WELCOME FROM THE PRESIDENT

On behalf of the International Society for the Study of Narrative, I am delighted to welcome you to the 36th International Conference on Narrative, our first in an entirely on-line format. Every year since 1986 researchers and scholars from a range of disciplines have come together in person to share their ideas about narrative, get to know one another, and enjoy the particular locales of the conference. While the COVID-19 pandemic prevents us from meeting in this way this year, it has galvanized our community to establish impressive, exciting new modes of collaboration among our members. Moreover, it has encouraged ISSN leadership to create a sustainable foundation for hybrid and virtual conferences from which all members of the Society, and of the planet that is our ultimate host, will benefit. I will certainly miss the warmth of the live conference this year, but I revel in the sustainable, accessible manner in which this year's conference will be held, as well as in the lasting impact our new platform will have on ISSN's sustainability, diversity, and accessibility for a vast range of participants and new members.

Indeed, participants from thirty-five countries and over 175 academic institutions from around the world are gathering for Narrative 2021, and I look forward to meeting as many of you as possible during our live events, including the live Q & A panels; the panel honouring this year's winner of the Wayne C. Booth Lifetime Achievement Award, James Phelan; the Keynote address of eminent scholar, creative writer, and educator, Karla Holloway, James B. Duke Distinguished Professor Emerita of English at Duke University; the provocative CNT Panels; the special sessions; the social events; and of course, the Awards Luncheon.

WELCOME FROM THE PRESIDENT

I invite you, as well, to visit our new website (thenarrativesociety.org) to learn more about our work, delve into our community, and get involved in some of the wonderful initiatives within our network. We are thrilled to showcase what we have accomplished since we met last year in New Orleans, including the establishment of our Social Justice Initiative, the Graduate Student and Contingent Faculty Caucus, and our Mentorship Program. As we continue to develop the website, our goal is to make it an engine for further collaborations. In the coming months and years, the site will enable narrative scholars to hold colloquia, organize book clubs, organize small conferences with other narrative theorists of similar specialties or regions, listen to our Narrative for Social Justice (N4SJ) podcasts (about which you can learn more at the “Narrative for Social Justice: DEI Town Hall” at the conference), and much more. To be sure, the passion and commitment of our community members makes the ISSN what it is—an important space for the development of scholarship, the enhancement of diversity and inclusion, the cultivation of lasting relationships, and the sharing of ideas—and we’re delighted that this new, vibrant website will offer a platform upon which our members can continue to build.

My gratitude to all of the people who have worked on this conference is immeasurable, and I encourage you to take a look at those who made this conference happen listed on the following two pages. They have worked very hard to make this the best possible, first-ever Virtual ISSN Conference.

Enjoy!

All my best,
Lindsay Holmgren (she/her)
President, International Society for the Study of Narrative

THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY FOR THE STUDY OF NARRATIVE

The International Society for the Study of Narrative (ISSN) is a nonprofit association of scholars dedicated to the investigation of narrative, its elements, techniques, and forms; its relations to other modes of discourse; and its power and influence in cultures past and present.

“Narrative” for us is a category that may include the novel, epic poetry, history, biography, autobiography, film, the graphic arts, music, performance, legal writing, medical case histories, and more.

The Society sponsors the International Conference on Narrative each year. The first conference was held at Ohio State University in 1986, and in subsequent years, the meeting has been held at sites across the United States, Canada, and Europe. At each conference, approximately 350 speakers address issues of narrative from a variety of positions and perspectives.

There are currently approximately a thousand members in ISSN, and new members are always welcome. Membership in the Society includes a subscription to Narrative (winner of the 1993 award for Best New Journal from the Council of Editors of Learned Journals), as well as to the Society’s newsletter, which contains information about the annual conference, MLA sessions, the online discussion group, and other activities. For more information about the ISSN, please visit our website at: <https://www.thenarrativesociety.org>.

