MISSION STATEMENT

The New Orleans African American Museum (NOAAM) is the meeting point of Art, Culture and History in the Treme neighborhood of New Orleans. NOAAM works to preserve the historic neighborhood through the presentation and interpretation of the African American culture heritage with inclusive narratives and community storytelling.
VISION

NOAAM is a nexus for inspiration, learning and connection, serving our neighborhood, our city and visitors from around the world with immersive exhibitions and public programs that weave together historical analyses and contemporary reflections about how the peoples of the African Diaspora contributed to and continue to shape the culture of New Orleans and America.

Under the leadership of Gia M. Hamilton, the New Orleans African American Museum is reorganizing using the Decolonize the Museum model, a liberatory practice which involves reviewing, interrogating and shifting positions of power, defining impact based on equitable practices and being bold, audacious and radical in our imagination about the possibilities for the future.
CORE VALUES

We believe that Black New Orleanians contributed to and shaped the unique qualities of this city and thereby influenced the world through art and culture.

We believe that the contributions of African Americans and the development of black culture is paramount to American society.

We believe that leading edge art and the artists who create it are essential to a vibrant, forward thinking society.

We believe that museums and arts and cultural centers have a responsibility to its community, core constituents which includes social justice and equity based processes.

GREETINGS NOAAM COMMUNITY

Back in 2019, I stood at the entrance to our historic campus in Tremé and took a deep breath. The museum had been closed for seven years. There was much to be done.

My mission was simple; breathe new life into the building. I started from the ground up. My days ranged from gaining access to running water to investigating old loan terms. The past few years have truly been filled with all things restoration, redevelopment, and restabilization.

When I stand outside the historic campus now, I’m proud to look back and look how far we’ve come. New Orleans rallied to successfully rebuild a stable foundation for our city’s first African American museum. That is no easy feat.

Together, we broke ground. Now let’s get groundbreaking.

NOAAM is actively building a new museum model that shifts the standards of what it means to display a collection. At its fullest, NOAAM will be much more than a museum. It’ll be a house for Black art, a portal across space and time, an incubator, a model for decolonization, an artist community, a place for radicalized education, and a home where Blackness is always at the center.

Join us on the journey as we go from breaking ground to groundbreaking.

It is with much solidarity and sincerity that we share our 2023 annual report.

PROBLEM

Our society values art as a commodity, but not creatives, culture bearers and artists themselves or the process of making and discussing art. In addition, museums are rooted in colonial and extractive practices that take work out of context of the community and place value and judgements based on a eurocentric cannon creating spaces of exclusivity, static and unresponsive spaces for the community.

OUR SOLUTION

+ The New Orleans African American Museum has listened to the community and the field and have placed an emphasis on learning, connecting and community access.

+ NOAAM makes an investment in young talent by creating pipelines using a fellowship model to support professional development.

+ In addition, NOAAM focuses on audience experience and “equitable tourism” models to increase connectivity of the visitor to the unique history and culture of Black New Orleans and how it is connected to the diaspora.

+ NOAAM invests in educational programming that centers life learning programs for the entire family and changes the culture of the museum experience and thereby increases the number of museum goers and museum members who are invested in NOAAM’s long term success.

the NOAAM Senior Team developed and modeled a shared, common loyalty to the values-based purpose work in which we are all engaged. As the larger team continues to reorganize - a sincere collective persona of care has emerged, as well as a radical/decolonized voice with regard to NOAAM's public profile; relative to how the Staff captures and interacts with all stakeholder levels connected to the institution. This year, the removal of debt distress served as an energetic tabula rasa for the Staff and Community, while somehow spiritually beautifying the 2-acre campus. In terms of cultural/social impact, NOAAM sustained momentum with prudence, credibility, and accountability by asking others to ‘join us on the journey’ as we experimented with live community engagement points, organizational role structure, exciting incubations & exhibitions, sophisticated multimedia enterprises and distinctive programmatic initiatives. Within our Treme/New Orleans community-at-large, NOAAM continues to unravel oppressive models of operation, engage in procedural liberation work, and put forth legitimate global re-interpretations of internal & external systems enrichment strategies. This, all in an effort to begin to state that ‘NOAAM is of Treme’ and for the World!'
SEARCHABLE DATABASE 2024

Between July 2021 - December 2024, the Archives Department will have logged and digitized between 650 articles from the NOAAM Collection. As an estimate, this is about 80% of the total collection and is now in process of migrating the data to a new database to further serve stakeholders by having a searchable database in 2023.
