INTRODUCTION

The history of taxation in England is a long one. Almost every century in the last millennium has witnessed fresh efforts by the central government to devise an effective means of tapping the wealth of the people and applying it to its own purposes. Some taxes from the beginning have proved failures and been dropped after the first vain levies; the pages of English fiscal history are strewn with the records of unsuccessful experiments. Others, such as the land tax, have had a long life. But all, save perhaps the customs, have tended with the lapse of time to lose their flexibility, to become stereotyped in assessment and ultimately disproportionate and profitless in collection. Almost every century has brought its own offerings to fiscal history; the most enduring contribution, for instance, of the fourteenth century, so fertile in expedients, was the 'fifteenth and tenth', of the seventeenth, the excise, and of the nineteenth century, the permanent income tax. In the sixteenth century the outstanding fiscal development was the shaping of the Tudor subsidy, a graduated direct tax that played an important part in royal finance not only in the reigns of Henry VIII and Elizabeth I but also in those of the early Stuarts, and that was not finally dropped until after the Restoration.¹ The two documents whose texts are printed in this volume illustrate the growth, incidence and methods of collection of this tax.²

Let us consider first the later and longer assessment list. A parliament that was summoned, after a lapse of some years, for its second session on February 8, 1576,³ duly made a grant to the queen of two

¹ The standard general account of taxation in England is still that contained in the four volumes of S. Dowell, History of taxation and taxes in England, second ed. (London, 1888), though for the Tudor period it has been largely superseded by the two works of F. C. Dietz, English government finance, 1485-1558, University of Illinois studies in the social sciences, vol. ix (Urbana, Ill., 1920) and English public finance 1558-1641 (New York, 1932). These two latter volumes have been freely used in the writing of this introduction.

Several sixteenth-century subsidy lists for counties other than Wiltshire have been printed in whole or in part. There are helpful introductions to Taxation in Salford hundred 1524-1802, ed. J. Tait, Chetham Society, new ser. LXXXIII (1924) and to Subsidy roll for the county of Buckingham anno 1524, ed. A. C. Chibnall and A. Vere Woodman, Buckinghamshire Record Society, VIII (1950 for 1944).

² In particular, they have been selected from among the extant Wiltshire subsidy rolls among the exchequer records at the Public Record Office as surviving not only complete but in comparatively good condition, with few illegible passages.

INTRODUCTION

'fifteenths and tenths' and one subsidy.¹ This considerable burden was necessitated primarily by the military commitments of the government in Ireland and by the need for supplying help in one form or another to the protestant cause in France and the Netherlands. The international outlook was in fact dark and the country moving towards war with Spain; as the point was put in the text of the financial statute, there was 'great Malice borne to those kingdomes which make profession of the Gospel' and it was therefore 'no less requisite to have some Masse of Treasure in Readinesse then to have a Preservative against Poyson'.² The two fifteenths and tenths represented a fixed charge levied on each county, and its collection was a well-worn matter of routine; the assessments for each borough and hundred were nearly two and a half centuries old and the details of the raising of this stereotyped tax were of no interest to the government, provided that the requisite sums were duly rendered to the exchequer.³ It was quite otherwise with the subsidy, which represented a genuine attempt to rate individuals according to their capacity to pay.

The methods to be followed in assessing taxpayers for the subsidy and in the collection of the tax were laid down in detail by the enabling act. Payment was to be in two instalments. The basis of the assessments was twofold and alternative. Every person in possession of an income from land, including leasehold and copyhold property and rents, annuities, fees 'or other yearely Profits', was to pay two shillings and eight pence in the pound for the first instalment and sixteen pence for the second, the lower limit of exemption being a pound. Alternatively, the taxpayer might be assessed on his movable property, if it were worth so much as three pounds. On movable property—'Plate, Stocke of Merchandizes, all maner of Corne and Graine, Household Stuffe' were specified in particular—he was to pay twenty pence per pound for the first instalment of the tax and twelve for the second. Aliens were to pay double rates, save for those whose property was insufficient to qualify them for the levy; these latter were to be charged with a poll tax of fourpence.⁴ Taxpayers were to be rated where their goods lay or wherever they had 'most resort', and those who did not qualify for assessment on income from land were to be rated on their movables. Evidence from counties other than Wiltshire suggests that it was not unknown to change backwards and forwards from one basis of payment to the other and that there was perhaps even a certain marginal option.⁵ But on the whole the principles laid down in the statute for the assessment of the subsidy were definite and comprehensive.

The instructions for administrative procedure were also specific and detailed; the subsidy was now a couple of generations old, and they embodied the fruits of so much experience. The main responsibility for the levying of the tax in each county was laid on a body of local commissioners nominated by the great officers of the crown, of whom the lord chancellor or lord keeper of the great seal was necessarily one. The thirteen commissioners appointed for the raising of the tax in Wiltshire included the earl of Pembroke and the bishop and mayor of Salisbury, the other ten being well-known gentlemen of the county—in alphabetical order, John Brouncker, Sir John Danvers, Christopher Dodington, Giles Estcourt, John Eyre, Sir George Penruddock, Sir Henry Sharington, Sir John Thynne, Sir Thomas Wroughton and Sir John Zouch. It was their business to divide the county into smaller and more manageable 'districts'—Wiltshire was split into six such portions—which could then be treated as separate fiscal units. What must have been the trickiest part of the duty of the commissioners next began—the assessment of individual taxpayers. This was to be accomplished in each district by the use of simple enough machinery; the commissioners were to summon the constables and from two to eight 'of the most substantial discreet and honest persons Inhabitants' of the district, and with their aid enquiry was to be made 'of the best and most value of the Substaunce of everie person dwelling and abiding within the Limits of the Places that they shalbe charged with'.

