Guess what?

Attendance is up at Mobius. We've had great audiences this fall for most events. They're great audiences because we've been filling up the house and because people are getting involved - you're volunteering, sending donations and most importantly talking to the artists after performances.

Speaking of talking to us - we now have a permanent Comments Book that we leave on the information table. We are always interested in your comments about the work you have just seen or about Mobius in general. Even if you're not the type to leave comments in comments books and think it so much flapping of gums on paper, please consider trying it. And if you're shy about speaking up but have plenty to say, the Comments Book is the perfect opportunity.

At Mobius, the audience is part of the artwork. The artists who present work here rely on your feedback. Much of the work originally developed and presented at Mobius goes on to further development and additional performances or exhibitions, so your feedback has a chance to be put to work. And, if you have questions rather than comments, please find the artist after the performance or at the Gallery Talk, to get answers to your queries about the work.

Finally, it's not always easy for us to evaluate the impact our programs have on our audiences. So Mobius wants and needs your comments about Mobius!

The spring is packed with programs. Be sure to consult your calendar, plan ahead and make reservations!

Nancy Adams, Co-Director

MOBIUS CALL FOR PROPOSALS!
Deadline: 5 pm, July 15, 1992
For Projects to take place
September, 1992-January, 1993

The Mobius Artists Group is seeking proposals from Boston and New England artists for original, experimental work in the performing, media and visual arts, particularly work that falls outside the traditionally defined art forms. Call Mobius, (617) 542-7416, for proposal guidelines. If you have questions, call the Mobius office to discuss your project. Please do not submit a proposal without referring to the proposal guidelines.

Mobius offers the space for 50% of the the box office receipts. For non-box office events (ie installations) Mobius provides use of 1,000 square foot exhibition space in exchange for work or in-kind services mutually decided on. In addition, Mobius offers low-cost rental of lighting and sound equipment. Mobius will also provide PR support, including printed mailing labels for over 200 news media contacts, and an opportunity to write about your work in the Mobius Newsletter which is distributed to over 2,500 individuals and organizations nationwide. A Mobius artist will work with you to provide advice and information, but remember, your project will be essentially self produced.

Mobius also is interested in receiving inquiries from local artists who are interested in curating work at Mobius. Talk to a Mobius Artists Group member or call Nancy or Marilyn at the Mobius office.
This performance (a work in progress) is a piece of the larger project we call, for lack of another name, Vampires. It could be said that the collaborations of this trio are variations on a theme; a weaving and growing web dealing in darkness and light. Whether we want it or not, The Month of Blood and Bonfires is a piece of this continuing puzzle.

The doors open after The Month of Blood and Bonfires ends. The audience spills out into the white room. Tea and Finger sandwiches are on a table. The space is very light - almost like a blinding sun - after being in the closed quarters of the black box. And at this point, Visum et Repartum begins.

We might consider putting these 2 pieces together, maybe in one night or over two nights. Nothing is clear yet. That's still down the road. Where The Month of Blood and Bonfires was a trap; Visum et Repartum could be thought of as a maze.

The pieces we are working with, not necessarily in any interlocking order:
- Boxes - the means of anonymous cultural transport
- Vampires - the concept that has traveled with mankind
- Culture - inherent perversities
- Blood - Blood is Life
- Life everlasting - an old promise, "If you follow the rules this is your reward," or a never-ending nightmare.
- Resurrection - you have to die for this one
- Self-consuming - the salamander eating its own tail
- Commodification of:
  - sex
  - age
  - the womb
  - beliefs
  - values
  - humanity
- Humanity as virus?
- Civilization as virus?
- Nature - stark, unromanticized, brutal
- Renewal.

Visum et Repartum (Seen and Discovered)
Cathy Nolan, Mari Novotny-Jones
Ean White
April 2 - 4
Thursday - Saturday, at 8 pm

If you're kicking yourself because you missed Heaven & Hell (the group show of performances and things by the intimidating Johnson sisters - Kristin and Jennifer, faux-photographer-anthropologist Phil Burnham, Ohio's own Victor Basch, Denver's Sam Armatas, Lonnie McAdoo, Eric Lutes, the ever popular Lucy Vail, performer Dennis Downey, the charming Ron Platt, John Peitso, Tony V. and possibly others) well DON'T WORRY, because it has been postponed. The new dates are listed above.

