Introduction & Purpose

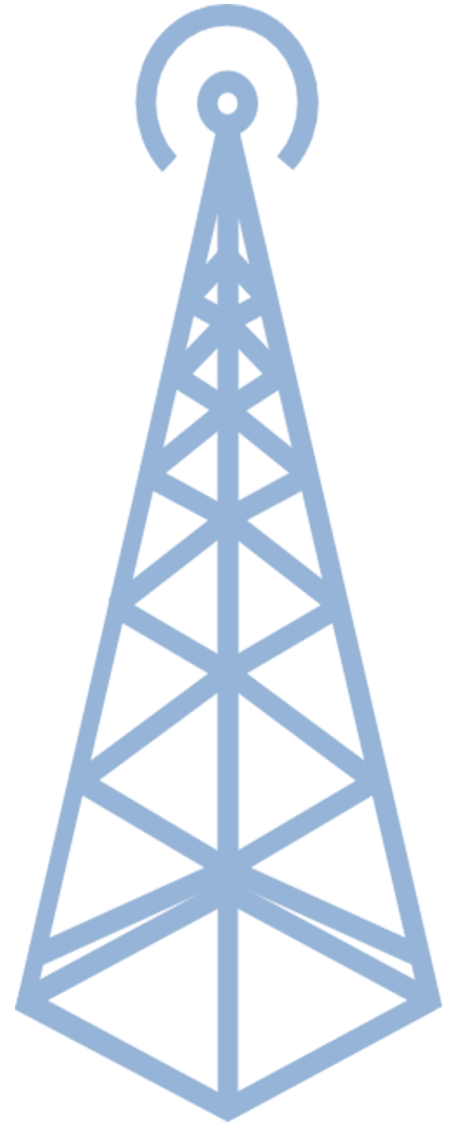

Access to broadband services is a necessity in today's competitive, high tech, fast-moving world. Broadband access continues to revolutionize how citizens and businesses, along with local, state, and federal government entities, retrieve and provide vital resources. Resources include access to emergency services, healthcare, education, storage management, and how each organization shares and retrieves information. Also, communities across New York State and beyond continue to seek broadband access and use it as a tool to foster local, regional, and national economic growth. However, rural communities are facing new challenges relating to broadband access.

One of the challenges associated with broadband expansion into rural communities is the lack of existing resources and infrastructure, which is needed to cover more area amongst a less dense population. The cost to add necessary infrastructure to implement broadband is often fiscally unfeasible. Also, the cost to add broadband infrastructure is often shifted to the consumer, making the cost of services increasingly prohibitive to the average consumer. Ultimately, the lack of return on investment not only drives up the price of broadband access but leaves less populated rural areas behind, creating a digital divide between populations who have access and those who do not.

Livingston County is home to approximately 65,000 residents, covering 644 square miles of land. Within the county, there are seventeen towns and nine villages with Geneseo as the county seat. Livingston County is located south of Rochester, NY, and is bisected north to south by Interstate 390. The dominant economic sectors within the County are agricultural related operations, education, and healthcare.

The purpose of this document is to illustrate the many assets that Livingston County currently has for consideration of broadband companies seeking to expand within Livingston County. The following inventory items are meant to be utilized and considered in the broadband build-out phase and used as a tool to quantify existing community assets.

For example, as stated in the New York State Broadband Strategy Development Tool Kit, publicly owned assets such as water towers, can be utilized as "broadband hardware" to implement antennas. Also, privately owned agricultural businesses can harness their assets, such as grain silos, as potential sites for towers and antennas.

Community Assets:

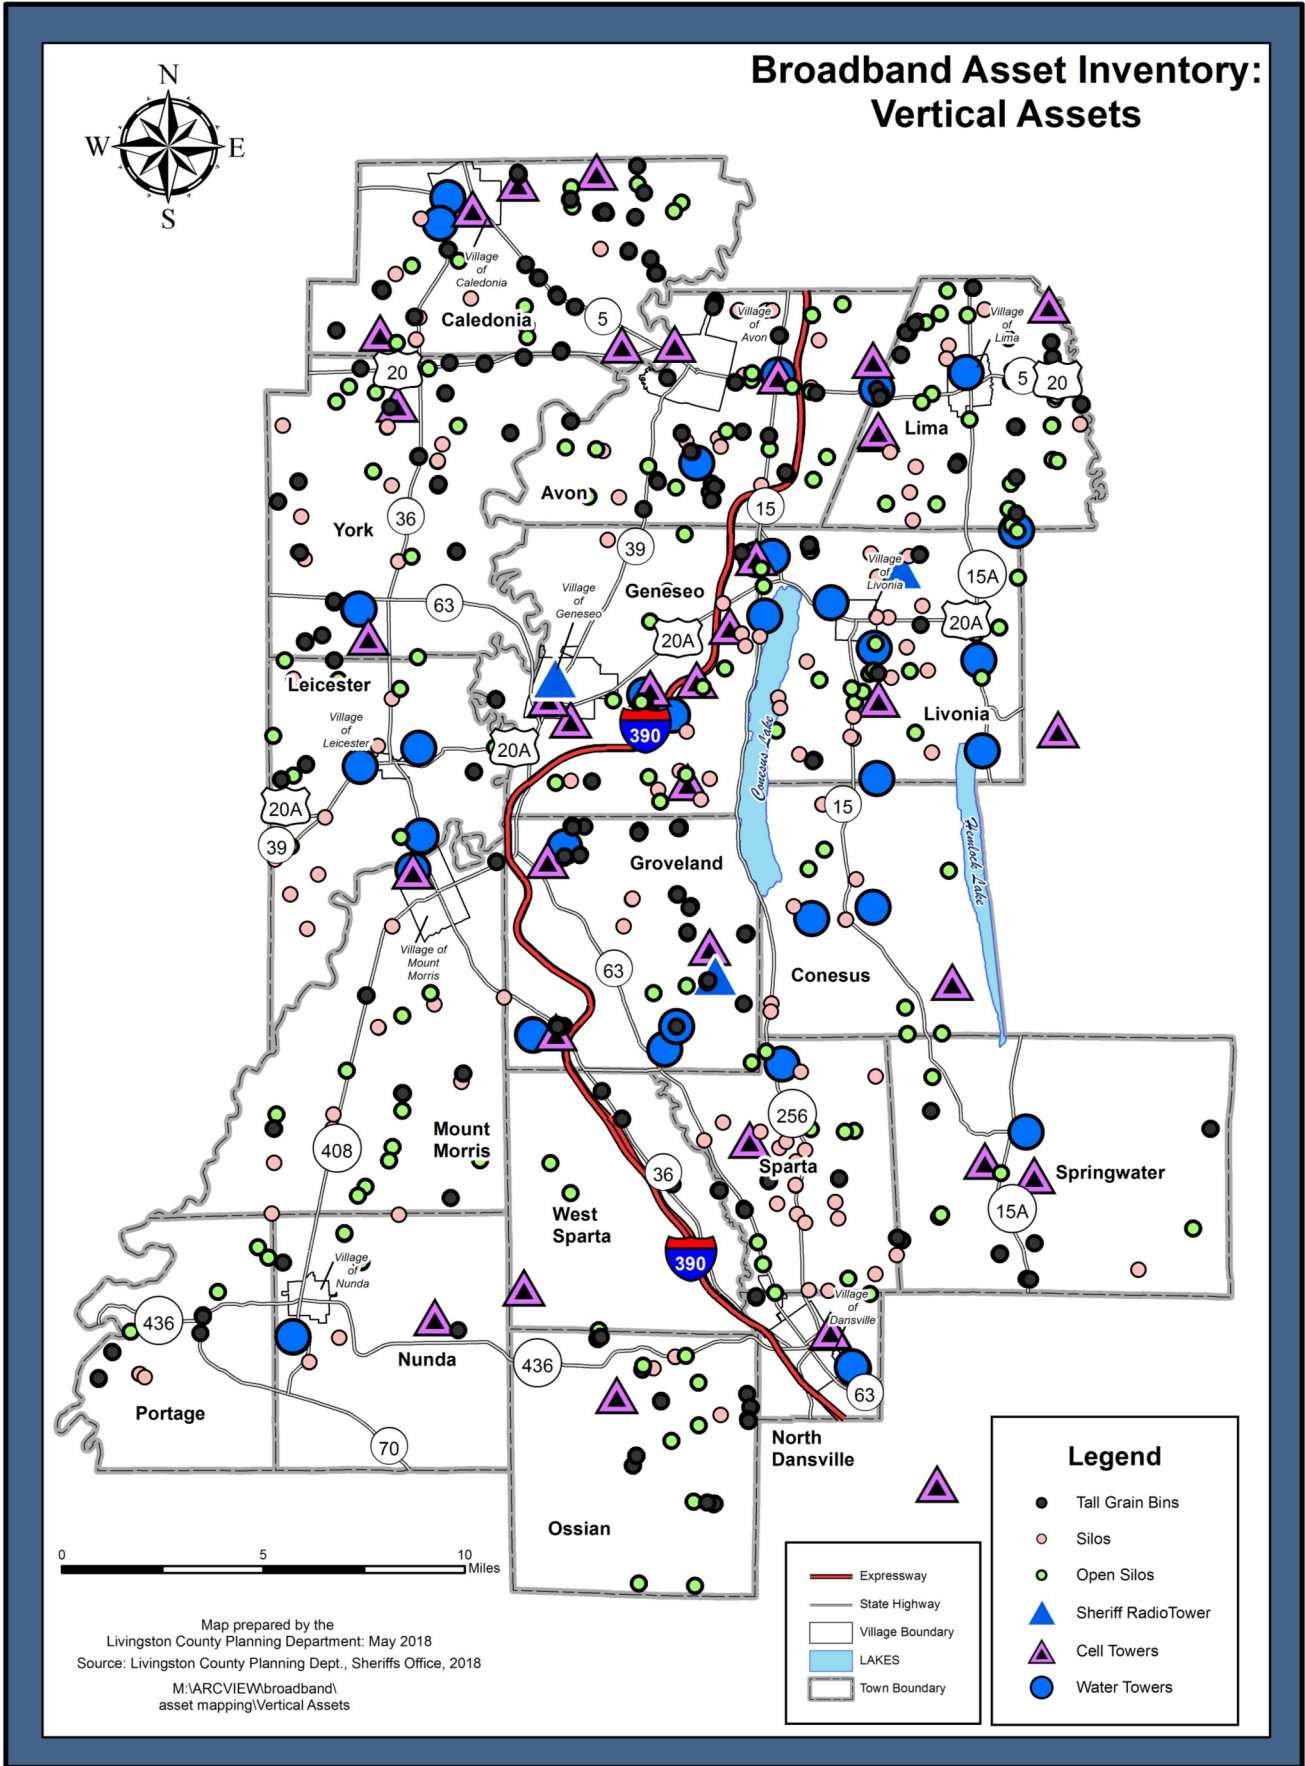

- Vertical Structures
- Public Facilities
- Emergency
- Commercial & Industrial Assets
- Downtown Revitalization Districts
- Elevation Showing Municipal Owned Parcels
- NYS Broadband Program

Overall, by observing and harnessing the existing assets to aid broadband expansion within Livingston County, positive effects and development can occur. Broadband companies, working with public and private asset owners, will be able to expand on their existing customer base utilizing existing assets. New relationships with providers can form as public and private entities work to increase access to underserved communities. Also, by creating a more connected society, according to the NYS broadband Strategy Development Toolkit, positive economic development can occur by giving businesses the opportunity to remain in remote locations while still being able to communicate with, serve, and grow their network of constituents.

Vertical Assets

The Vertical Assets map illustrates existing vertical structures throughout Livingston County. These vertical assets may be considered for the expansion of broadband through lease agreements between owners and broadband companies. While most silos and grain bins sit on private property, water towers and tanks are owned by municipal governments. Overall, a company may benefit as the existing structure might reduce construction costs to place wireless equipment that expands service. Data is provided from the Livingston County Sheriffs Department, Planning Department, and Real Property Tax Services. Aerial imagery to identify structures was provided from New York State, and Google Maps, This inventory includes:

- 38 Cell Towers
- 38 Water Tower / Tank Structures
- 130 Tall Grain Bins
- 168 Silo's
- 167 Open silos
- 3 Sheriffs Office Radio Towers
- 11 Sheriffs Office Repeater Towers

Public Facilities