On the results of these enquiries hung, in theory at least, the amounts for which individuals were rated. As to their method and scope, there is little or no evidence available, though this is a crucial matter of the highest interest. A special exhortation to the subsidy commissioners in all counties was circularized at the end of March by the government, which professed anxiety that the well-to-do should not escape lightly, nor the less wealthy be overburdened, and that in general the assessments should be equitably graduated and 'not so underfoote as heretofore hath ben used'.¹ Corporate property did not escape taxation, the 'borough lands' in Wiltshire of Chippenham, Malmesbury and Marlborough (but apparently not of other corporations) being rated.² As to individuals, it is more than likely that the high assessment of Richard Kingsmell of Overton in the hundred of Selkley³ was the fruit of a special enquiry, probably involving the use of a jury, if the phrase 'by office' is to be interpreted as 'upon inquisition'.⁴ Once the assessments had been completed and the lists drawn up 'in a roll or book', it remained to appoint in each district a 'high collector' to receive the sums duly 'taxed in the Subsidy Booke'; he in turn was to be served by 'petty collectors' in each locality. The names of the latter are stated in the Wiltshire return here printed, while those of the assessors, other than the commissioners, unfortunately are not.

The collection of the first instalment of the subsidy was carefully timed by the enabling statute. Parliament rose on March 15, and the initial commissions were to be issued out of chancery and delivered to their recipients before April 30. They in turn were to summon the constables and the other assessors to meet them before May 16, and the assessments for the first instalment of the subsidy were to be completed by June 12. The money yielded by this was to be paid in before October 12, but by July 12 the lists of taxpayers' names, with the amount to be levied from each, and with the names of the high collectors also stated, were to be 'certified unto the Queenes Exchequer'. It is the copy of these lists preserved in the custody of the queen's remembrancer in the exchequer, with the assessments for the first instalments of the subsidy duly certified by the several commissioners, that comprises the second document printed in this volume.¹ The separate portions for the six 'districts' of Wiltshire were in fact delivered at the exchequer on various dates in June and July, two being a few days late. It was presumably at the time of delivery that some exchequer clerk ticked off the totals from each village with the word 'probatur', in an abbreviated form, and added at the end of each list the words 'cum obligacione', to signify that the collector had given a bond to render the stipulated total in due course. A defaulting collector, like Alexander Langford of Trowbridge on another occasion, might well find himself in awkward legal entanglements.²

This document unhappily tells us little of how the Wiltshire commissioners performed their statutory tasks. From two to four of them acted in each of the six fiscal districts, which were delimited sensibly enough by similarity of social structure rather than by equality of geographical area. The city of Salisbury formed one district, while the six industrial hundreds in the north-west part of the county, together with the liberties of Corsham and Trowbridge, provided two others. The remaining three districts were far more extensive and between them covered something like three-quarters of the face of Wiltshire. Sir John Danvers and Sir Thomas Wroughton were thus alone responsible for an enormous tract of country, chiefly downland, from Devizes and Ramsbury to Marlborough and Cricklade. With regard to the appointment of collectors, practice varied from district to district, with only a broad adherence to the terms of the statute. The latter had its most exact application in the south-western district, where the commissioners appointed John Middlecott of Bishopstrow, described as 'gentleman'—he was fairly certainly a clothier—as high collector, with five petty collectors nominated to work under him. Danvers and Wroughton in their great province contented themselves with the appointment of no more than two 'collectors' tout court, each working independently in his own half. And in each of the two north-western industrial districts a single 'collector' was appointed, one of whom was a clothier. In Salisbury, two merchants acted, one as high and the other as petty collector. No doubt the assessments of the individual taxpayers in each district were of a piece with the possibly rough-and-ready standards of this general organization.

A hitch in the collection of a subsidy might occur when an individual possessed property in more than one township, district or county. By the statute, as has already been mentioned, he was liable to pay only in the place where he chiefly resided, and he could therefore claim an exemption elsewhere. In order to secure this exemption, the normal course was to obtain from the commissioners at his home township a 'certificate of residence', indicating that he was being taxed there and that he therefore looked for a remission of his liability. Against the name of an absentee owner in the margin of the subsidy roll the collector noted the formula 'exoneratur hic quia oneratur in X . . . ' or 'exoneratur hic eo quod alibi oneratur' or some such phrase. The certificate of residence was then delivered, presumably with the subsidy roll, at the exchequer.¹ Or, if a person had left the township or no longer possessed any property on which the tax might be levied, the collector made a special certificate or affidavit, and the marginal entry was made against the name 'affidavit'.² The precise significance of the brief marginal note 'oneratur' is less clear, as is that of the marginal crosses and circles occasionally put against names—perhaps they were no more than scribbles to aid the memory of the accountant. It is a curious fact that in only one Wiltshire district were certificates of residence required in 1576—does this reflect any exceptional standard on the part of the assessors or commissioners concerned?

A specimen certificate of residence, dated 1551, is printed in Appendix I, infra, 160.

² This is the explanation of the marginal 'affidavit' offered by A. R. Bax in his edition of The lay subsidy assessments for the county of Surrey in 1593 or 1594, printed in Surrey Archaeological Collections, XVIII (1903), 161-214 etc.