Do you teach? Do you have school aged-children?
Mobius welcomes inquiries from school and community groups about special educational programs. We are happy to arrange special gallery talks by the artist(s) whose work is on exhibit. We also may be able to arrange for discounted tickets for high school students who wish to attend evening performances. Call Nancy Adams at mobius.

If you still believe in democracy and the political process.
Our state arts council needs you. In January, Governor Weld recommended to nearly double the budget of the Massachusetts Cultural Council (MCC) budget from $3.5 million to the $6.1 million the Council requested. (While it's a move in the right direction, don't forget that the Council's budget was $27 million only three years ago.) It is essential that you write to your representatives in the State House to ensure their support of the Governor's recommendation.

Let's see, what should we do to get you to write? Ok. We'll offer $1 off any performance at Mobius if you bring in a copy of a letter from one of your state representatives or your state senator acknowledging a letter from you regarding MCC funding. Of course you should do it just because you should, but we know how much we like to be rewarded for things we should do anyway.

Video Bill Gilbert photographer Landon Rose
"PENUMBRA"/"C PERIOD COMMA"
An Attempt at Conduction
Masashi Harada
April 17 - 18
Friday and Saturday, at 8 pm

Improvising musicians often strive to achieve a state in which the threshold between interior and exterior disappears. The situation from the point of view of audience is similar: when the musicians and the audience are connecting, the listeners feel that they are the ones who are playing. Thus it's not a question of a boundary or a threshold, but rather of the connection between the exterior and the interior.

The first Masashi Harada performance and to some extent with information provided as a visual interpretation of an absent sound. The second -- that creativity takes place.

The performance I wish to do at Mobius consists of two pieces. Instrumentalists conducted by me, in which each improviser attempts to connect the surface of the body with its internal vibration through the surface. The surface is the threshold between the interior and the exterior, the place where things meet. When things meet, they never meet exactly, but always overlap. It is in the discrepancy between two surfaces -- a space that the Western musical tradition has sought to deny or repress -- that creativity takes place.

The body has its own length of vibration. Playing an instrument is transmitting a vibration from the body. But the instrument is more than merely a neutral vessel. The piano, for example, is itself a composition, a structure that distills five or six hundred years of Western music. This structure has its own music, its own cultural memory. When I play piano, I superimpose the system of my body -- its inherent physical vibration and the conscious and unconscious memory -- onto its composition.

I wish to extend this system by conducting a group of musicians. Conducting is an important part of the origin of my musical education. I started out by air conducting to records of symphonies or chamber music. Eventually I became aware of conducting as a kind of dance. At the same time, I brought this aspect of dance to my improvisational work in percussion and piano.

Dance is not only movement. It also transmits the body's vibration through the surface. The surface is the threshold between the interior and the exterior, the place where things meet. When things meet, they never meet exactly, but always overlap. It is in the discrepancy between two surfaces -- a space that the Western musical tradition has sought to deny or repress -- that creativity takes place.

The performance I wish to do at Mobius consists of two pieces. The first "Penumbra" is a solo unaccompanied movement that attempts to connect the surface of the body with its internal movement in a way that, hopefully, the audience will perceive as a visual interpretation of an absent sound. The second "C Period Comma" is a group improvisation for 11 instrumentalists conducted by me, in which each improviser will work to some extent within parameters set prior to the performance and to some extent with information provided during the performance by the conductor.

Masashi Harada

PIECE FOR APRIL: AS YET UNTITLED
Tom Plsek, Joanne Rice, and Larry Johnson
April 24 - 25 Friday and Saturday, at 8 pm

Initial Conceptions/Directions/Influences
1. Anton Webern(1883-1945), who was one of the most important innovators of musical language of the twentieth century. His works are today largely left ignored, although one would be hard pressed to find a late twentieth century composer who has not been affected, one way or the other, by his music. He is perhaps, the only composer to completely grasp the essence of what was later to be termed serialism and to produce an opus of works in which its full potential was creatively and artistically realized.
2. Utilization of scales of extremes. This is derived, at least in part, from the works of Webern who explored the extremes of aural perception.
3. One score for all. I want to see if it is possible to construct a "score" for performers from various disciplines. This follows naturally from my concern with #2 above. Very few works, at least to my knowledge, have been created in which diverse performance disciplines make use of the same score.
4. Use of a fairly rigid structure. Performers are to be limited by formal constraints. Yet,
5. the Performance should be characterized by spontaneity and improvisation.

