

THE EPIC OF GILGAMESH

The Epic of Gilgamesh, written 4,500 years ago, told the story of the Sumerian demi-god, King Gilgamesh. To distract the tyrannical King Gilgamesh, the gods created a bestial heathen named Enkidu to challenge the great king. King Gilgamesh sent a temptress to meet with Enkidu and presented with beer, bread, and earthly pleasures, turning the heathen into a man. Enkidu and King Gilgamesh later become best friends, drink lots of beer, battle beasts, and go in search of eternal life.

Our logo is the character for beer in ancient cuneiform, the world's first written language. It resembles a conical fermentor. The basic shape that brewers use to this day. The fermentors were made of stone, and buried underground to keep the temperature just right for the yeast. Many historians believe that the beginning of civilization started at this point in ancient Sumeria.

The Gilgamesh brewing philosophy is to bring a sense of community, build relationships, and make us all a little more human.
