone replacement therapy 114, 139
Horvath, Steven M. 6
Human immunodeficiency virus. See HIV
Hyaluronan 222
Hyaluronate 189
Hydroxyzine 161
Hyperextension 41
Hyperlaxity joint 238. See also Hypermobility
Hypermobility, joint 156, 167, 207, 209, 222, 233, 261
Hypermobility of TMJ 156, 163, 167, 186
Hyponxia 77, 78, 80
Hypertension 160
Hyperthyroidism 359
Hypertrophic arthritis. See Osteoarthritis.
Hypnotherapy 330, 359, 365
Hypochondriasis 112, 160, 333
Hypoglycaemia 359
Hypomania 321, 322, 323
Hypopharyngeal dilation, in wind players 43
Hypothalamic amenorrhoea 384
Hypothyroidism 113, 138
Hysteria 333

IADMS. See International Association of Dance Medicine and Science
ICSMOM. See International Conference of Symphony and Opera Musicians
Idiopathic condylyosis 166
Idiopathic toothache 169
Ilipsoas tendinitis 296
Imaging in neurological evaluation 53
Imaging in TMD 160
Incision site surgery 231
Inclusion body myositis, 59
Index Medicus 4
Median neuropathy 64
Medical Centre for Dancers and Musicians (The Hague) 15
Medical evaluation 28, 29
Medical history 104-115, 199, 209, 368
Medical history in singers 103, 104
  Age 104
  Foods 112
  Hormonal issues 113
  Musical genre 106
  Obesity 108
  Performance schedule 105
  Pollution 109
  Practice 107
  Stress, psychological 112
  Tobacco 110
  Training 106
  Travel 109
  Voice teacher 106
Medical Problems of Musicians & Dancers 7, 12, 15, 18
Medical Problems of Performing Artists 10, 11, 13, 14, 16-18, 319
Medication 330
MENCC. See National Association for Music Education
Meniscus tears 302
Menopause 114
Menopause 139
Menstrual abnormalities 113, 296
Menstrual cycle 113, 138
Meralgia paraesthetic 286, 298
Metacarpal boss 240
Metal sensitivity 179
Methacalone 187
Methadone 336
Methocarbamol 387
Microdrop surgery vocal fold 146
Microsurgery vocal fold 144
Midfoot injuries 277, 278
Migraine 55
Mirtazapine 188, 360
Monoamine oxidase inhibitors 324, 360
Monosodium 139
Mood disorders 321, 321
  Bipolar disorders 321, 322, 324, 335, 358
  Cognitive and behavioral treatments 326
  Depressive disorders 321, 324
Pharmacotherapy 324, 325
Psychotherapy 325, 326
Mood stabilizing drugs 360
Morgagni, Giovanni 4
Morton’s neuroma 280, 281
Motivational interviewing 336
Motor neuron disease 58
Motor vehicle accidents and TMD 163
Mouthpiece 172, 179, 181
Move Radiography to separate hearing
Movement analysis 253
Mozart WA 27, 320
MPA. See Medical Problems of Performing Artists
Mueller, Johannes 4
Multiple sclerosis 52, 57, 109, 131, 139
Muscle disorders inflammatory 59
Muscle fibrosis 294
Muscle relaxant drugs 187, 287
Muscle relaxants for TMD 187
Muscular dystrophy 59
Muscular syndromes acute 286, 287
Musculoskeletal problems 207
  Education and prevention 224
  Musculoskeletal overuse 216
  Physical examination 212
  Treatment 213
    Medications 214
    Occupational therapy 214
    Physical therapy 214
    Relaxation and body awareness 215
    Surgery 215
Musculoskeletal tension disorders 356, 373, 374
Musculoskeletal pain syndromes 26
Muscular dystrophy 16
Music and Medicine 4
Music and the Brain 6
Music education 26-28
Music Educators Journal 8, 17
Music Index 4
Music lessons, and risk of injury 27
Music medicine 6
Music stands 262
Music students 94
Musical genre 106
Music teachers, and risk of injury 28
Music Teachers National Association 17
Music therapy 330
Musical genres, and injury in pianists 33
Musical genres 248
Musical instruments, risk factor for 30
  Brass 39
  Keyboard 31-33
  Percussion 44
  String instruments 33
  Voice 31
  Woodwinds 41
Musical workplace, and risks 45
Musician-instrument interface 237
Musculoskeletal Medicine 15
Mutational falsetto 356, 378
Muteness voluntary 377
Myasthenia gravis 59, 109, 139
Myofascial pain 158, 167
Myofascial release 261
Myopia 3, 77, 78, 90, 94
Myositis ossificans 293