PLENARY SPEAKERS

KEYNOTE SPEAKER

KARLA FC HOLLOWAY

(LIVE) talk: "From Fact to Fiction: A Storied Life in Letters"

Karla FC Holloway is James B. Duke Emerita Professor of English, African-American Studies, and Professor of Law at Duke University. As a professor, her classrooms and scholarship focused on literature, law, and bioethics with a special interest in end-of-life histories of death and dying. In 2017 she turned her full attention to writing fiction (and tweeting -> @ProfHolloway). Her debut literary fiction (TriQuarterly 2019) is A Death in Harlem, a mystery set in the Harlem Renaissance. Gone Missing in Harlem has earned a Publisher's Weekly starred review. This novel bridges the Harlem Renaissance and the Great Depression and is a narrative about memory, mothering, and resilience. Since relinquishing the novel to its publication journey, she's been captivated by the intrigue of a new In Harlem story -- A Haunting in Harlem. Stay tuned!

CONTEMPORARY NARRATIVE SPEAKERS

At each annual ISSN Conference, there are three general sessions that give prominent scholars in the field of narrative studies a chance to present their work to the whole society, and to have an extended Q&A session to discuss their work. This year, we are excited to feature:

DAVID CICCORICCO

"Confessions of a Narratypical and the Burden of Embodied Simulation"

David is Associate Professor of English and Linguistics at the University of Otago in Dunedin, New Zealand. His research is focused on literary and narrative theory with an emphasis on narrative in digital media. He is the author of Reading Network Fiction (2007), a book on pre-Web and Web-based digital fiction, and Refiguring Minds in Narrative Media (2015), which is focused on cognitive approaches to narrative and literary theory in print novels, digital narratives, and story-driven videogames. His work appears in Narrative, Poetics Today, Digital Humanities Quarterly, Games and Culture and, most recently, he's published an article on "How to Play a Parable" in Storyworlds: a Journal of Narrative Studies. He is also the creator of dtour, a literary tourism app developed in partnership with the Dunedin UNESCO City of Literature, available free from the App Store and Google Play.

YOON SUN LEE

Yoon Sun Lee works in several fields: the eighteenth-century novel, British prose in the Romantic period, Asian American literature, narrative theory, and literary theory. She is the author of Nationalism and Irony (Oxford University Press, 2004), and Modern Minority: Asian American Literature and Everyday Life (Oxford University Press, 2013); her articles have recently appeared in journals and collections including Novel: A Forum on Fiction, Representations, The Cambridge Companion to Narrative Theory, and the Oxford Research Encyclopedia of Literature. An essay on narratology and taxonomy can be found in the October 2020 PMLA. Her most recent book examines how the plots of realist novels developed in tandem with natural philosophy in the eighteenth century. She teaches at Wellesley.

CONTEMPORARY NARRATIVE SPEAKERS

MARÍA-ÁNGELES MARTÍNEZ

María-Ángeles Martínez, PhD, is Associate Professor of English Linguistics at the Department of Modern Philology of the University of Alcalá (Madrid, Spain). After graduating from the University of Santiago de Compostela (Spain), she obtained a Master of Sciences in Teaching English at Aston University (Birmingham, UK), and a PhD in English Linguistics at the Complutense University of Madrid. Her research is in the field of cognitive literary linguistics, narrative discourse analysis, and cognitive narratology, and her work has been published in journals such as Narrative, Language and Literature, Journal of Literary Semantics, and Poetics Today. She is the author of the monograph Storyworld Possible Selves (De Gruyter, 2018), which presents a framework for the narratological, linguistic, and empirical study of narrative engagement and emotional response. Her current research explores the language of engagement with a focus on narrative intersubjectivity, perspective and focalization, and empirical reader response research.

RUTH PAGE

Ruth Page is a Senior Lecturer at the University of Birmingham in the Department of English Language and Linguistics. She spends her time teaching and writing about storytelling, especially focusing on the stories that people tell in social media contexts. She has written several books including Stories and Social Media (Routledge, 2012), Narratives Online: Shared Stories and Social Media (Cambridge University Press, 2018). Her publications in journals and edited collections have explored narratives in a wide range of contexts, from print literature and the mainstream media to conversational stories and stories published in online contexts such as blogs, social network sites and Wikipedia. She is also interested in multimodal discourse and is editor of New Perspectives on Narrative and Multimodality (Routledge, 2010); co-editor of Museum Thresholds: The Design and Media of Arrival (Routledge, 2018) and has published journal articles about selfie-taking from a discourse-analytic and pragmatic perspective.