INTRODUCTION

II

The first and shorter of the two documents printed below is some thirty years older than the second and like it a list of Wiltshire taxpayers. But it did not spring from a parliamentary grant, and indeed it bears witness to the extent to which Henry VIII had emancipated himself from the control of parliament not only in the enactment of legislation but also in the raising of taxes. This is a point that constitutional historians are not wont to stress, no doubt because the absolute fiscal power of the crown to some extent reached the end of a cul-de-sac with the death of Henry VIII. In the fifteen-forties the country had experienced over half a century of mounting economic activity and was thus equal to the payment of the unprecedentedly large sums sought by the king, some with and some without parliamentary sanction. The money for the most part was required to pay the cost of wars with both Scotland and France that were proving more expensive than had been foreseen, and that could not be waged even by adding to the ordinary revenue of the crown the produce of loans raised in the Netherlands, of more currency depreciation and of further seizures of church property. Finally, a military crisis of the first magnitude was to grow in 1545. The Scots early in the year defeated the forces defending the border, and it was necessary to gather and send an army northwards to beat them back. At the same time, and even more serious, there developed a menace to the English bridgehead at Calais, for the king of France had made peace with the emperor of the Reich, taken Boulogne and was preparing to march further; indeed, later in the year he was to attempt an invasion of southern England. Money was thus required to finance the maintenance of large forces by both sea and land.

The sum that the king early in 1545 proposed to raise for these urgent ends was officially described as a 'benevolence' or a 'loving contribution'. There was, however, no suggestion that any levies now to be made would ever be returned to the pockets of the payers; the crown to all intents and purposes was imposing a tax—an 'unparliamentary subsidy'. The need for more money had been evident before the end of 1544, when a draft in the hand of Sir William Paget summarized the reasons for collecting a benevolence forthwith rather than waiting for a meeting of parliament in February, which would mean postponing the assessments for a subsidy until after the end of March. The concurrence of lords and commons at Westminster would, it was argued, cause scarcities at the capital (no doubt the humblest member would bring a servant or two to attend him). Further, there would be trouble and expense to noblemen and others in coming up to town instead of preparing at home to serve in the wars. An enemy attack while parliament was sitting would indubitably be awkward. The positive advantages of a benevolence were that it would produce fifty or sixty thousand pounds, that it would not grieve the common people, since it would be exacted only from the reasonably well-to-do, and that it would enable the summons of parliament to be deferred until Michaelmas.¹

As with the parliamentary subsidy, local commissioners were appointed for each county, to supervise the assessment and payment of the tax. For Wiltshire, they were the bishop of Salisbury, lord Stourton, Sir Charles Bulkley and John Ernley; the mayor of Salisbury also acted in respect of the contribution from his city. Their instructions were to use as the basis of the assessments for the tax the lists compiled for the collection of the last regular subsidy, a very recent exaction.² They were to summon the contributors in groups of not more than ten or twelve, beginning with the largest, and explain to them the needs of the French war and the danger to the English stronghold of Calais—the full threat of a cross-Channel invasion did not develop until later in the year. They were to point out that Henry in his desire for peace had treated with the French, agreeing vainly to conditions ‘so base and mean, as it is to be thought no loving subject coulde endure his Majestie shuld agree to eny lowre’, and that he now expected that his loving subjects would gladly aid him with ‘sum liberall contribution’. The details of the levy were then to be explained, all ‘uttred in a gentle and aimable havor,³ wherby to allure them to knowe their duetie as apperteyneth’. If any expected contributor should refuse to make payment without reasonable ground, there was to be no scene; he was merely to be told to go home, while his name was reported to the king’s council at Westminster. The chronicler tells only of two recusants, both London aldermen; one was dispatched to the Fleet prison until he changed his mind and the other sent amid general execration to serve as a soldier against the Scots, to be used ‘after the sharp discipline militar of the Northern Wars’.⁴

Whether the commissioners met with any resistance to their blandishments in Wiltshire is not known. They divided the county into eight districts, for each of which a ‘collector’ or ‘high collector’ was appointed. The administrative labour was less than usual, since the poorer taxpayers were not asked to contribute; this was only slightly offset by the extension of the levy to the clergy, who normally gave subsidies independently to the crown, but who were now to pay on their stipends or movables at the same rate as laymen. This rate was twenty pence in the pound on income derived from land, or ten pence in the pound on the value of movables. In Wiltshire, nobody was required to pay less than four shillings and most were rated for at least ten shillings—in some cases, very much more. When the commissioners had drawn up their ratings and interviewed the taxpayers—tasks that must have entailed for them a fair amount of travelling throughout the county, even if their lists were mainly copied from the most recent subsidy roll—the formal returns were handed to the collectors, who were then bound to deliver them at London, together with the sums specified. It is the official copy of these lists, complete for the county, that comprises the first document printed in this volume.¹ It is worth observing that the levy was to be paid not to the exchequer,² which with its lumbering and antiquated procedure was in a period of eclipse during the reigns of the early Tudors, but directly to the hands of Sir Edmund Peckham, who was the ‘generall recever appoyntyd for the seyd benevolence’ and who as cofferer of the king’s household held an office of high and recently augmented authority.³ But the lists of taxpayers nevertheless subsequently found their way into the records of the exchequer, at what time can only be guessed.