N
Naltrexone 336
Narcissism 329
Nasal mucosa 122
Nasopharyngoscopy 202
National Association for Music Education (MENC) 16, 18
National Association of Schools of Dance 18
National Association of Schools of Music 16, 17, 225
National Association of Teachers of Singing 145
National Dance Association 9
National Flute Association 7, 12, 17
  Performance Health Care Committee 12
National Flute Association Newsletter 7
National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health 6
National Institutes of Health 112
Neck pain 151, 184, 209, 221
Neck stiffness 198
Nederlandse Vereniging voor Dans- en Muziek-Geneeskunde (NVDMG). See Dutch Performing Arts Medicine Association
Nerve block 107
Nerve compression, surgery for 239-240
Nerve compression syndromes 239
Nerve entrapment 11, 286, 294, 306
Nervous system, structure and function 51-53
Neuralgic amyotrophy 63
Neuritis 3
Neurogenic dysphonia 363
Neuroleptic malignant syndrome 362
Neurologic examination 199
Neurological disorders 54, 55
  Prevention 70
  Examination 53
Neuromeningeal mobilization 261
Neuropathic pain 169
New England Journal of Medicine 6, 11
New York Times 7
Nickel sensitivity 179
Night blindness 81
Nijinsky, Vaslav 120, 334, 347
Nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) 134, 185, 187, 209, 217, 218, 219, 221, 214, 272, 274, 276, 279, 280, 281, 287, 288, 293, 294, 296, 297, 298, 302, 301, 304, 305
Norriss, Richard 9,13
North Carolina Medical Journal 8
NSAIDs. See Nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs
Nucleus-palposus 286
Nutrition 385
NVDMG. See Dutch Performing Arts Medicine Association
Obesity 108, 205
Oboc 42
Occupational medicine 25
Obsessive compulsive disorder 326, 332, 335, 358, 361
Obstructive lung disease 204
Obstructive pulmonary disease 201
Obstructive sleep apnea-hypopnea syndrome 165, 166
Oburator neuritis 286, 298
Occlusal therapy for TMD 186
Occupational cramp. See Focal dystonia
Occupational hazards 45
Occupational hearing loss prevention 93, 94, 99
Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) 5, 45
Ocular trauma 83
Odynophoria 108
Olanzapine 325
Oncology 283
Oncology 283
Opioids 188
Optics 77
Oral cavity and AIDS 313
Ostitis ossificans 171
Orchidectomy in wind players 43
Organization of Canadian Symphony Musicians 327, 328
Orphenadrine 187
Pulmonary fibrosis 205
Pulmonary function testing 200
Diffusion capacity 202
Flow-vs-volume loop 200
Forced expiratory flow 200
Forced expiratory volume 127, 200
Forced vital capacity 127, 200
Lung volume 202
Spirometry 200
Total lung capacity 200
Vital capacity 127, 200
Pulmonary problems in Wind players 42, 197

Quadriceps 325
Quadriceps tendinitis 300
Quadriceps tendinosis 300
Rachmaninoff, Sergei 320, 322, 323, 347
Radial mononeuropathy 66
Radial tunnel decompression 66
Radial tunnel syndrome 240
Radiography, chest 202
Ramazini, Bernardino 1, 2
Ramsay Hunt syndrome 59
Range of motion (ROM) 122, 156-158, 212, 214, 223, 233, 234, 238, 260, 261, 288
Exercises 260 of TMD 183, 184
Ravel, Maurice 56
Reconstruction surgical 231
Reflux laryngitis 112, 138
Refractive surgery 80
Regional pain syndrome 207, 216
Rehabilitation for instrumental musicians 229-245
Remike’s edema 143
Remike’s space 111
Relaxation techniques 215, 365
Revel 234, 275
Repetitive stress 220
Replantation in finger injuries 239
Resistance training 15, 258
Respiratory dysfunction 136, 197
Diagnosis 202
Laryngeal obstruction 203
Nasal airway obstruction 202
Pharyngeal obstruction 203
Pulmonary lesions 204
Treatment 202
Rest 265
Restrictive lung disease 201, 205
Retraining detachment 84
Retraining strategies 254, 259
Return to dance 288, 289, 290, 293, 294, 295, 297, 302, 305, 306
Return to play 233, 234, 244, 265
Rheumatoid arthritis 59, 143, 224, 244
Rhinomometry 199
RICE treatment 277, 287, 293
Rietveld, ABM (Boni) 15
Risk factors 29, 249
Risperidone 325
Risser score 291
Robson, Bonnie 346, 350
Rock music and hearing 5, 11, 94, 95, 97, 100, 322
Rock musicians 93, 94, 95, 96, 98
Rold de jambe 297
Royal Society of Medicine 4

