Empowering Youth to Advance Policy Solutions for School Mental Health

This event will be centered on opportunities to advance comprehensive mental health education and supports in schools through policy change at the local, state, and federal levels with a focus on lifting up youth voices and ongoing advocacy efforts.

This is the first of a three-part summer series in which Mindful Philanthropy will highlight opportunities for philanthropy to invest in solutions that support the mental health of young people in schools.

William Antoine McClain Jr. is a recent high school graduate from Augusta, Georgia. William will be attending Stanford University this upcoming fall to double major in Public Policy and Economics. William is a summer intern at Mindful Philanthropy and a member of the Mental Health National Advisory Board. William is the founder of the William McClain Youth Platform, a 527 political organization that strives to enhance the knowledge of American citizens about the policymaking process through forums while supporting politicians. Recently, the organization has objectively prepared voters in the Central Area of Georgia for elections.

Nia West-Bey, PhD
Director of Youth Policy, Center for Law & Social Policy (CLASP)
Nia West-Bey is the director of CLASP’s Youth Policy team. Her work is focused on youth and young adult mental health, strategies to support young, low-income parents of color as well as girls and young women of color. She is a community psychologist with expertise in youth development, qualitative and quantitative data interpretation and analysis, and the intersection of psychology, social policy, and program evaluation. Prior to joining CLASP, Dr. West-Bey co-founded and spent 10 years as executive director of a community-based nonprofit organization offering youth development programming to young people in foster care in Washington, DC. Through this work, she had the opportunity to learn and experience how national and local policy impacts disconnected youth. Dr. West-Bey earned her MA and PhD in community psychology from NYU and completed her undergraduate degree at Swarthmore College.
