JOSEPHINE MACKEN

the imaginary line about which the body rotates (2023)
Flute, clarinet, violin, cello, piano, percussion. 6 minutes. World Premiere.

The imaginary line about which the body rotates is a work commissioned by Ensemble Offspring, intended to be programmed alongside Richard Meale’s kaleidoscopic chamber work Incredible Floridas. The piece celebrates conceptualisations of sound and temporality through the analogy of the ‘musical line’.

In performance, musicians in an ensemble direct the paths of intangible attention lines by attuning to the ever-changing trajectories of musical activity across the ensemble in relation to their own instruments/bodies.

These imaginary lines intersect with tangible ones – lengths of cotton string attached to the bodies and instruments of the players which materialise imaginary lines and activate sounds at a distance. This commission is generously supported by Nathaniel Beck and Karen Hackett.

— Josephine Macken

Josephine Macken is a Sydney-based composer and improviser whose practice centres on the concept of ‘interference’ as a tool for music making and an aesthetic framework for articulating the processes which underpin her music.

MARTIN WESLEY-SMITH

For Marimba and Tape (1983)
Marimba, electronics. 11 minutes.

This composition began as a tape music piece. One of the lines in the piece, Wesley-Smith says, “rapidly acquired a distinctly instrumental flavour.” Therefore he re-orchestrated the tape part on the Fairlight machine... producing six works with it and different solo instruments.

The work begins with the tape part alone, establishing a sonic palette that is for the most part examples of the kinds of sonorities that tended to come out of analog tape music facilities... magical and beguiling sounds that beautifully off-set the rich tone of the marimba.

— Joseph Stevenson

Born in Adelaide in 1945, Martin Wesley-Smith taught composition and electronic music at the Sydney Conservatorium of Music, where he founded and directed its Electronic Music Studio. He was a pioneer in Australia of audiovisual composition and passed away in 2019.
AUGUSTIN BRAUD

Hexis (2023)

Cello, percussion. 8 minutes. World Premiere.

Hexis is a meditation on habits translated through recurring musical gestures fading away. The piece combines cello, vibraphone and waterphone to create an ethereal soundworld where the subtle interplay between the two players shapes discrete melodies, slowly emerging from the quasi-repetitions of the motives. Accents and ascending gestures contrast with these subtle sounds as a means of escaping certainty, aiming for other soundscapes and experiences. This piece was commissioned by Ensemble Offspring with generous support from Charles Davidson. The work is dedicated to Charles and its interpreters, Claire Edwardes and Blair Harris.

– Augustin Braud

Born in France in 1994, Augustin Braud holds a PhD in musicology from the University of Poitiers. He is also the recipient of the SACEM Claude Arrieu 2020 prize, awarded to a young composer of symphonic music.

RICHARD MEALE

Incredible Floridas (1971)

Flute, clarinet, violin/viola, cello, piano, percussion. 33 minutes.

I. Prelude, “Voyelles”
II. Interlude I, “Fêtes de la faim”
III. Sonata I, “Le bateau ivre”
IV. Interlude II, “Phrases – Veillées – Génie”
V. Sonata II, “Une saison en enfer”
VI. Postlude, “Une saison en enfer – Matin – Adieu”

Commissioned and premiered by the Fires of London ensemble in 1971, Incredible Floridas was subtitled by Richard Meale “Homage to Rimbaud”... This work continued a quest by him in seeking out diverse creators and their imaginative drives. In a program note for the London premiere Richard described the nature of his homage thus: “But how to pay tribute to a poet who works ‘to make oneself a seer’, who wants ‘to arrive at the unknown by the disordering of all the senses’?... I let it write itself.” Incredible Floridas is an intense and highly evocative piece, standing as a landmark in Australian chamber music; frankly to accurately use a much overused term, it is an iconic work and deserves to be better known, as does Meale’s work generally.

– Kim Williams

Marrickville-born Richard Meale (1932 - 2009) was one of Australia’s leading composers, whose music gained international recognition throughout the 1960s and 1970s. From 1968-1988 he was a lecturer at Adelaide University and is best known for his late opera Voss.