CONTEMPORARY NARRATIVE SPEAKERS

JOHN PLOTZ

John Plotz is Barbara Mandel Professor of the Humanities at Brandeis University. His books include The Crowd: British Literature and Public Politics, Portable Property: Victorian Culture on the Move, and Semi-Detached: The Aesthetics of Virtual Experience since Dickens; he is at work on My Earthsea, a book about Ursula Le Guin. He is editor of the Public Books B-Sides and a forthcoming collection from Columbia University Press, B-Sides Books: Essays on Forgotten Favorites. He co-founded the Brandeis Justice Initiative and co-hosts the podcast Recall This Book.

ARNAUD SCHMITT

Arnaud Schmitt is a professor at the University of Bordeaux. His field of research is contemporary American literature (his Ph.D. dissertation focused on the narratological intricacies of Philip Roth's Zuckerman novels) and he has for almost two decades worked extensively on the concepts of 'autofiction' and 'self-narration.' His latest book is entitled The Phenomenology of Autobiography: Making it Real (Routledge, 2017). He is the co-recipient (with Stefan Kjerkegaard, Aarhus University) of the 2016 Hogan Prize for an outstanding essay published in a volume of a/b: Auto/Biography Studies. Thanks to a CNRS scholarship (2019-21), he is currently working on a new monograph on photographers who wrote memoirs, and more precisely on the way the text/image hybridity can both enhance and complexify the autobiographical experience.

SPECIAL EVENTS

SOCIAL HOUR HOSTED BY THE SUSTAINABILITY COMMITTEE

Please join the members of the Sustainability Committee for a social hour to kick off the 2021 ISSN conference. During this session we'll make new friends, catch up with old friends, and think together about how to get the most out of the remote conference experience. All are welcome!

PEDAGOGY "LUNCH": "TRIGGER WARNINGS, SAFE SPACES, AND TOUGH CONVERSATIONS"

Please join us for an informal discussion about teaching triggering or challenging material and creating safe and productive classroom spaces. Participants in various career stages who work on gender studies, queer theory, critical race theory, and Latinx studies will share experiences and strategies for the classroom.

NARRATIVE FOR SOCIAL JUSTICE: DEI TOWN HALL

The Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion committee and the Narrative for Social Justice (N4SJ) initiative invite you to a town hall to learn more about ongoing work in these areas in ISSN, followed by a discussion about concerns and ideas. In particular, the event will highlight the N4SJ teams and projects, including a podcast, videos, and social media focused on the roles narrative and narrative scholars can play in advocating for social justice. We welcome questions, ideas for projects, and new collaborators—please join us!

AWARDS CEREMONY

You are invited to attend the International Society for the Study of Narrative Awards Ceremony. In addition to providing general updates about the Society and future conferences, we will be awarding James Phelan the Booth Award for Lifetime Achievement in the Study of Narrative, the Perkins Prize, the Nadel Prize, and the Phelan Prize for the best essay in Narrative last year.

NEWCOMERS SOCIAL HOUR

If you are a first or second time participant in the Conference, the Executive Council of the ISSN invites you to meet others in your position as well as a few veterans of the ISSN. These veterans will serve as hosts and facilitators of friendly discussions among small groups (4-8 people).

BOOTH LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT AWARD PANEL: IN HONOR OF JAMES PHELAN

Chaired by Peter Rabinowitz, the Booth panel features prerecorded talks by Brian McHale (The Ohio State University), Yonina Hoffman (Westpoint Military Academy), Peter J. Rabinowitz (Hamilton College), Henrik Zetterberg-Nielsen (Aarhus University), and Robyn Warhol (The Ohio State University). Please view these talks in advance of the live conference, and then join us for the live Q&A, during which Honoree James Phelan will give his live response, and we will hold the Q&A for all panelists.

AFFILIATED INSTITUTIONS

This year's conference is utilizing a new method of funding. We are thrilled to have recruited several universities and other organizations to serve as affiliated institutions, which support the conference with smaller financial contributions. These institutions are leading universities, centers, and other programs from around the world devoted to the study of narrative.