Realization
Concern with the above issues led to the creation of a score with, so far, the following characteristics:
• It involves the interaction of three performers from three different performance disciplines: for this performance, music, text, performance artist.
• The basic structure consists of a 3 x 3 x 3 performance matrix; i.e. x, y, z axes creating a total of 27 events. The 3 axes are defined as follows:
  x axis: entropy, i.e a measure of the disorder
  y axis: dependency (on others' events, including the audience's)
  z axis: determined by each performer
• Each event has a discrete value for each axis based on the following scale:
  -1 = minimum value
  0 = mean value
  +1 = maximum value
• Each performer creates his/her own 27 events. Some events can be very short, others much longer; the sum duration of each performer's events should be about one hour. The nature of the events is being worked out by the three of us in collaboration and independently.
• Each performer is to determine the connections from one event to the next; however, there should be a variety of methods used; e.g.
  moving directly from one to the other separation by time
  separation by space
  cued by other performer or audience etc.
• The order of the events is still to be determined; however, a logical progression will be established based on location within the 3 x 3 x 3 "performance" space [cube].

Tom Plsek
There was a time when dreaming was an essential activity. To a vast number of so-called primitive societies dreams were communication from tribal deities, or spirits. Dreams were insights and gifts. Our ancestors dreamt with ease and shared them with each other with the same respect and importance that they attached to food. Indeed, dreams were spiritual sustenance.

Dream Circle/Brigit's Feast is a group of 12 women who will begin dreaming together from early February until early May. The results of our dreaming will culminate in a 2-3 week exhibit at Mobius beginning on April 29.

Actually there will be 13 of us. Imbolc is also the feast of Brigit, a once great pagan Goddess that was usurped and rendered hideous (by her own plea to God, so they say) by Christianity. We intend to honor her as the great Pagan Triple Goddess and ask her to join us using a number of welcoming traditions that are still used in Ireland and Scotland to this day. The exhibit will include more information on Brigit and the feasts of Imbolc and Beltane as well as our dreams.

The Dream Group is designed to begin on Imbolc, a time that marks new beginnings. A time honored by our ancestors as the moment when the seeds first cracked open in the still cold earth ready to receive the increasing warmth of the sun. We will dream together until Beltane, the moment when new beginnings sprout and take hold.

At the exhibit you will be invited to share your dreams, by drawing or writing them out.

Ann Scott

---

PERSEPHONE AND HADES

texts by Steve Lydenberg
designed/directed by Marilyn Arsem
performed by Mari Novotny-Jones and David Miller

April 30 - May 2

These will be the 13th annual performances of Persephone and Hades. What has become an institution began as an experiment. We were curious to see the effect of time and memory on the work, both for the performers and the viewers. Has it changed over the years?

I remember the first year - we performed it in this very space, when it was the Helen Shlien Gallery. But we actually performed it several days before at a college in Maine. The audience there was quite rambunctious, testing the limits of the piece. It was a trial by fire, particularly for Mari. The audiences at the gallery here were just as challenging. It is one thing to prepare a piece, imagining what an audience might do with it, and quite another to actually test your premises.

What I do remember is a number of people being quite baffled with the slowness of the piece, the lack of climax and resolution. The idea of ongoing performance, with dynamic waves, was not as common in 1980. Here are some of the comments from the audience from the first year; they ranged from:

"This is the most revolting piece of trashy shit! I have ever seen! Its static. The play violates every sound principle of creating a play. You cannot get away by insulting an audience with a monotone actor. Its a shame to see a beautiful myth being annihilated!"

to:

"A kaleidoscope of unexpected movements and meanings, more deeply evocative than most work, takes time to be. I liked it, a good space for meditation."

Steve Lydenberg, who wrote the piece, would always anxiously read the comments book after we performed a new piece for the first time. He'd breathe a big sigh of relief when he reached the first negative comments, saying, "It can't be truly experimental if no one is disturbed by it." That attitude helped me to take risks in trying new ideas.

Marilyn Arsem
mobi us

SPRING BENEFIT EXTRAVAGANZA

(Write it in your calendar now!)

SATURDAY, MAY 9,

9 pm - 1 am

TICKETS: $10 in advance, $12.50 at the door

Over 15 PARTIES in one! Many musics! Dancing!

Drinks! Fascinating people! Funny things to do!

Amusing things to look at!

Mobi us is inviting ARTISTS to take a space and create interpretations of different PARTY genres including the surprise PARTY, the coming out PARTY, the five year old's birthday PARTY, the office PARTY, the Christmas PARTY, the tupperware PARTY, the wake, the teen rec-room PARTY, the beatnik PARTY, the communist PARTY, the bridal shower, the tea PARTY, the hen PARTY, the Mary Kaye PARTY, the baby shower, etc.

