Dear Wing Luke Museum Community,

I became Wing Luke Museum’s Interim Director of Museum Services earlier this July. It had been almost 8 years since I had started as a volunteer. As someone who grew up in a majority-white city and learned so little of the history relevant to my family’s journey from Hong Kong to the States, it felt like a homecoming to find a museum where my family’s history mattered. I loved working in the Marketplace because I got to see many guests leaving with armfuls of books, excited that a child in their life would grow up with books that represented them.

Wing Luke Museum’s focus on diverse voices guides what we carry in our one-of-a-kind Marketplace. We call it the Marketplace because of the variety of vendors you can browse. Independent writers and artists contact us so that they can share their works with our audience. Shopping at the Marketplace supports a network of creatives, many of them local, who have to fight elsewhere to have their worth acknowledged.

Another way that Wing Luke Museum’s influence extends beyond our walls is through the stewardship of our Chinatown-International District neighborhood. Wing Luke Museum has been advocating for historical preservation of the C-ID, and for equitable treatment in any decisions that affect the C-ID and other communities of Color. The C-ID of today is the product of racist laws, wars, highway development that split the neighborhood in two, and gentrification. For those of us who know the history, we know today’s struggle is a continuation of the past and that there’s more to come in the future.

This holiday season, I invite you to make a day out of your shopping trip — eat at a locally-owned restaurant, visit our newest exhibits, browse the Marketplace, and shop for gifts at our neighbors too! You can give back to this historic neighborhood and ensure it remains a destination where everyone can find a piece of home, as I have.

Sincerely,

Heather Chan
Interim Director of Museum Services

ASIAN AMERICAN HISTORIES OF THE UNITED STATES

Almost 200-years of Asian migration, labor, and community formation in the U.S. are expanded upon in Asian American Histories of the United States. Coping with the COVID-19 pandemic and onslaught of anti-Asian hate and violence, historian Catherine Ceniza Choy documents this imperative social history. This ambitious book amplifies the lived experiences and diverse voices of immigrants, refugees, U.S.-born Asian Americans, multiracial Americans, and workers from industries ranging from agriculture to healthcare. A comprehensive read for anyone from curious minds to academic scholars. ($26.95)

FOR ART LOVERS

KENJIRO NOMURA: AN ISSEI ARTIST’S JOURNEY

Alongside over one hundred thousand Japanese Americans, Kenjiro Nomura was incarcerated during WWII, but he never gave up painting. Barbara Johns portrays his life and accomplishments within their historical context, including Seattle being a refuge for pre-war Issei artistic activity. Witness the significant impact Nomura had on American art, which this book displays with abundant vivid illustrations chronicling his entire career. An essential addition to the bookshelf for any appreciator of art and local history. ($39.95)

CRESCENCIANA

Both memoir and art book, Kenneth Tan honors his grandmother’s legacy by fulfilling a promise to not leave her paintings unfinished. He unfolds her life story in an array of memories upon her art, grappling with the grief of her passing mixed with the empowerment in sharing her experiences. A heartwarming collage to satisfy those seeking content engaging with personal narrative, familial connection, and multimedia artwork. ($50)

Z.Z. WEI: LIGHT AND SHADOW

Transport yourself to a space where time lingers with Z.Z. Wei’s paintings. His compositions depict still, yet robust images evoking nostalgia for an idyllic, rural America. Multi-dimensional, Wei’s art encapsulate humor and loneliness, peacefullness and pain. Their meaning balances on an edge - partly in shadow, partly in light, inviting those who dare to imagine outside the ordinary to peer into a unique and timeless perspective of life. ($60)
Weaving together historical materials, first person stories, and contemporary artworks by artists from a range of cultural/ethnic backgrounds, this exhibition will explore the complex landscape of resistance to the WWII incarceration of Japanese Americans, and the ongoing legacy of that resistance, for the Japanese American community and the nation as a whole. The exhibition seeks to illuminate connections between this history and the experiences of other communities that are working to heal from trauma, right historic wrongs, dismantle oppressive systems, and envision new realities. On view until September 2023 in the Special Exhibition Gallery.

THOSE WHO HELPED US

Join the waitlist for our new publication and follow up to We Hereby Refuse! Those Who Helped Us is an upcoming graphic novel about allies who helped Japanese Americans during the WWII incarceration. Written by local author Ken Mochizuki and illustrated by local artist Kiku Hughes.

Basketball-loving Sumiko Tanaka, then 11, narrates this graphic novel about the World War II incarceration of Japanese Americans. Through her eyes, we watch as her family is forced from their home and subjected to indiscriminate racism as they are shipped off to the concentration camp called Minidoka in Idaho. But Sumiko and her 17-year-old sister Yuri also see acts of charity and solidarity from their non-Japanese neighbors and friends in the Seattle area that make them hopeful for the future. As the young girls struggle with the horrors of being imprisoned in the dusty desert, they also find solace in the fact that some people chose to help. This story highlights the actual actions and experiences of those neighbors and friends. ($19.95)

Email orders@wingluke.org or call 206-623-5124 ext.203 for availability. Releasing Winter 2022.

WE HEREBY REFUSE

Frank Abe and Tamiko Nimura, along with illustrators Ross Ishikawa and Matt Sasaki, bring to life the award-winning graphic novel, We Hereby Refuse: Japanese American Resistance to Wartime Incarceration. Here is a story from the perspective of those who actively fought against the injustices forced upon them. A creative and educational work of art suitable for all types of readers, especially those with an interest in local history or activism. Pick up a signed copy today - limited copies available! ($19.95)