In addition to supporting a conference we all enjoy, becoming an affiliated institution is one way of highlighting the contributions your university or institution is making to the study of narrative. We think that this will be particularly appealing to emerging programs that may not necessarily be widely associated with research in narrative. Faculty members at the conference routinely advise undergraduate and Masters students on potential PhD programs, so serving as an affiliated institution can draw attention to options for graduate study that may not be part of the current conversation between faculty and students.

If you think that your institution might be able to help sponsor a future Narrative conference in this way, talk to Dan Punday (dpunday@english.msstate.edu) for more details. Thank you to all of our affiliated institutions!

The Aachen Center for Cognitive and Empirical Literary Studies (ACCELS) serves as an international platform for exchange among scholars studying the processes of understanding literature and other cultural artifacts on the basis of the cognitive sciences and empirical methods.

The center provides a unique ground on which to pool the knowledge of experts in their different fields, to initiate collaborative and transdisciplinary research projects, and to thus further the development of cognitive and empirical literary studies. Our members teach courses in BA and MA study programs focused on cognitive and empirical approaches to literature. Most prominently, ACCELS has established itself as an initiator for internationally renowned and interdisciplinary cooperative projects, annual workshops, event series, master classes, and conferences.

Pursuing the empirical study of literary reception in flesh-and-blood readers and theorizing reception in cognitive terms, ACCELS stands for innovative research in the humanities. Find out more at accels.rwth-aachen.de

OUR AMBITION

The Aachen Center for Cognitive and Empirical Literary Studies (ACCELS) was founded in May 2019 under the guidance of Ralf Schneider, Jan Alber, and Sven Strasen and is rooted in the English Department of RWTH Aachen University (Germany). It serves as an international platform for exchange among scholars studying the processes of understanding literature and other cultural artifacts on the basis of the cognitive sciences and empirical methods. Pursuing the empirical study of literary reception in flesh-and-blood readers and theorizing reception in cognitive terms, ACCELS stands for innovative research in the humanities.

The center provides a unique ground on which to pool the knowledge of experts in their different fields, to initiate collaborative and transdisciplinary research projects, and to thus further the development of cognitive and empirical literary studies internationally. Literary reception offers routes into investigating the complex interactions between cognitive and emotional factors of comprehension, as well as the relationship between general mental dispositions and culturally specific meaning. ACCELS contributes to this field not only by conducting its own innovative, high-quality research. Its members teach courses in BA and MA study programs focused on cognitive and empirical approaches to literature. Most prominently, ACCELS has established itself as an initiator for internationally renowned and interdisciplinary cooperative projects, annual workshops, event series, and conferences.

Aachen Center
for Cognitive and Empirical Literary Studies

RWTHAACHEN UNIVERSITY

OUR GOALS

- The center initiates and coordinates cooperative and interdisciplinary projects in empirical reception research.
- We organize lecture series, workshops, conferences and master classes with international experts working in the fields of Cognitive and Empirical Literary Studies.
- The center provides access to laboratories, hardware and software for empirical research into reception processes.
- We are open to hosting recipients of research fellowships such as those awarded by the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation.
- The center serves as a platform for exchanging information about current and planned PhD and postdoctoral research projects in the fields of cognitive and empirical literary studies.

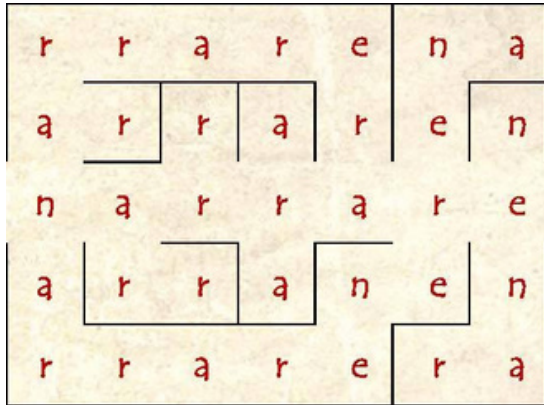

OUR HISTORY

Since its foundation in May 2019, ACCELS has already initiated several events that have sparked further research ideas and enhanced collaboration. Our history so far includes:

- October 2019 - January 2020: Lecture Series Empirical Approaches to Literature - Chances and Challenges
- October 2020: Annual Workshop The Study of Literature, Reading, and Cognition - Interdisciplinary Approaches, Concepts, and Terms
- November 2020 - June 2021: Event Series Pandemic Storytelling
- April 2021: Young Researcher's Conference Narratives of Body and Mind