Keep watch for the flyer in the mail that will provide details on this REMARKABLE event.

---

FORK KNIFE SPOON

Nancy Adams

May 14 - 16

Thursday - Saturday, at 8 pm

FORK KNIFE SPOON is tangentially "about" silverware. The performance (sort of, but not really) explores the history, aesthetics, myths and rituals of Western eating implements. Forks, knives and spoons are potent and associative symbols of Western culture: eating, nurturing, technology, manners, violence, gender. It is my intention to extend the symbols and metaphorical references that I find in silverware into a visual and visceral reality.

FORK KNIFE SPOON is a solo "prop-driven" performance, driven not only by silverware but the other things listed above. The things and the design of the things tend to come first in the development process; the things and the design tend to suggest the performance. I like to liken this process to setting up a house and then living in it. One's things, and the color, shape, size, and arrangement of the things, influence habits, patterns of movement, manipulation of the things and so on. In addition, in the socialized home arena, things tend to suggest very specific actions for a specific historic, cultural or practical reasons: a knife is held one way and not another (so as not to threaten oneself or one's dining companions), chairs sit on the floor (because they have legs to sit on) and peas are for eating (because they're food and should be respected). In the art arena, it's nice to hold a knife a different way, put the chair up in the air and use the peas for something altogether different than eating. Why? Because chair's legs shouldn't be taken for granted and I, for one, don't like peas.

The performance draws on my dance background and is primarily non-verbal, though my voice - my thoughts - are heard on tape. I have developed one tiny and two medium-sized sections of this performance which I presented "in-progress" in December, 1991 as part of "Time Spent at Home". Many thanks to all those who attended the works-in-progress and provided me with invaluable suggestions, responses and impressions.

Nancy Adams

---

Nancy Adams  photographer Bob Raymond
We have been working, as a group, on this music for a year. It sprouted on us, full-grown, a year ago in our first concerts at Mobius. Six months later, in the November series, we harvested our first crop. It was a wine of wild flowers: thorny, bitter, pungent, tannic, abrasive, undomesticated. Planted by the wind, the music came from everywhere we had been in our separate lives. It landed in the back room at Mobius and pulsed for four days, a kind of Darwinian musical experiment Excessive, exuberant, exultive, exhausting. We released all of the tones on the loom and stretched their amplitude as far as we could. In the end we discovered the limitations of that method and found that they were simply human: ourselves; the five of us, the six of us, embracing the complexity of meshing that range of personal compositional dialects into a mutually recognizable musical discourse. The music that emerges is immense. Not a manageable item that can be juggled, or balanced, or held in the arm like a beach ball and thrown in predictable trajectories. It is immense, like Atlas' globe. Too large for one, or two, or three or four alone, but five or six can keep it spinning, aloft, in motion. Often I can't find its perimeter, can't find its circumference. But I can feel its center and know where it is. The challenge of improvisation is for each musician to know where the center is at all times so that each of us knows at all times where we stand in the music, and when the articulation of events created in the particular sphere of duration (which is the composition) is fulfilled, completed, maximized or abandoned.

I love the over-the-edge quality of this music. I love these musicians who are willing and capable of creating, spontaneously and collectively, a dynamic structure, greater than the conceptual reach of any one of us singularly, in which, for the duration of those moments, we commit ourselves to the pursuit of colossal ambitions and colossal failures, earthlings babbling in the universal frequency of stardust. I also love the fact that Mobius exists as a place where we can actually conduct an ongoing music experimental-laboratory with the assistance of a public audience.

Taylor McLean
"THE BURROW" (KAFKA) IN THESE TIMES
Malcolm Goldstein, Bart Uchida
Marilyn Arsem
Performance/with Installation
PERFORMANCES May 28 - 30
GALLERY HOURS May 27 - May 30
Wed-Sat, 12-5 pm
GALLERY TALK May 30 at 2 pm

"The Burrow" (Kafka) in These Times is a collaboration of three artists to create a realization of Franz Kafka's story, The Burrow. The work will be presented in a variety of manifestations: as a visual/sonic installation, open to the public daily, and, with live performances, as an enactment of the installation setting.

The total presentation will be an innovation in multi-media, non-narrative "story-telling". The three artists will be approaching the story from different perspectives:

Bart Uchida from sculpture/space installation;
Marilyn Arsem from movement and performance art;
Malcolm Goldstein from acoustic/environmental soundscapes.

