Plant medicine isn't always a very definable or linear process. But as we become more familiar and comfortable with how they work, sometimes we can get in our own way and plateau our healing journey. Discover ways to step into more of the valuable healing support that these teachers can share with us.

As the cannabis space has grown in Utah, locals have been able to immerse themselves in the industry. Brittany will be covering an array of topics on the subject. From working in the industry, to the healing power of working with plants, all based on her experience in the field, and her lite time affinity of agriculture and plants.

Cranial Sacral is a light touch, non-invasive healing modality that uses gentle pressure on the head, neck, back and sacrum to release restrictions within the body. It's believed that through the gentle manipulations of the bones in the skull, spine, and pelvis, the flow of cerebrospinal fluid in the nervous system can be normalized. Acupressure is a similar approach but using
