

The world needs risk takers

ILLUSTRATION BY ALESSANDRO GOTTARDO

The world needs risk takers.

The truth seekers and status quo resisters.
Who ask the questions they really want to know. Who confidently pursue what is right even when it isn't popular.

No facades. No half-truths.
No compromises.

The life lovers and slow-song-in-the-kitchen dancers. Who smile at every stranger and wear their hearts on their sleeves. Who uphold authenticity time and again.

No distance. No armor. No walls.

The course changers and path makers.
Who risk it all to follow their hearts and lead others to new places. Who steadily move forward without always naming the challenges they overcome.

No compass. No safety net. No way to know where the road will go.

The world needs risk takers.
Like you and me.

Who pave the way for others to follow.
Or who tiptoe past their comfort zones
to say yes when they could have said no.

Every day, in big and small ways, we all wake up and push toward the unknown.
Never rising out of new waters the same as we were before.