The installation will consist of an integrated visual and sonic environments: a labyrinth of spaces and forms as various experiences of confinement and release for the individuals of the audience as they pass through and interact with the setting. The space will be defined by objects from our daily living (clothing, furniture, food, utensils, etc.) transformed by wire and plastic encasements, hanging and mobile amidst pieces of mirror and glass, as well as more stationary, sculpted forms of wood, stone, wire mesh and partition constructions. Filling the space will be a sonic complement consisting of words and passages from Kafka's story recorded on magnetic tape, recordings from radio, television, historical recordings and sounds recorded from our daily environment. These will be composed as a collage of soundings that will move through the space, through a variety of speakers placed in and around the space. The installation will be a daily, on-going event.

The live performance in the space will be an unique form of theater created through the interplay of the installation as put into motion by the intervention of human play. The performance will incorporate each of the artists' approaches to the setting as simultaneous gestures, rather than as a narrative re-telling of Kafka's story: shards of a shattering mirror, reflecting insights into the story-source. It will be an enactment that alters, but as well is altered by, the environments (people, objects, space, soundings, gestures, light, motion, etc.). Through the process of performance there will unfold a dynamic, between each of the artists and each of the members of the audience, revealing dimensions of experience of "burrow" as inner and outer reality.

Malcolm Goldstein
DANCE THEATER EXCAVATIONS

Clyde Crashcup was my favorite cartoon when I was five. Clyde was a scientist who drew big pictures on a big wall. He'd listen to the whispered suggestions of his child-assistant, Theodore, and transform the drawings into living, 3-dimensional places that they'd wander into! Magic! My preoccupation with Clyde Crashcup has continued with years of moving between visual art and performance.

My background is in traditional dance technique and choreography, but my current performance work is most informed by my training in design, painting, and new movement forms.

My process of making performance work has begun to resemble a geological event - a lot of condensation, evaporation, heat, erosion, distillation, coagulation, sedimentation, decomposition and crystallization goes on. I enter the process as an observer, often with a feeling of awe (that strange combination of wonder and dread.)

In the spirit of inquiry and discovery, my task is to uncover and apprehend. At the heart of this process is the practice of Dance Improvisation and Authentic Movement. Both of these experiential disciplines are concerned with focusing awareness and intention, and of moving beyond the limits of normal conscious perceptions.

These disciplines are a direct and powerful way to source and give form to unconscious material.

In sourcing material I try to suspend imposed meanings, and stay in the place of sense and feeling; the place where conscious and unconscious meet and inform each other. I work with clusters of visual images, dream fragments, germ movement and gesture, before themes reveal themselves. In performance it is important to me to sustain the subtlety, nuance, and mystery that permeates this way of working. I attempt to make performance pieces that don't speak to our customary methods of understanding, but can be directly experienced, perceived, known.

I've been working on a number of different ideas and images, and at this point I'm not sure what will take form for June. One possibility: A few months ago, Steve Thomas and I began meeting in the studio to explore the possibility of collaborating. Steve is a singer, improviser, writer, and mover who has collaborated on a number projects and has created solo performances since coming to Boston.

We have been exploring the interactive potential of our different disciplines and strengths, and are beginning to find some exciting entrances into work together.

Another possibility: Last spring I created a piece for three performers that was shown in progress at The Performance Place. It is a visually oriented dance that involves a number of props - a television, red ribbons, rocks, seeds, cigarettes, and water. It integrates spoken text and live sound, and is loosely based on images of freezing, thawing, and different types of hibernation. I look forward to reworking this piece in collaboration with Nancy Adams and Elizabeth Witham.

I have also been working on a piece for four dancers that involves the juxtaposition of sections of choreographed phrases, gesture "choirs", and structured improvisations.

SOME STRANGE PLEASURE

I make dance performance by gathering bits and pieces of my life that I find engage my attention and seem appropriate to share publicly. I do a lot of imagining, exploring in my mind's eye how different bits might fit together. I dance the images in my head long before I actually try them out in rehearsal. This often results in work that appears finished after only one or two rehearsals.

Does this give me some strange pleasure to become anxious inside? Does this enable me to feel my existence more acutely? Do I thrive? Do I take some strange pleasure so that I can feel important like I am getting something, going somewhere? I build a crisis into my life, I fabricate a crisis out of what is simply living.