To return to Wiltshire, it is of interest to observe that the eight fiscal districts for the raising of the unparliamentary tax of 1545 were not at all the same as those for the levying of the subsidy in 1576. Nor were they by any means equal in either area or taxable capacity, and one in particular dwarfed the others. This was the great province, comprising all the northern part of the county, from Calne and Chippenham to Highworth, Marlborough and Ramsbury, for which the ‘high collector’ was William Stumpe, gentleman. This can have been none other than the famous clothier of Malmesbury, whose influence in these parts must at this time have been near its climax. Perhaps the number of his employees and connections may have enabled him to discharge his fiscal duties over so exceptionally broad an area more easily than a lesser man. Whatever the case, one fact deserves mention, that Stumpe’s fee as collector—two pence in the pound was the habitual allowance—nicely covered, with a few shillings to spare, the three pounds, six shillings and eight pence which he himself was due to pay as his share of the tax.⁴ His colleagues in the other districts were obscurer folk; the Salisbury collector was a brewer, as far as is known, of no particular eminence. But whether the collectors were men of influence or nobodies, it is unlikely that they had any extraordinary difficulty in collecting the tax. As has already been mentioned, only two open refusals in the kingdom to pay

are known, and the German ambassador reported to his master that the English would refuse nothing, such was their fear of the king and eagerness to humiliate the enemy.¹

Below the county, the next fiscal unit was the hundred, an administrative division of immense antiquity, whose origins stretched far back into the days when Teutonic conquerors first established themselves on the soil of Britain.² But although the hundred is still in mid-twentieth century remembered in the offices of the tax-collector, the term has otherwise ceased to have meaning for any save the antiquarian topographer. Even in the sixteenth century, the hundred as a territorial division was of comparatively slight importance and was already to a great extent moribund. The hundreds of Tudor Wiltshire, as listed in the two rolls printed in this volume, were composed of the most varied and curious assortment of parishes or townships which in some cases owing to the accidents of feudal ownership had come to be associated together. The most widely dispersed hundred was undoubtedly that of Elstub and Everleigh, which in addition to the central nucleus of parishes in the upper valley of the Salisbury Avon included also Little Hinton and Wroughton to the north-east of the county, Ham on the eastern frontier, Westwood adjacent to Somerset and other detached pieces less distant. These places represented manors once held by the priors of St. Swithun, Winchester, formerly lords of the hundred of Elstub,³ and it is curious to find such an awkward and scattered group thus figuring in the royal tax accounts, some time after the end of the original association that had given rise to it. There were plenty of other detached fragments among the hundreds, especially in the south part of the county.⁴ It is evident that the topographical complexity of these boundaries must have made the hundred a far from satisfactory unit for the efficient collection of royal taxes.

Below—occasionally beside—the fiscal group of the hundred the unit was either borough, liberty or township. The inconsistent variations of nomenclature that prevailed to describe these, the smallest fiscal units, nicely illustrate the empirical and practical, perhaps also the uneven and slapdash development of local government in Tudor England. The ² The hundred as a legal term is conveniently elucidated, e.g. by F. Pollock and F. W. Maitland, The history of English law before the time of Edward I (second ed., Cambridge, 1898), I, 556-560.

⁴ Those who care to pursue the matter, will have no difficulty in discovering discrepancies between the frontiers of the hundreds as indicated severally by the two documents printed in this volume, and again between these and the boundaries assumed by the editors of The place-names of Wiltshire, English Place-Name Society. XVI (Cambridge, 1939). Even the county borders were by no means as simple as might be thought.

township, like the hundred, is a social unit of great age, and the vitality of the term survived the imposition of the legal concept of 'manor' and the more general name of 'village' by foreign conquerors in the middle ages. Nevertheless, the word 'township' occurs in neither of the documents printed below, though in one of the Wiltshire districts in 1576 the smallest unit was described consistently as a 'tithing', in Latin decenna; by the sixteenth century, 'township' and 'tithing' in common parlance both doubtless meant pretty well the same thing.¹ Elsewhere, a distinction was drawn between the manerium (manor) and burgus (borough) of Wootton. Confusion is intensified by the use of the term parish or its Latin form parochia. This was chiefly applied to the fiscal units comprising the larger boroughs in 1545, though Salisbury was both in 1545 and 1576 divided into wards and Great Bedwyn in the latter year was described as a parochia.² The parish in the sixteenth century was in process of enlargement from an ecclesiastical into a civil unit as well, and the empirical and inconclusive nature of the incipient transformation is, it might be claimed, as well illustrated by these two documents as any others. But although the township may have been forgotten in Tudor Wiltshire, it remained sufficiently alive elsewhere to be carried across the Atlantic in the early seventeenth century to survive, with no more than a slight change of meaning, to the present day in America.

In fine, the confusions in the nomenclature of county divisions in both the documents printed below are manifold, however the antiquarian might explain them. The time had not yet come when, mainly owing to the operation of the poor law, the only working unit below the county was virtually to be the parish, and not for another three centuries was there to be superimposed as if upon a blank map the utilitarian designations of rural and urban district. But already, in the fiscal circumstances of mid-sixteenth century, there was little or no effective distinction between tithing, parish, manor or even liberty or borough, or any other unit below the hundred, which itself was a most haphazard collection of localities. There is plenty of material here to illustrate how tenacious was the local survival of the various terms used to designate these centres of habitation, how crowded was the palimpsest, and how ill the refinements of the constitutional historian apply to the practical workings of local government in Tudor England.

The two tax lists here presented are of obvious interest not only to the genealogist, but also to the topographer¹ and the antiquarian. They afford information whose significance can readily be enhanced when it is joined to that available from the parish registers, first ordered to be kept in the reign of Henry VIII, and from the visitations of the county by the heralds from the college of arms.² Its utility to the economic historian is perhaps more indirect, though on points of detail these lists will help him in identifying and placing individuals in their local setting.