WHAT'S TO COME

In the Autumn of 2021, we will start a new MA program in "Cognitive, Digital, and Empirical English Studies", which incorporates cognitive and empirical theories, models and methods - including scientific approaches and methods from Digital Humanities - more strongly than traditional courses in Literary Studies and Linguistics do. Furthermore, in October 2021 we will host our annual, international and interdisciplinary workshop, this year with a focus on Embodiment and Cognition - State of the Art, Critical Assessments, Perspectives. We are always interested in fruitful collaboration. Find out more about our team, our aims and initiatives at accels.rwth-aachen.de

NARRARE: CENTRE FOR INTERDISCIPLINARY NARRATIVE STUDIES, TAMPERE UNIVERSITY FINLAND

Narrare: Centre for Interdisciplinary Narrative Studies (2014-) at Tampere University advances the internationally renowned and interdisciplinary work that our team in literary studies and social sciences has been doing for more than two decades. Narrare brings together researchers in literary studies, social sciences, game studies, media and journalism, history, philosophy, education, psychology, health sciences, information systems research, political science and administrative studies. The centre's essential aim is to develop consistent narrative-theoretical methodology for all disciplines working with narrative.

Our central research areas are:

- interdisciplinary narrative theory and analysis
- convention and invention in narratives
- narrative agency and positioning
- narrative, well-being, and dangers of storytelling.

Narrare hosts a range of research projects on and around the main foci. Since 2020, Narrare organizes an open online lecture series to present and discuss contemporary narrative studies as well as to bring together those who study narratives at Tampere University and elsewhere. The series invites anyone to listen and discuss the topics presented, and the aim is an open, multi- and interdisciplinary discussion on data, methods, theories and the state of research on narratives.

PARIS CENTRE FOR NARRATIVE MATTERS, UNIVERSITÉ DE PARIS

Centre et réseau de recherches dédiés à l'étude des pratiques et des théories du récit Awardee of the IdEx Université de Paris 2019 Call for Projects Dynamique Recherche .

OUR HISTORY

The project to create a Paris Centre for Narrative Matters is the result of a collaborative effort carried out over nearly three years between Sylvie Patron, maîtresse de conférences habilitée à diriger des recherches at the Université Paris Diderot, now Université de Paris, and Brian Schiff, professor and chair of the Department of Psychology at the American University of Paris, involving the conception, organization, and publication of two international conferences:

1. Narrative Matters 2012: Life and Narrative, American University of Paris, May 29th–June 1st, 2012;
2. Narrative Matters 2014: Narrative Knowing/Récit et Savoir, Université Paris Diderot/Université de Paris, June 23rd–27th, 2014.

The project will be based on the members of the scientific committees of these conferences, who will draw up an activity program, and on the network formed by the conference participants, who will develop and perpetuate these activities on the international level. The goal is to exploit the research potential revealed by the success of these events by drawing together currently dispersed energies and competencies.

The Paris Centre for Narrative Matters was created in September 2014, and its work began in the form of a seminar organized alternately by the Université Paris Diderot/Université de Paris and the American University of Paris. It was consolidated by the signing of a convention for student exchanges between the two institutions, and three project submissions, including the Dynamique Recherche Call for Projects of the IdEx Université de Paris.

OUR AXES OF RESEARCH

The major thematic axes that will be developed in the Centre in the first instance, arise out of the work of the Narrative Matters 2012 and Narrative Matters 2014 conferences:

- Interactions between life and narrative
- Relationship between narrative and knowledge
- Narrative identity
- Narrative care, narrative medicine
- Narrative hermeneutics
- History of knowledge and epistemology

The Centre will welcome all initiatives to create workshops, conferences and other activities pertaining to these themes.

PARIS CENTRE FOR NARRATIVE MATTERS, UNIVERSITÉ DE PARIS

OUR AMBITION

Over the past decades in the English-speaking world, but also in Germany, Austria, Nordic countries, and so on, there has been a renewal of studies and research on narrative, in all its forms and all the varieties of its functions:

1. What has been called in the English-speaking world the “narrative turn,” which has placed the issue of narrative at the center not only of historical, anthropological, psychological and psychoanalytical thought, but also juridical and even medical thought;

2. The revival of narratology (the theory of literary narrative) in a plural and diversified form, which earned it the name of “narratologies” or “postclassical narratology.”