The elements that are coming together to make "Some Strange Pleasure" include; a text about obsessing, written on the back of something while standing at a bus stop in January 1989, my Mom's old yellow prom dress, dyed berry red, and a bit of organismic movement using a wall that I came upon while practicing Authentic Movement.

I judge my every step, analyses my every move, in order to regulate, in order to know that I am. Do I test myself constantly in order to know that I am?

I have a naturally keen eye, and many years of study and practice with painting and drawing, as well as three years experience as a professional artist model. This has enabled me to develop an ability to "see" myself as I move, from many different angles. I take this into consideration as I construct and perform my dances.

Does this strange pleasure I seem to get from becoming anxious about my existence being felt more acutely; does this give me what I can feel in the pit of my gut as I analyses my every move in order to find information about my existence?

Thirty-six years of dancing and moving, and twelve years of performing for public audiences, has given me insight into what works for me and what doesn't. My primary concern is to be inside myself, inside my performance. If I can experience myself fully within any dance, then I can be pretty confident that some percentage of any audience will be in there with me. When I am in there, and that portion of an audience is in there, then we get to share and communicate a moment that transcends and transforms us both. It is for these moments that I continue to create and perform dance.

...leaving it all in order to risk some strange pleasure like getting in the pit of my gut... Does this give me what I can feel so that I know I am? Do I thrive? Am I anxious? Do I analyses? Turning upside down leaving any semblance of security, of surety or stability, leaving it all... in order to risk... some strange place...

Elizabeth Witham
THE APPREHENSION OF FIRE
Ean White
June 8 Monday at 8 pm

This informal slide lecture is an extension and specialization of a program developed three years ago with the help of Keith D. Kurman and Eric Eisack. It is presented here with several goals in mind. Foremost is simply an ample review of the long and unappreciated history of the fine art firework. As in the previous version my hope is to develop a more critical audience for a discipline that enjoys tremendous popular appeal. Secondly I intend to delve into the “problem” with most pyrotechnics in the United States (due in part, ironically I think, to the medium’s inherent democracy) - a singular lack of expression. I will propose several models for the future of fireworks and invite discussion on where this art might, or should, be headed.

“The society which rests on modern industry is not accidentally or superficially spectacular, it is fundamentally spectaculist. In the spectacle, which is the image of the ruling economy, the goal is nothing, development everything. The spectacle aims at nothing other than itself.”

Weather and regulatory agencies permitting we will walk to a nearby site and ignite a set piece from a work currently being developed, The Triumph of Horus. Non-aerial and not capable of detonation, this short excerpt depicts the accursed Nile Crab with sound score and fire. Development of The Triumph of Horus is aided by a grant from the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

“We live in a world in which the benefit goes to those who are capable of gross simplification in attractive ways.”

Ean White
Sometimes when you're driving do you ever feel like the car is getting out of your control? You take your foot off the gas, but instead of slowing down, you keep accelerating. This powerful thing is carrying you along, half a ton of metal and glass and rubber and you're surrounded by it and thought you were controlling it, and suddenly you've found out otherwise. Well, I mean, it's probably just some adjustment you need to make in the carburetor, but for a second the whole thing overwhelms you. I don't mean to say that your life flashes in front of your eyes or anything like that. It's just that you're really there, every ounce of your being comes back together - if you were thinking of something else or singing along with the radio or whatever, your mind and your heart can't ignore this and they drop whatever they're doing and for a second you are whole, present, aware, you are here and now. Then your brain tells your feet to hit the brake and the clutch, your hand to shift, you try revving the engine. Everything comes back to normal. Your heart and your brain and your body go their separate ways, they go back to their jobs and you're just driving again, going somewhere, wherever you were supposed to be going when all this started. But until you actually get there you don't know, do you, if you're really going to make it. Anything could happen.

Beth Gavrilles

GRINGO INCognito

Landon Rose and Bill Gilbert

JUNE 30-JULY 3   TUESDAY-FRIDAY  6-10 PM

making of something as ordinary as a pile of wood music is wanted signal are we going to take it apart and put it back together?
I get moments of fright I'm going to be swinging this axe in this little room in the heat of summer. Claustrophobic.