A great deal hinges on the difficult question of the incidence of direct taxation in Tudor England, and much more work needs to be done in the publication and study of subsidy rolls before conclusive light can be shed on this central problem. It is generally accepted that by the end of the sixteenth century the valuations of taxpayers' property in the subsidy books bore little relation to reality and that the assessments were mechanically fixed on the basis of previous entries in them.³ On the other hand, the claim has been advanced that some of the assessments for the reign of Henry VIII, and in particular those for the subsidy of 1524, cut close to the bone and corresponded fairly accurately to the capacity of the subject to pay.⁴ It is even arguable that the subsidy was a tolerably graduated levy on real wealth for the first half of the reign of Elizabeth I,⁵ which, if true, would certainly enhance the value of the second document printed below. But whatever the significance of the assessments, there must have been many poor folk whose names were passed over, and accordingly for any quantitative study of population problems in the reign of Elizabeth I, it is necessary to turn to the muster rolls rather than the tax lists.⁶

The social historian, bearing in mind Leland's description of Wiltshire and the surviving family papers and accessible legal records of the sixteenth century, should be able to strike a spark of life into the remote names on the dry roll of taxpayers. Save for the handful of Wiltshire

² Two have been printed—The Visitation of Wilts, 1565, ed. W. C. Metcalfe (London, 1897), and The Visitation of Wiltshire, 1623, ed. G. W. Marshall (London, 1882).

³ The usual authority quoted for this assumption is the remark of Sir Walter Raleigh in the debate on the subsidy bill of 1601—'our estates that be £30 or £40 in the queen's books are not the hundredth part of our wealth'.

⁴ The Buckinghamshire lay subsidy of 1524, intro., xiii.

⁵ This view has been put forward by Peyton, Village population in the Tudor lay subsidy rolls, English Historical Review, XXX, 241. But cf. the words of Sir Walter Mildmay, quoted by Dowell, Taxation and taxes, I, 146.

⁶ As has been done by E. E. Rich, The population of Elizabethan England, Economic History Review, second series, II (1950). Even here, of course, allowance must be made for evasions.

INTRODUCTION

peers, who were separately rated,¹ the great landowners in each neighbourhood can fairly readily be identified: Dauntsey of Lavington, Mompesson of Bathampton, Willoughby of Knoyle and the like, these are the middling families collectively as important as the better-known Hungerfords, or the Thynnes, or the St. Johns of Lydiard Tregose, where their splendid funeral monuments still embellish the parish church. About the turbulent history of the Darrells of Littlecote, second cousins of Jane Seymour, third wife of Henry VIII, a surprising amount of information is yet available; it is possible to follow the chronicle of their marriages, their brawls, quarrels and lawsuits, and the fate of the twenty-five manors that comprised their family inheritance in the mid-sixteenth century, thanks to the chance survival of so much of their family archives.²

There are also the forefathers of some famous men on these lists. Among the ancestors of lord chancellor Clarendon, and thus of two queens regnant of Great Britain and Ireland, one, Alexander Langford, was a well-to-do clothier at Trowbridge and another, Laurence Hyde, a landowner at West Hatch near Salisbury; the former figures in the 1545 roll, the latter in that of 1576.³ The Chamberlaynes of Lacock were probably the forefathers of the celebrated nineteenth-century politician Joseph Chamberlain.⁴ More than one relative of the philosopher Thomas Hobbes is enumerated as living in or near Malmesbury, and the 1576 list includes the name of Thomas Lighte of Kington and Langley; this was fairly certainly 'Mr. Thom. Lyte of Easton-Piers', a great-grandfather of John Aubrey, who noted that he died in 1626, aged 96.⁵ The great-great-grandfather of Edmund Ludlow, the republican lieutenant-general of the Interregnum, was residing in 1545 as a squire on the family property at Hill Deverill.⁶ Other families were to move very far afield in the next century. The Moodys of Garsdon, for instance, emigrated to Virginia in the new world, under the auspices of a chartered company in which another Sir John Danvers, the third son of the tax commissioner of 1576, was a leading spirit. The Zouches, too, were active in the early colonization of America.⁷ Indeed, not the least interesting point about these lists is that they provide us with the means of calling the roll of the middling and wealthier families of Wiltshire a couple of generations

¹ This accounts for the absence of the names of Wiltshire peers from these rolls, save as commissioners; even the bishop of Salisbury, who was listed in 1545, does not seem to have been assessed.

² They were extensively utilized by H. Hall in his Society in the Elizabethan age (third ed., London, 1892). They repose at the Public Record Office among the State Papers Supplementary (S.P. 46).

INTRODUCTION

or so before the first great scattering of the English people began in the seventeenth century. Although the history of the Wiltshire emigration to America in the reigns of the first two Stuarts has not yet been written, it certainly deserves to be.

