

BIPOC HEALING CIRCLE

We are On the Margins (OTM), an organization that collaborates with others to design and implement anti-racist, equitable, and affirming programs, practices, initiatives, and policies. We will be offering coaching and healing circles to UC Santa Cruz starting October 15, 2021.

BIPOC Healing Circle

Beginning Friday, October 15, 2021, OTM will offer a BIPOC healing circle to UC Santa Cruz students. This healing circle will be a space for Black, Indigenous, and People of Color (BIPOC) to learn, heal, and transform in community. Healing circles help us to acknowledge and unpack harm, loss, and violence while supporting one another on this path. This is a five-week closed group. Our first BIPOC healing circle will be reserved for UC Santa Cruz students who identify as Black males.

When will it be offered? This circle will be facilitated on Fridays from 10:30 AM to 12:00 PM. Each group will meet weekly for five weeks.

Who will offer it? This circle is BIPOC held and led. It will be facilitated by Dr. Aaron Horn and Dr. Daniela Dominguez.

Who is it for? This group is for people who self-identify as BIPOC and who are interested in sharing, unpacking, and holding other people's stories. The first BIPOC healing circle will be reserved for UC Santa Cruz students who identify as Black males.

Where will it be offered? On Zoom (a link will be emailed after the student registers). This will be a space for self-care and community care.

How will it be offered? Each circle is 1.5 hours long. The group will be capped at 10 participants. Once these ten spots are filled, you can still fill out the registration form to be added to the waitlist.

This five-week closed group offers an opportunity to create compassionate connections with others. If you would like to learn more information or participate, please visit our website to register. <https://www.onthemargins.us/uc-santa-cruz>