Sacral stress fracture 290
Sacroiliac 286, 294
Disfunction 286, 290, 293
Sacroiliac joints 285, 286, 290-294,
Saint-Saens, Camille 236
Salivary gland disorders 177
Salivation 159
Saphenous mononeuropathy 66
Sarcoidosis 137, 205
Sataloff, Robert 11, 13, 18
 Saxophone 41, 42
Sear 233
Sear vocal fold 143
Schizoaffective disorder 334
Schizophrenia 334, 335, 339
Schumann, Robert 2, 320, 332, 347
Sciatic neuropathy 293
Sciatica 209, 286, 293, 298
Science of Dance Training 9
Scintigraphy 162
Scleroderma 159
Sciotic 286, 291
Sciatica and TMD 162
Second-hand smoke 111
Selecting serotonin reuptake inhibitors (SSRIs) 324, 333, 359, 361
Suicidal thinking 324, 360
Discontinuation effects 324
Sexual dysfunction 324, 359
Side effects 324, 359
Self-concept 365
Self-esteem 383
Self-image 355
Seminars in Neurology 8
Sensorimotor retraining 236, 238, 255
for Focal dysonia 69 70
Senza Solfino 6, 10, 11
Serraline 187
Sesamoid injury foot 280, 283
Sesamoids 280
Sexual dysfunction 360
with SSRIs 324, 359
Sexually transmitted diseases and AIDS 316
Sjörande 8
Shadow playing 233
Shin splints 325
Shoulder problems 217
Bicipital tendinitis 218
Impingement 217
in Shoulder players 37
Subacromial/subdeltoid bursitis 217
Shoulder rests 263
for Violinists/violists 34
Skaladinis 178
Sialography 162
Stalodrasis 178
Stalorhea 159, 160
Sibelius Academy 16
Side effects of drugs 188, 324, 325, 335, 359, 362
Singer, Kurt 3
Single-photon emission computed tomography 89, 289
Singing, and risk factors 31
Singing teacher 108
Singing training 134
Singing voice specialist 145
Sinusitis 136, 203, 312
Störgen’s syndrome 159, 167, 178
Sitting posture 250
Sleep bruxism 165
Sleep disorders 9, 321
Snapping hip syndrome 286, 296-297
Social phobia 328, 358, 361
Sodium hyaluronate for TMD 189
Somatic compliance 357
Somatics 9, 18
Somatization disorder 333
Somatoform disorders 322, 333, 334
Somatosensory evoked potentials 54, 62
Sound pressure levels 93, 94.95, 96
Spasmodic dysphonia 109, 139, 376
Speech-language pathology 133, 134, 135, 144-145, 353, 367, 369, 371
Spinol bifida occulta 288
Spine 209, 212, 285
Anterior inferior iliac spine 292, 293, 296
Anterior superior iliac spine 292, 293
Cervical spine 209
Degenerative disk disease 290
Discogenic pain 293
Lumbar spine injuries 285
Acute disk herniation 287, 293
Borutulin toxin 293
Coricosteroids 293
Sacral stress fracture 290
Sciatic neuropathy 293
Spondylolisthesis 286, 289
Spondylolisthesis 286, 288-290
Anatomy 209
Spinal 209
Stenosis 293
Strain 209
Spine lumbar 285
Biomechanics 285
Ophthalmology 127, 200
Splintering 214, 234, 237, 238, 264
Spondylolysis 288, 289
Spondylolysis 286, 288-290
Sports hernia 296, 298
Sports injuries and TMD 164
Sports injury 230
Sports medicine 25, 31
SSRIs. See Selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors
SSRIs for TMD 187
Stage fright. See Performance anxiety
Stage set-up 242
Steam inhalation 135
Stenosis 293
Steroids 188
Steroids, inhaled 204
Voice disorders 4, 103, 121, 133, 353
Allergy 136
Granuloma 145
Hemorrhage 142
Infection and inflammation 134, 136
Laryngitis 134, 135
Laryngeal papilloma 143
Neurological disorders 139
Polyps 141
Psychogenic voice disorders 356
Psychological phases 356
Reinke’s edema 143
Respiratory dysfunction 136
Sarcoidosis 137
Sinusitis 136
Submucosal cysts 141
Sulcus vocalis 143
Tonsillitis 136
Vocal fold hemorrhage 134, 142
Vocal nodules 5, 122, 126, 140-141, 356
Voice abuse 107, 111, 133, 134, 356, 374
Voice evaluation 129
Voice Foundation, The 5, 14
Voice Handicap Index 128
Voice lessons 135
Voice loss 140
Voice maintenance 148
Voice misuse 133
Voice professionals 103
Voice rest 135, 147, 364
Voice teacher 106, 145
Voice use, and risk factors 31
Voluntary muteness 377
von Haller, Albrecht 4 von Helmholtz, Hermann 4

W
Warm-up exercises 210, 223, 248, 257
Washington, Ernest 9
Wasting in AIDS 313, 315
Weight loss in AIDS 313, 315
Western Journal of Medicine 8
Whiplash 114, 163
Wilson, Frank 8
Wind instruments 170, 172
Classification 173
Dental crowding 175
Dental occlusion 174
Dermatologic conditions 179
Microbiology 178
Selection 174
Temporalomandibular joint problems 180
Tooth-related problems 179
Woodwind instruments
Embouchure 41, 43
Hand problems 41
Nerve compression 41
Risk factors 39
Shoulder problems 41
Thumb tests 42
Worker’s compensation 14
Wound care 233
Wrist pain nonspecific 236
Assessment 237
Treatment 237
Writer’s cramp. See Focal dystonia
Wynn Parry, Christopher 230, 237, 243

X
Xanax 331
Xerostomia 122, 159

Y
Yawning 185

Z
Zidovudine 315
Ziprasidone 325