You split wood alone, by yourself, you split wood while other people prepare things, like dinner. I split wood when I'm on vacation, in Maine somewhere...Bill Gilbert splits wood 'cause it's one of the chores...like if I had a lawn I'd have to mow it (are those activities the same?) so in the name of ART or EXPERIMENT we are going to wrench this act out of that idyllic place in my mind pleasure-memory-expectation and cram it into a tiny hot box and invite people to come and watch (horrible) splitting wood - always been a time to get to know my body, get a little exercise talk to myself, dream about better days reinvent the past so that it works out right... I don't recall splitting so much wood that I failed to recognize it, I'd split it, use it completed act right then and there but it's dawning on me, that this private solitary wonderful magical time of wood splitting' for me is going to change forever if I somehow blow the performance ( a calm voice inside is yelling:"Landon, this is performance art, there is no way you can blow it it is what it is" not to worry I'll find a way) embarrass myself or worse embarrass Bill Who I've known for twenty years and the Audience I'll never be able to enjoy the act (of splitting wood) again, cause I'll be replaying all the bad moments over and over Do I really want to set this whole thing in motion? At this time I would like everyone to know that this was Bill's idea, I had nothing to do with it, I'm innocent I guess I really do need to be careful, something precious is being tampered with at the risk of seeming ridiculous I'd like to say art is that powerful. this is one voice of many. Do we need a language of transmission? A common personal symbology combined with diversionary tactics What would people like to eat? making the separation of life and art gooey. I'm good at breads quick breads. There is issue of projecting who we are in addition to how much, what kind, what age and length cut of wood to get head flying and crack continue relentless through this life. Red and green lights, fog machine, ball and cups, the bleeding lime

Susie Nacco

Landon Rose
WHERE ARE YOU ON '92?
Mobius is seeking proposals for performances and installations that in some way address issues raised by the anniversary of Columbus's voyage to this country. Proposals will be due June 15, 1992 at Mobius. Projects will take place between August and December, 1992.

WHERE ARE YOU ON '92?

First Night seeks Artists
Boston's 17th annual First Night Arts Celebration will take place on Thursday, December 31, 1992. We are now accepting proposals for both indoor and outdoor programming, including: music, mime/movement, dance, theater, puppetry, storytelling, poetry, film, video, visual/ environmental/interdisciplinary/ wearable and performance art, as well as for the Grand Procession.
All proposals are due on Friday, May 1, 1992. For further information and guidelines call: 542-1399, or write:
First Night, Inc.
Suite 927, Statler Building
20 Park Plaza
Boston, MA 02116

Zillions of thanks to the artists, volunteers and businesses who donated their time, energy, creativity, goods etc. to the cause.

Thanks to the kind, generous and generally outstanding individuals listed below who made contributions (as of 1/23/92) to Mobius since the last newsletter.

- Harold Leach
- Jonathan & Charlotte Isaacs
- Karen Turley
- Katherine Arsem
- Marty Ahrens
- Megan Roberts & Raymond Ghirardo
- Philip Hardaker
- Robert Unger
- Sarah Griffith
- Sarah Penney
- Steven Durland

Thank you Larry Johnson for the donation of lighting instruments!

First Night seeks Artists
Boston's 17th annual First Night Arts Celebration will take place on Thursday, December 31, 1992. We are now accepting proposals for both indoor and outdoor programming, including: music, mime/movement, dance, theater, puppetry, storytelling, poetry, film, video, visual/ environmental/interdisciplinary/ wearable and performance art, as well as for the Grand Procession.
All proposals are due on Friday, May 1, 1992. For further information and guidelines call: 542-1399, or write:
First Night, Inc.
Suite 927, Statler Building
20 Park Plaza
Boston, MA 02116

Call for Mail Art
This is a call for mail art about work: labor, production, reproduction, gender, money, etc. Please send your testimony, evidence or art to:
Secretary X
c/o Mobius
354 Congress Street
Boston, MA

All work will be used in the exhibit of Evidence of Secretary X. If you want work returned, please send a SASE. If you have e-mail, you can use maric@eagle.mit.edu

ARTrages On! was a big success!

Zillions of thanks to the artists, volunteers and businesses who donated their time, energy, creativity, goods etc. to the cause.