In the north-western part of the county, and especially in the hundreds of Malmesbury, Chippenham, Melksham, Calne, Bradford, and the liberties of Trowbridge and Corsham, a striking proportion of both the 1545 and 1576 levies was furnished by capitalist textile employers—'clothmen' or 'clothiers'. Their prosperity had probably never been greater than in the former year, when, for instance, Thomas Horton of Iford was assessed for ten pounds, his brother-in-law Robert Barksdale of Keevil for 26s. 8d., his son-in-law Henry Long of Whaddon at 20s. and the latter's brother Thomas Long of Trowbridge—all clothiers—at eight pounds. A generation later, the ramifications of this industrial cousinhood was to leave notable traces in the subsidy roll of 1576. The two sons of Thomas Horton, Edward and William, both of Westwood and alike, though clothiers, described as 'gentlemen', were rated then to pay respectively £4 3s. 4d. and £2 13s. 4d.; the Long brothers were now dead, but Thomas Long had left a widow at Trowbridge whose payment topped the list of the liberty at four pounds. Among the grandsons of Thomas Horton were the brothers John and William Yerbury, both clothiers, the one at Bradford and the other at Trowbridge; they paid ten shillings apiece.¹ It is probably at Trowbridge that the subsidy assessments best illustrate the wealth of the textile capitalists; apart from the payment of the widow Long, Robert Wallys was rated to contribute £2 1s. 8d. and William Wylkens £1 13s. 4d. Other clothiers heavily taxed included, e.g., John Scotte of Chippenham, Anthony Stokes of Castle Combe, and Clement Bathe and John Middlecott of Bishopstrow. Their contributions were not indeed as great as those of the largest landowners, such as Sir John Thynne or Sir Edward Baynton; the highest levy of all in 1576 was borne by Thomas Lodge of Brixton Deverill, who was not connected with the cloth industry, as far as is known. But their burdens compare broadly with those of the middling squires of the type of Giles Thisselthwaite of Winterslow or Henry Boddenham of Ebbesborne Wake.²

The earlier list is additionally remarkable for its enumeration of the well-to-do priests of the close at Salisbury, perhaps as various a collection of men as might be found within any cathedral precincts in this age of unprecedented changes in religion. The bishop was William Capon alias Southcot, successively monk, abbot of two abbeys and bishop of Bangor before his translation to Salisbury in 1539. It would appear that he was a pliable and somewhat self-seeking prelate, alleged to have appropriated church property for himself. He certainly managed to adapt himself to the vagaries of the times ; he held on to his see during the reign of Edward VI, returned to popery at the accession of Mary I and was still bishop when he died, in extreme old age, in 1557. His suffragan, Thomas Morley, bishop of Marlborough, remains an obscure workaday personage about whom little information is readily available.¹ Among the other dignitaries of the diocese, it is a little surprising to find Robert Okyng rated for the subsidy at no more than forty shillings. Okyng was a creature of bishop Capon, whose commissary he had been at Bangor and who in 1546 was to appoint him archdeacon of Salisbury. Less prudent than his patron, he voted against allowing the marriage of the clergy in convocation in 1547, but took a wife as soon as this became lawful and so in 1554 was deprived of his archdeaconry. On the other side, the appellation of ' Sir Box ' may possibly cloak the name of John Boxall, a fellow of New College, Oxford, in 1540, and prebendary of Salisbury in 1553 ; a short but brilliant career during the reign of Mary I brought him to the deaneries of Peterborough, Norwich and Windsor and finally to a royal secretaryship of state : but on the accession of Elizabeth I, he in turn lost his preferment.²

INTRODUCTION

By contrast with the broken careers of Okyng and Boxall, an example of successful veering is provided by Richard Chaundler, rector of Great Cheverell and from 1546 prebendary of Salisbury, who accepted preferment equally from cardinal Pole and Elizabeth I, and held the archdeaconry of Salisbury from 1554 until his death nearly thirty years later. Among the older generation, Thomas Bennet—magister doctor Bennet, assessed for the considerable sum of ten pounds—was a notable dignitary. He was a prebendary, canon residentiary and precentor of the cathedral, where his memory is preserved by a monument on the north side of the choir ; he had also been bishop's chancellor and vicar-general of the diocese. In the fifteen-twenties he had served cardinal Wolsey as chaplain and auditor and must have learnt something of high politics. He had also been employed by his master for the dispatch of various bits of government business in Wiltshire. On the fall of the cardinal he did not cease to be active in the affairs of the diocese, and on the instructions of Thomas Cromwell he had played some part in the suppression of the religious houses there in the thirties.³ Among the other prebendaries, Robert Awdley, assessed for eight pounds, was archdeacon of Berkshire until his death in the summer of 1545, presumably near the time when the benevolence was being levied ; John Bodenham was rector of St. Peter's, Marlborough ; Richard Arche, vicar of Avebury, also held a canonry at Windsor ; Matthew Wotton was treasurer of the cathedral until his death in 1551, when he was succeeded for a brief space by Arche ;

¹ Morley was consecrated in 1537—W. Stubbs, Registrum Sacrum Anglicanum (Oxford, 1897), 101. He was vicar of Bradford-on-Avon and rector of East Fittleton, W. H. Jones, Bradford Upon Avon in Wiltshire Archaeological and Natural History Society Magazine, Vol. V (1853) p. 226.

² Capon and Boxall are noticed in the D.N.B. ; the rest of the information in this and the succeeding paragraph, save where another source is specified, is drawn from the compilation of W. H. Jones, Fasti Ecclesiae Sarisberiensis (Salisbury, 1879).

³ There are numerous references to Thomas Bennet in the Letters and Papers of the reign of Henry VIII, from which a fuller account of his activities might be written.