The proliferation of works and papers in the field of narrative research raises a certain number of questions, including the following: Is the meeting between the disciplines of the narrative turn and postclassical narratology purely circumstantial, or is it able to produce true interdisciplinary interactions?

Today, the Paris Centre for Narrative Matters wants to go beyond the state of the art:

- by promoting dialogue between narratology and narrative inquiry, and more generally between the social sciences and the humanities on narrative matters;
- by practicing an active and proactive interdisciplinarity, but one which is also attentive to disciplinary specificities and history;
- by considering Anglophone and Francophone authors together, encouraging bilingual projects, translations, and the international mobility of researchers;
- by creating relationships between research and other professions concerned with issues of narrative (psychological support, social work, teaching, etc.).

OUR OBJECTIVES

- to develop and disseminate research work based on the interaction between the disciplines of the narrative turn and postclassical narratology;
- to bring together young researchers and experienced ones, for example through an invitation program for researchers;
- to offer assistance to these researchers in preparing research projects, whether French or European;
- to ensure the coordination of their research work, and the dissemination of results through its activities and publications;
- to compare the pedagogical experiences, to facilitate and intensify the exchanges between the partner institutions on the educational level;
- to organize activities among various audiences.

The centre will constitute both a place for scientific exchange and a space for developing projects, in order to become a key player in the field of narrative practices and theories.

One of very few narrative research centres based in the UK, we define narrative very broadly and are concerned with examining it as a structuring mechanism across multiple media and disciplines. We are also interested in exploring how narrative interacts with and impacts on cultures and communities. As an interdisciplinary research centre we bring together a range of diverse approaches and methodologies from members across Bournemouth University. We host monthly research seminars and have organised several international conferences and symposia on topics including Location-based Storytelling and Nonhuman narratives.

The Centre Head is Professor Bronwen Thomas and the Deputy Head is Dr Julia Round.

Current staff and research student areas of interest and expertise are listed below and we welcome applications from prospective students wishing to pursue research in these areas. For further information please contact Bournemouth University's Doctoral College. Staff from NCCR also teach on several MA courses at BU, including MA English and Literary Media and MA Creative Writing and Publishing.

- Digital writing and reading
- Life writing and Autofiction
- Comics/sequential art
- Medical Humanities
- Memory Studies
- Book history and publishing
- Fans and online communities

Led by NCCR's Dr Jim Pope, Bournemouth University is home to the annual New Media Prize which showcases the latest innovations in electronic literature, interactive fiction and digital journalism. Current funded projects include DRIVE, a research network on digital reading bringing together researchers, stakeholders and practitioners from Africa, the US and Europe led by Professor Bronwen Thomas. Collaborative publications include Real Lives, Celebrity Stories: Narratives of Ordinary and Extraordinary People edited by Bronwen Thomas and Julia Round (Bloomsbury 2014) and The Routledge Companion to Literary Media co-edited by Bronwen Thomas, Julia Round and Astrid Ensslin (forthcoming 2022).

Columbia Narrative Medicine, a division within the Department of Medical Humanities and Ethics of Columbia University, is proud to be an Affiliated Institution of this annual ISSN conference. Narrative medicine is a form of scholarly and clinical practice that recognizes the obligatorily narrative dimensions of the experiences of health, illness, disability, and health care and provides means toward recognition of and affiliation with those who seek and give care.

Through the pandemics of COVID-19 and racial injustice in the United States, narrative medicine (NM) has intensified its educational and clinical presence at Columbia and elsewhere. Since mid-March 2020, we have led a large team of NM-trained facilitators to mount free, public-access Zoom sessions for an hour of creative and reflective work designed to reduce COVID's widespread social isolation and fear. It now meets 3-4 times per week, hosted for international participants in 5 languages. We are studying the outcomes of this amazing effort (www.narrativemedicine.blog). We provide narrative training for many clinical units—oncology, palliative care, child psychiatry, general pediatrics, internal medicine, geriatrics, family medicine, and the Medical Intensive Care Unit—giving faculty and trainees means to examine their own experiences through COVID and to accompany one another through the ordeal.