ARTrages Installation
Artists

Lewis Gesner
Mark Pugh
Linda Graetz
Hummel
Sean Mahoney
Shane Murray
Kaye-Lynn Johnson
Nathan Hemenway
Mark Booth
Emile Tobenfeld
Jeff de Castro
Kay Divant
Kelly Adams
Tom Evans

ARTrages Video Artists

Amatul Hannan
Bob Gibson
Bonnie Donohue
Clyde Tressler
Esther Peres
George Fifield
Jane Hudson
Joe Briganti
Joe Gibbons
Matt Anderson
Milan Kohout
Nina Hasin
Pearson Post Industries
Phil Kelly
Paul Richard
Scott Melchionda
Tony Oursler

ARTrages Volunteers

Adam Gebb
Anita
Ben Williams
Bill (?)
Bob Melvin
Brian Alves
Carol Van Heerden
Caroline Contrata
David Bonner
David Eddy
Dyne Fertson
Elizabeth Hughes
Eleanor Hand
Gene Hannigan
Guadulesa
Hannah Goodwin
Hummel
Jeff Jackson
Jennifer Bikini
Kathy Marmor
Kathy Robinson
Linda Graetz
Mark Booth
Emile Tobenfeld
Jeff de Castro
Kay Divant
Kelly Adams
Tom Evans

ARTrages Roving Performers

Jessie Davis
Ann Scott

ARTrages Business Contributors

Bethany's
The Blue Wave
Bontronics
Boston Beer Company
The Boston Phoenix
Brookline Liquor Mart
Cecil's
Copy Cop
Graphic Access
Lasater/Sumpter Design
Lebabon Bakery
Lightships
Lulu's Backyard
Mariott
South Street Grocery
Stuff Magazine
Universal Beverage

Special ARTrages
Thanks to:
Kathryn Sumpter and her students in the Junior Graphic Design class at the Art Institute of Boston. Each student submitted a design to be considered for the ARTrages ON! poster. And big thanks of course to Anne Damphousse who created the winning design and worked hard to prepare the mechanicals for poster and advertisements.
April 2 - 4
VISUM ET REPARTUM
Cathy Nolan, Mari Novotny-Jones
and Ean White

April 6 - 7
STUDENT WORKS

April 10 - 12
HEAVEN & HELL
Sam Armatas, Victor Basch, Phil Burnham,
Dennis Downey, Krisin Johnson, Jennifer
Johnson, Eric Lutes, Lonnie McAdoo, John
Peitso, Ron Platt, Lucy Vail, Tony V.

April 17 - 18
"PENUMBRA"
"C PERIOD COMMA"
Masashi Harada

April 24 - 25
PIECE FOR APRIL:
AS YET UNDATED
Tom Pisek, Joanne Rice, and
Larry Johnson

April 29 - May 16
Weds-Sat., 12-5 pm gallery hours
May 2, 12-3 pm opening reception
May 2, at 2 pm gallery talk
DREAM CIRCLE/BRIGIT'S FEAST
Ann Scott

April 30 - May 2
PERSEPHONE AND HADES
texts by Steve Lydenberg
designed/directed by Marilyn Arsem performed by
Mari Novotny-Jones and David Miller

May 9
Saturday, from 9 pm - 1 am
MOBIUS SPRING BENEFIT
EXTRAVAGANZA

May 14 - 16
FORK KNIFE SPOON
Nancy Adams

May 20 - 22
TALKING
ABOUT SOMETHING ELSE
Taylor McLean and Five-Headed Monster
in concert with: Michelle Kinney,
Glynis Lomon, Masashi Harada,
Dan O'Brien

May 20 - June 6
Weds-Fri. 12-5 pm gallery hours
May 20, 5-7 pm opening reception
May 20, at 5 pm gallery talk
PARABLES AND PARABOLAS
Taylor McLean

m o b i u s
BOSTON'S ARTIST RUN CENTER
FOR EXPERIMENTAL WORK IN ALL MEDIA

May 28 - 30, performances
May 27 - 30, 12-5 pm gallery hours
May 30, at 2 pm gallery talk
"THE BURROW"
(KAFKA) IN THESE TIMES
Malcolm Goldstein, Bart Uchida and
Marilyn Arsem

June 3 - 5
DIG
Sarah Hickler and Elizabeth Witham

June 8
THE APPREHENSION OF FIRE
Ean White

June 11 - 14, performances
June 10 - 14, 12-5 pm gallery hours
June 14 at 2 pm gallery talk
EVIDENCE OF SECRETARY X
Marianne Connolly

June 17 - June 27
Wed-Sat 12-5pm Th. 12-8 pm gallery hours
June 21, 2-5 pm opening reception
June 25, at 5:30 pm gallery talk
"FICTIONAL"
Beth Gavrilles
BAPTISM
Susie Nacco

June 30 - July 3
GRINGO INCognito
Landon Rose and Bill Gilbert

m o b i u s
Boston's artist-run center for experimental work in all media.
354 Congress Street,
Boston, MA 02210.
Tel:(617)542-7416.

Address Correction Requested