INTRODUCTION

and William Canynges, canon residentiary, had in some ways the most intimate connection with the daily life of the great church as custos puerorum and thus supervisor of the school.¹ In the parishes, the resident priests were less well off than the more important cathedral dignitaries. Some, however, paid middling sums and the parsons of Foxley and Landford were exceptional in being assessed at nil quia pauper.²

To sum up, the two taxation lists printed in this volume can be used to provide a sketch of the social structure of Wiltshire in the period immediately following the dissolution of the monasteries. It is not a complete picture, for the humbler classes—the copyholders and small freeholders in the country and the lesser tradesmen, artisans and servants in the towns—were spared in 1545, and many doubtless were not netted in 1576. We know little of them, and much further investigation is needed to dispel our ignorance. But in the higher ranks of society, the social types are clearer. At the top, the greater landlords, the unpaid servants of the crown who ruled the county in its name: these are well represented by the tax commissioners. Next come the lesser gentry, who were assessed on their landed property. Particularly in the north-west, there were other rich men who had made their fortunes in the cloth manufacture, an industry that in 1545 had half a century of prosperity behind it. The urban society of Salisbury was in some ways a local unit of its own. Throughout the county there existed a well-established clergy whose members, considering their lack of family cares, were by no means poorly off and whose greater dignitaries must have lived in some state in the houses of the close surrounding the thirteenth-century cathedral at Salisbury. As a body, the clergy formed the most clearly defined social group, for there is no lack of evidence to demonstrate how fluid was society in Tudor Wiltshire, how ill-marked were the divisions between the classes and how individuals were continually passing from one into another. It is not always easy to visualize this long-dead society, for in four hundred years much has changed, with the landed gentry of the county in decay, the cloth industry shrunken and specialized and the old names not all remembered. Yet the permanence of the essential background remains a light to the historian. For as in sixteenth, so in twentieth-century Wiltshire, sheep still graze on the upland plains, the villages cluster around the same churches along the river valleys and under the downs, and corn still grows in the fields around them.

The two documents printed below may conveniently be described together. They both contain a number of rotulets filed exchequer-wise at the top; each rotulet normally consists of a single membrane.¹ The subsidy roll of 1545 is composed of 31 membranes in 30 rotulets, of a width varying from 5½ to over 7 inches; the longest is over 36 inches, the shortest, other than a certificate, some 29, and most are about 33 inches long. The 1576 roll is of somewhat larger dimensions; its rotulets and membranes, other than certificates, number 46, from well under 7 to over 9 inches broad and varying in length from about 33 to 21 inches, with an average measurement of perhaps 26. Seven of the eight certificates in the first roll are entered on separate rotulets²; in the other, of its half-dozen, four occupy merely the top few inches of a membrane containing the assessment lists. All the 1545 certificates, and four of those of 1576, were sealed with what appear to be the personal seals of the commissioners. The former are of red, the latter of dark brown wax. They were affixed by means of seal tags; almost all the seals that remain are very poorly preserved.³

The principles on which the transcription of the documents is based are those set forth in detail in a report by the committee of the publications section of the British Records Association in 1946.⁴ Abbreviations have everywhere been expanded, save in a few cases where there is insurmountable doubt about the termination of a Latin word. Punctuation has been added where this seemed helpful, and the use of capitals has been rationalized. Letters or whole names that have obstinately remained so faint as to be illegible have been marked by square brackets enclosing dots. Very few have in fact resisted the use of the ultra-violet lamp at the Public Record Office. In cases of doubt, recourse has been had to the names listed on other Wiltshire subsidy rolls of the same period surviving among the exchequer records and to various printed indexes and lists readily accessible. In particular, the well-preserved assessment

³ There were originally probably 24 seals attached to the 1545 roll and 13 to that of 1576; of these, there survive, for the most part cracked, mutilated or defaced, 10 and 7. The best-preserved of the seals belonging to the 1545 roll is attached to the Dunworth etc., etc., certificate printed infra, 17; it may be described as broken, armorial, a bend between 6 roundels (Stourton). Two other seals on this roll, affixed respectively to the Warminster etc. and Downton etc. certificates, infra 32 and 41, appear to bear the device of a bull's head (the crest of Bulkley). Only one of the seals attached to the 1576 certificates is decipherable. It is affixed to the Kinwardstone etc. certificate, infra 78. It is armorial, per pale (i), quarterly (i) and (iv) ?, (ii) and (iii) ? 2 bars, over all a bendlet; (ii) ? vairy. The arms are more than probably those used by Sir John Danvers—cf. J. E. Doyle, The official baronage of England, I (London, 1886), 509.

INTRODUCTION

list of 1567 for the hundreds of Malmesbury, Calne and Damerham North now in the custody of the County Archivist at Trowbridge has been very helpful for the district it covers.

In order to simplify the work of not only the transcriber but also the printer, and to economize in the use of paper, certain liberties have been taken in the process of editing. The assessments and totals were written in Roman numerals; these have throughout been printed as Arabic. Marginalia of various sorts have been left out, save where they are part of the formal text of the document; the omitted markings are composed chiefly of superfluous catchwords at the tops of some rotulets, crosses and notes ('sol' for solvit presumably to indicate payment, abacal annotations and a number of more or less obscure tottings and jottings made by the clerk to aid him in completing his calculations. Some of these were made in Roman, some in Arabic numerals, and there are one or two instances of a sum being expressed in composite style, with the shillings in Roman and the pence in Arabic figures. Money indications have also been formalized. Finally, a considerable saving in space has been achieved by a drastic rationalization of the 1576 assessments. In order to avoid printing after each name the basis of the levy, whether 'in goodes' or 'in landes' or otherwise, a capital L enclosed in brackets (L) has been used to denote an assessment based on landed property and all names not so distinguished—by far the greater proportion in the document—are to be taken as paying on movable property. In the few cases where an unusual basis for assessment is specifically stated, e.g., 'in yerely profittes'—this has been directly transcribed and printed in inverted commas. There has been no departure from this method even for the district that included the hundreds of Bradford, Melksham and Westbury and the liberty of Trowbridge, where taxpayers assessed on land and movables were listed separately for each locality under a collective marginal rubric 'landes' or 'goodes'.