Narrative medicine continues its race and justice efforts (an outcomes research report of one anti-racism workshop will be published in the May 2021 issue of Narrative). In view of the race disparities in US prison populations, a team of faculty and students are bringing NM pedagogy to incarcerated persons, starting at San Quentin State Prison in Marin County, CA. Within the clinical space, NM is training a large inter-professional cohort of Columbia clinicians to address health care disparities, social determinants of health, and lack of diversity, equity, and inclusion in the health professions within an anti-racism framework of combatting white supremacy and addressing systemic and structural racism in our own health center.

COLUMBIA | NARRATIVE MEDICINE

The Division directs a Master of Science in Narrative Medicine graduate program on the Arts & Sciences campus of Columbia and a Certification of Professional Achievement in Narrative Medicine for clinically oriented training. We are piloting an inter-disciplinary effort to train humanities doctoral candidates and clinicians how to teach the medical humanities. If successful, this pilot will become a Certificate Program for doctoral candidates in the humanities and health professionals who hope to teach medical humanities in their future careers. Columbia's medical school has intensified its decades-long NM curriculum with an expanded Narrative & Social Medicine Scholarly Project and a new Narrative Medicine StudioLab for faculty and students to gather as makers and students of the arts and humanities and for researching the outcomes of their inclusion in health care settings.

In partnership with Oxford University Press, the Division has recently inaugurated a Narrative Medicine Book Series. We continue our monthly Narrative Medicine Rounds with now virtual presentations from artists, scholars, clinicians, writers, engineers, and musicians (see website for schedules). Finally, the Division has created an ambitious Continuing Narrative Education program for the alumni of their Master's Program and have launched Narrative Medicine International to cohere the growing global circle of education, training, and practice in this still young and very vibrant field.

PROJECT NARRATIVE, OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

Project Narrative (PN) <https://projectnarrative.osu.edu> is a cluster of faculty, visiting scholars, and graduate students at the Ohio State University dedicated to producing and promoting state-of-the-art research and teaching in narrative studies. Project Narrative has twelve core faculty across four departments: Katra Byram (German), Angus Fletcher (English), Jared Gardner (English), Leigh Gilmore (English), Sarah Johnston (Classics and Comparative Studies), Brian McHale (English), Sean O'Sullivan (English), James Phelan (English), Amy Shuman (English), Robyn Warhol (English), Julia Watson (Comparative Studies), and Karen Winstead (English).

Collectively, this group has expertise in:

- Narrative in fiction, lifewriting, poetry, and drama
- Cognitive, rhetorical, formalist, feminist and queer, historicist, and other approaches to narrative
- comics and graphic narrative
- television narrative
- film narrative
- human rights and narrative
- narrative and ethics
- race, gender, sexuality, nationality and narrative
- disability and narrative
- narrative and medicine
- everyday narratives
- narrative and postmodernism

Prospective graduate students interested in focusing on narrative studies are invited to write to the current Director, James Phelan Phelan.1@osu.edu, or any of the core faculty (e-mail addresses readily available at osu.edu/findpeople)

Project Narrative annually offers a Summer Institute, and we are currently accepting applications for the 2021 program on Narrative Theory and Social Justice, June 21 to July 2, co-directed by James Phelan and Robyn Warhol. The Institute, which will be conducted on-line, will establish a dialogue among primary narratives across a range of media by artists of color, critical race theory, and narrative theory. For more information, go to <https://projectnarrative.osu.edu/2021-PNSI>

MISSISSIPPI STATE UNIVERSITY™ DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH

Mississippi State University College of Arts and Sciences is the university's largest and most diverse academic college, with programs ranging from hard sciences to natural and social sciences to the humanities. The college offers a vibrant atmosphere of interdisciplinary research and the chance to study narrative theory in fields such as digital media, film, food, games, literature, gender studies, medical humanities, military history, philosophy and religion. The college offers a unique opportunity to study narrative theory through numerous annual events that bring together academic trailblazers, authors, business leaders, corporate communicators, historians, musicians and writers who share their own stories and continue the storytelling tradition of the state.

