

mediations, tenors

Mediations, tenors is an exploration of the basic principle, in numerous sacred musics of antiquity, that recitations (of psalms, of q'uranic verses, or sutras) have a mid-point, a "mediatio," that in some way separates the early text from the late. Unlike those traditions, Mediations/tenors puts the "mediatio" in a position of identity, rather than a position of climax or transition between identities. A series of unstable mediations and "tenors" or steady states alternate rapidly, hopefully to the end effect of emphasizing independent relationships between the mediations themselves. The intervening "tenors" serve as conductors between them.

In place of a legend, I have offered performance directions throughout the score.

Ben Carson, 2008

Based on an earlier work for Steven Schick, premiered as "tenors/mediations" in November 1999, at U.C. San Diego, by Steven Schick and Aiyun Huang.

Mediations, tenors has not been performed; this version exhibits a wider range of rhythms on the gamut from irregularity to regularity.
