

Hello and welcome...

...to my first official newsletter!

It's been an exciting and transformative year with two solo shows, eight juried exhibitions, a Best in Show award, and a move to Toronto, where I've set up a brand new studio (more on that soon). I'll continue to create and exhibit in both San Diego and Toronto, and I'm so grateful to have your support along the way. Let's dive into some recent highlights and a preview of what's coming next.

Colors of Bombay Solo Show

Thank you to everyone who came out to Colors of Bombay, my August solo show generously hosted by Tracy Baker at Coldwell Banker West. It was such a joy to share this body of work with you. I was humbled by the incredible turnout, support, and sales. If you weren't able to make it, I have a duo exhibition opening in just two weeks. See page 2 for details!

My newest paintings

Lately, I've been diving deeper into figurative abstraction, blending expressive forms with layered texture and bold color. Some of these pieces are making their way into my upcoming exhibition (flip to page 2 for details). The elephant painting below, Emancipation, was especially well-received — it earned the Viewer's Choice award at my Colors of Bombay solo show!

Duo Exhibition Opens October 4

Join me on Saturday, October 4 from 4–7pm at Ashton Gallery in North Park for the opening reception of Emotion X Connection: a vibrant duo show by me and the incredibly talented Priyanka Pathak (pictured above). See her work at ljbfstudio.com.

This is our first collaborative series exhibition, featuring over 10 expressive figurative works in acrylic and mixed media. As both visual artists and psychotherapists, we draw on our emotional worlds and South Asian roots to express nuances of life's emotional moments through color, texture, and form.

The exhibition runs alongside "Fall in Love", Ashton Gallery's juried regional group show. Priyanka and I will both be at the gallery during the opening to connect with guests. The event is free and open to the public, and all pieces will be available for viewing and purchase through October 31.

We have a winner!

Congrats to my raffle winner, Carrie M.! She takes home this layered piece, "Temple Ash". Thank you to everyone who entered the contest. Stay tuned for future promotions.