In addition to hosting the International Conference on Narrative in 2020, the college houses two leading narrative theorists in its Department of English. Professor and Head of the Department Daniel Punday recently published Playing at Narratology: Digital Media as Narrative Theory, while Professor Kelly Marsh received accolades for her 2016 book The Submerged Plot and the Mother's Pleasure from Jane Austen to Arundhati Roy. Theory and Interpretation of Narrative Series.

Other publications of note are:

- Department of Philosophy Assistant Professor Kristin Boyce's "What Did James Show his Readers in The Wings of the Dove?" in The Henry James Review 35.1
- Department of History Associate Professor Andrew Lang's and Andrew Bledsoe's Upon the Fields of Battle. Essays on the Military History of America's Civil War
- Department of History Associate Professor Peter Messer's Revolution as Reformation. Protestant Faith in the Age of Revolutions, 1688-1832
- Department of History Assistant Professor Courtney E. Thompson's An Organ of Murder. Crime, Violence, and Phrenology in Nineteenth-Century America
- Department of English Associate Professor Jervette Ward's Real Sister: Stereotypes, Respectability, and Black Women in Reality TV

Prospective graduate students interested in focusing on narrative studies are invited to write to the head of the English department Daniel Punday at dpunday@english.msstate.edu or any other core faculty (e-mail addresses readily available at <https://www.msstate.edu/directory/employee>).

AWARDS: CALLS FOR NOMINATIONS

Perkins Prize

Established in 1994, the Perkins Prize honors Barbara Perkins and George Perkins, the founders of both The Journal of Narrative Technique and the Society itself. The prize, awarded to the book making the most significant contribution to the study of narrative in a given year, provides $1,000 plus a contribution of $500 toward the winning author's expenses for attending the Narrative Conference at which the award will be presented.

The Perkins Prize is conceived as a book prize rather than an author prize. All books on the topic of narrative, whether edited collections, collaboratively written books, or monographs, are eligible to compete. If an edited collection or collaboratively written book is selected, the prize goes to the editor(s) or the collaborators. The winner of the competition for books published in 2020 will be announced at the MLA Convention in Washington, DC, in January 2022, and the prize will be presented at the 2022 International Conference on Narrative in Chichester.

To nominate books with a copyright date of 2020, please send an email with "Perkins Prize" in the subject line to the chair of the judging committee, Sylvie Patron, sylvie.patron@u-paris.fr. Publisher, third-party, and self-nominations are all appropriate. Copies of books must be sent directly to each of the three judges. Please indicate in the nominating email whether the publisher or the author will send the books. The deadline for receipt of books by the judges is June 1, 2021.

Books should be sent by authors or their publishers directly to each of the three committee members:

AWARDS: CALLS FOR NOMINATIONS

Alan Nadel Prize for Best Essay by a Graduate Student

All graduate students who present papers at the conference are invited to compete for the Alan Nadel Prize for best essay by a graduate student. The winner will receive a copy of a Perkins Prize-winning book of his, her, or their choice and will be encouraged to expand the winning paper for consideration by Narrative. In addition, the 2021 winner will be eligible for $500 toward expenses to attend the 2022 conference.

Submit papers electronically as attachments (Word or PDF) to both of the judges: Alice Bell (a.bell@shu.ac.uk) and Marta Figlerowicz (marta.figlerowicz@yale.edu). Papers must be received by July 1, 2021. Papers must be unrevised conference presentations. While formatting changes, correction of typos, and the addition of a Works Cited page are expected, changes to the substance of the argument are not acceptable. The idea is to reward the work presented at the Conference rather than the work done after the Conference.

CALLS FOR PAPERS: NARRATIVE 2022

Soon we will welcome proposals for papers and panels on all aspects of narrative in any genre, period, discipline, language, and medium for Narrative 2022. Next year's conference will be hybrid (a mixture of in-person and virtual) with in-person activities taking place next summer at the University of Chichester in Chichester, England, and hosted by Professor Hugo Frey.

Members who are interested in hosting a future conference are encouraged to get in touch with Sue J. Kim (sue_kim@uml.edu).

THANK YOU

We sincerely thank all of the individuals who have made this conference possible. We welcome all of the new members into our community, and invite you to stay in touch!

STAY IN TOUCH!
