Atlanta, GA – The Museum of Design Atlanta (MODA) is thrilled to announce the opening of its latest exhibition, "Al Dente: The Design of Pasta," which will run from April 12 to September 1, 2024. This unique exhibition delves into the world of Italian pasta, not just as a beloved food but as a significant design object that carries a rich history, embodies regional cultures, elevates dining experiences, and fosters social connection.

“Al Dente” explores the many ways in which the processes of making, cooking, and eating pasta serve as acts of design. It showcases an array of pasta shapes — each created to maximize flavor, texture, and nutritional value — and the tools used to make them. Also addressed are the impacts of industrialization on pasta design, pasta’s promotion to consumers through graphic arts, the future of pasta in our era of 3D and 4D printing, and contemporary efforts to create new pasta shapes.

“By exploring the design of pasta, past and present, the exhibition highlights pasta’s role as a carrier of sauce, but also as a medium of cultural expression, connecting people across the globe with Italian traditions,” says Laura Flusche, Ph.D., Executive Director of MODA and curator of the exhibition.

Exhibition Overview
"Al Dente: The Design of Pasta" invites visitors to explore the journey of pasta from its humble beginnings to its status as a global culinary staple. The exhibition is structured around several key themes:

- The History of Italian Pasta: Trace the evolution of pasta through centuries, understanding its origins, and how it became integral to Italian culture and cuisine. Learn how historic pasta-making practices are being preserved through the efforts of Vicky Bennison, creator of Pasta Grannies.

- Design of Individual Shapes: Discover the rationale behind selected pasta shapes, which are designed to serve specific culinary and/or social purposes.

- Innovation in Pasta Design: Highlighting attempts, both failed and successful, to innovate pasta shapes by celebrated designers like Philippe Starck and Giorgetto Giugiaro. A spotlight on The Sporkful host Dan Pashman's new pasta shape, cascatelli, exemplifies modern efforts to enhance the pasta eating experience through design.

- Pasta Futures: Gaze into the future of pasta with a section dedicated to the revolutionary uses of 3D and 4D printing technologies. This segment showcases how these advancements are pushing the boundaries of pasta customization, sustainability in packaging, and transportation.

Special Features and Interactive Experiences
As immersive as it is interesting, "Al Dente: The Design of Pasta" will invite visitors to redesign their own dining experiences, to browse well-designed pasta merchandise in the DESIGN SHOP, and to participate in a wide variety of hands-on activities and programs related to pasta and Italian food, including:
