Tricia Rose
Shorter Biography

A native New Yorker, Tricia Rose graduated from Yale University and then earned her Ph.D. in American Studies from Brown University. After teaching at NYU and UC Santa Cruz, she returned to Brown where she is Chancellor’s Professor of Africana Studies, Associate Dean of the Faculty for Special Initiatives, and the Director of the Center for the Study of Race and Ethnicity in America.

She has been awarded for her teaching and scholarship and has received awards and scholarly fellowships from the Ford Foundation, the Rockefeller Foundation, and the American Association of University Women.

Rose is the author of three highly regarded books, an edited collection, and several articles. Now, she is working on a multimedia research project called: How Systemic Racism Works, a project designed to explain and make visible the influential but largely obscured power of systemic racial discrimination in present-day society.

In addition to her research, public speaking, and duties at Brown, Rose was also a co-producer and co-host with Cornel West for The Tight Rope Podcast, a pandemic podcast on race, love and justice. For more information or to stay in touch, she encourages you to connect with her on her website www.triciarose.com, or through social media: Instagram, Twitter, and YouTube.