VI

This volume is the ultimate fruit of a lengthy discussion in the early summer of 1946 between the present writer and the then general editor, now chairman, of the Records Branch, which took place during a holiday at Clyro in the Welsh Marches, and it has been in preparation since that year. On all sorts of points, alike technical and general, Mr. R. B. Pugh has been fertile in both suggestion and criticism. A detailed acknowledgement of his help by appropriate footnotes would appreciably have lengthened the book, and it is far from certain that his name does not deserve a place in the title-page.

The labour of transcription has been done in the first instance from photostats, but the later tasks of editing have taken me to the Public Record Office, where more than one of the Assistant Keepers has kindly afforded help. I am also indebted for aid to my neighbour Mr. H. E. Bell of New College, and to the County Archivist at Trowbridge, Mr. M. G. Rathbone, for so efficiently and courteously producing documents for me. In the concluding stages, I have leant heavily upon the aid of the present general editor, Mr. N. J. Williams.

Finally it would be unjust not to acknowledge the cheerful help I have received from my wife in the tasks of checking the text and compiling the indexes.

HUNDREDUM DE KYNGESBRYDGE, BLAKGROVE AND THORNHYLL

PAROCHIA DE BADBURY

Sir William Wroughtun, knight, and Geoffry Danyell, esquier, com-myssyoners assigned by the kinges majesties comyssyon to assesse and taxe his graces subjectes to the payment of the thyrd parte of the relief graunted to the kinge by acte of parlyament. The said comyssyoners, emongest others assigned to execute the said comyssyon within the hundreth of Kyngesbrydge, Blagrove and Thornhill in the countie of Wiltes, to the right worshipfull the kinges comyssyoners assigned to assesse and taxe the said payment of the said relief within the countye of Berka, gretenge. We do certyfye unto you by this our writinge of certyfycat that Thomas Stephyns, gentylman, of Burdrope withyn the said hundreth of Kyngysbridge, Blagrove and Thornhill and the said countie of Wiltis, ys seassed and taxed to the said payment of the said relief before us in goodes and cattalles to the some of one hundreth poundes; so that he be not sessed or taxed before you at any greater some that then he may be discharged before you and be charged before us accordinge to the statute. Thus we bidd you moste hertely fare well. From Marleborough the viith of Apreill in the vth yere of the reigne of our moste dread sovereign lorde kinge Edward the vith, by the grace of Godd of Englund, France and Irlond kinge, defender of the faith, and of the church of Englund and also of Irlond in erthe the supreme hedde. 1551.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE SUBSIDY COMMISSIONERS OF 1576¹

After our hartie commendacions, you shall receive herewith the queenes majesties commission under the great seale of England for the assessinge, levienge, gatheringe and aunsweringe to her majesties use the first payment of the subsidie granted to her heighnes by her lovinge subjectes in this last session of parliament. And like as the same is addressed unto you, as persons chosen uppon speciall trust and confidence above others, to joyne in commission for this purpose, so is yt requisit, aswell in dischargde of your owne duties as in satisfyenge of her majesties good expectacion, that you should take speciall care, and use your uttermost indevors, that the taxacion of the persons chardgeable maie be made indifferentlie and answeareable to the meaninge of the parliament, and not so underfoote as heretofore hath ben used. Wherin as the good example of the just taxacion of your selves shalbe doubtles the best meanes to induce others to be rated in such reasonable sorte as is convenient, so we thincke yt necessarie to make you to understand as a matter that her majestie earnestlie desireth to have reformed, that where heretofore persons of very great possessions and wealthe have ben assessed at very meane sommes, and persons of the meanest sorte have ben enhanced to paye after the rate of the uttermost value of their substaunces, you shall now have good regarde to order the said taxacions more indifferentlie, so as the greatest burden beinge laid uppon the most welthie, the poorer sorte maie in proporcion be the more easied. And this proceedinge of her majesties most gracious disposicion and care to the good usage of her people is of you to be substantiyallie considered in your doinges, and very meete to be imparted to all such as in this case you shall have to deale with, to thend that yt maie appeare that her majestie is no lesse carefull to have yt levied without grief, then to conceive the same to be geven of her subjectes with most franke and lovinge good will. And for the gatheringe and aunswearinge the sommes to be taxed, yt is requisit and so we earnestlie requier you, that you appoint such sufficient persons to be collectors as for their honestie and wealthe shalbe willinge and hable to make payment to her majesties use at the tymes appointed. And this, with the good opinion that is conceived of your wisdomes and good discrecions, we thincke sufficient for this purpose to provoke you to do so much as this case requireth. And so we bid you right hartelie farewell.

From the Courte at Whitehaule, the [blank] of Marche, 1576.

Your lovinge frindes,

Endorsed. Ultimo Marcii 1576. A memorandum of the lettres sent with the commissions for the taxing and leavieng of the first payment of the subsidie granted to her majestie at the late session of the parliament, to all sheires throughout the realme.

INDEX OF PLACES

This index is to all intents and purposes a list of inhabited places in Tudor Wiltshire. It has been compiled with special reliance on The Place-Names of Wiltshire, ed. J. E. B. Gover, A. Mawer and F. M. Stenton, English Place-Name Society, XVI (1939), though by no means all the names enumerated in the text of the two rolls printed above figure in this volume. As far as possible, each place has been referred to its modern spelling, and an effort has been made to set it in relation to a parish or, in one or two instances, a hundred, if not itself one or the other. Very few names have completely defied identification.
