On the site of the future Hotel Sebastopol, artist and MacArthur genius grant winner Ned Kahn has created a kinetic installation called the "Air Garden."

DESIGN

A Surprise Sculpture Garden

In downtown Sebastopol, artist Ned Kahn transforms an overlooked space with art that shimmers and reflects the breeze.

By Mary Callahan Photography by John Burgess

NED KAHN'S UNIQUELY ENGINEERED KINETIC ARTWORK—all hinged squares, flapping chains, mail, patterns, and shapes—is displayed in public places around the globe and someday soon it could fly about the International Space Station. Though usually constructed on a grand scale—resulting in huge, reflective expanses that respond to wind and shifting air currents—Kahn's latest endeavor treats his Sebastopol neighbors to a temporary collection of smaller pieces right downtown, on Depot Street.

OUR GUIDE FOR GETTING OUT AND ABOUT

Gallery: Sydney Pfaff of Legion Projects in Healdsburg has an eye for new talent and often works with young artists of color.

Favorite new gallery

GALLERY OWNER Sydney Pfaff of Healdsburg's Legion Projects is bringing new energy to Healdsburg's art scene with exhibits of emerging contemporary artists. "I don't want to do what's expected," explains Pfaff, who says she's excited to introduce fresh voices to the Sonoma community.

Pfaff, who worked as a fashion journalist before launching an art career in 2013, curates contemporary shows that rotate about every six weeks. Her bright, streamlined space, with a lone mural on the wall outside (the mural also changes a few times a year) and a line of skylights uncovered during recent renovations, is tucked into a cluster of modern gray studios near Big John's Market, north of the Healdsburg Plaza.

Pfaff has quickly plugged into the local scene, exhibiting the work of artist and educator Jessica Martin (that's her mural in this photo) and collaborating with winemakers like Alice Wampler Barns of SUTRO Wine Co. and chefs like Porcupine Saboriano. Recently of SingleThread, for fun openings and events, which spill out onto a sunny, pea gravel patio and adjacent greenhouse. On view through August 7 are figurative portraits of women of color by the moment Oakland artist Taylor Smith, paired with museum-worthy explorations in a sumptuous palette of turquoise, magenta, and coral by San Francisco's Anoushka Minchikandani. —Angela Peterson

A day with Petaluma artist and educator Orin Carpenter

By Megan McCrea Photography by Beth Schlanker

AS ORIN CARPENTER TELLS IT, HIS ART CAREER BEGAN AT AGE 5, with painting on walls. He and his mother had just returned from the library, and he needed to paint. "This was one of those days where I ran out of paper. I was like, 'You know what? I gotta get this out.' Seeing the white wall, he couldn't resist."

Carpenter's interests have led him from his native Memphis to the Bay Area, from graphic design into a career as an artist and educator. Today, he's a whirl of activity: teaching art at Marin Catholic, completing a doctorate in educational technology, leading workshops on art and racial justice, and, of course, making art in his studio. Recently, he's been immersed in two series: "Quarantine State of Mind," abstract paintings navigating this past year, and "In Danger Species," mixed-media meditations on the experience of living while Black in America. Carpenter had been mulling over the idea behind the latter for some time. Then last year, when Ahmaud Arbery was killed in Georgia, "I said, 'You know what? I can't sit on this anymore. I have to create.' It was more for me to express and have an outlet from the anger, you know? George Floyd and Breonna Taylor, the countless others. That gave me the energy for that series."

Carpenter has just been named an artist in residence at MarinMOCa, where he'll have a solo exhibit this December, and shows his work at the Artize Gallery in Palm Springs. Carpenter has been sheltering-in-place—and teaching high school art remotely—from Petaluma, where he lives with his wife Michele, son Caleb, daughter Kyndall, and the family's two rescue cats, Lando and Phasma.

4:30 a.m. I'm an early riser. I usually wake up anywhere from 4 to 5. Once I get up, being a Christian, I pray and read devotion and kind of start the day.

6:00 a.m. Sometimes I start working here, with my sketches. Then I have to get out of the space, and bring outside in a rehearsal for me.

7:00 a.m. Early on a weekend morning, when it's quiet, I'll wander around downtown Petaluma, kind of meditate, sketch there. I'll go to Starbucks, get a white chocolate mocha, and maybe a chocolate croissant. I mean, might as well overdo it with the chocolate! Then I visit Brian's Comics. And don't forget how old you are—you feel like a kid when you walk

Follow the blue signs...

Welcome to Sonoma County Art Trails, Sebastopol Center for the Arts fall open studio event that unlocks the studios of Sonoma County artists for your delight.

This 36th year of the program, we surprise you with 121 artists. Did you know that these experienced artists must go through a rigorous selection procedure judged by five independent jurors, to be accepted into the program?

For two weekends in September, you can explore their artistic sanctuaries and discover the person behind those paintings, drawings, prints and sculptures in glass, wood, bronze, stone or clay... Listen to their stories and learn about the talent and skill involved to reach such beauty. What would the world be without artists? But, how hard would life be for an artist if no-one would appreciate, or even purchase, their work? You make that happen.

Look for the artist's educational displays on the art process or find out times for a demonstration.

As a starting point for your studio tour, visit the preview exhibition at the Sebastopol Center for the Arts where every artist has one piece in the gallery—or visit one of our other mini previews. The information can be found on page 25.

In this collectors guide, which is the perfect tool for marking your favorites, circle the locations on the inserted map, and you will be ready for an artistic adventure, guided by the blue signs to the studios.

It is a perfect yearlong artist directory. Many artists will welcome you by appointment later.

After a year of seclusion, enjoy your regained freedom to roam in this stunning county, a place with a thriving artists community, also known for its superb cuisine and world renowned wineries.

Whether you are an artist yourself, an established or aspiring collector, or a tourist with a taste for finer things, there is something to be found for everyone in Sonoma County Art Trails.