Public facilities serve as another asset for broadband companies to not only expand into other customer bases but serve as tangible assets in maintaining broadband coverage. For example, according to the New York State Broadband Strategy Development Tool Kit, educational institutions such as schools, trades, and colleges provide a unique opportunity for companies to use said institutions for student labor or expertise. Livingston County also has a network of public facilities, and government centers. In Livingston County exists:

- 8 Public Libraries
- 4 Sites of Higher Education, most notably SUNY Geneseo
- 17 School Districts, with 8 School Districts having facilities within Livingston County
- 18 County Government property locations
- 17 Town Halls
- 9 Village Halls

Downtown Revitalization Districts

The Livingston County Downtown partnership assists local municipalities in efforts to boost economic health, and to actively engage and grow the local economy for future generations. The identified Downtown Revitalization districts provide another unique opportunity for broadband companies to expand coverage and grow customer bases in these concentrated growth centers. Among these districts exist a mix of businesses and residences within the central business district of each community.

NYS Broadband Program

The NYS Broadband Program identifies qualifying census tracts within rural communities that lack the necessary broadband infrastructure. According to NYS Broadband Program Office The program provides State grant funding to support projects that deliver high speed internet access to unserved and underserved areas of NYS at 100 Megabits-per-second in most areas, and 25 Megabits-per-second in the most remote areas of the State. The program had three phases, as shown in the map below. The following map also illustrates the census tracts where Livingston County communities qualify for this state-funded program.
