Par Avion transports you into a world of global connections, exploration and nostalgia.

Guy Gee's stamp-inspired pieces, drawn from over 200 nations, reimagine these tiny mementoes as glimpses into far-off places with renewed meaning.

Ella Freire's works, inspired by travel tickets, evoke the elegance and excitement of travel in bygone eras. Each piece reflects the charm and allure of setting off to unknown destinations.

Together, Gee and Freire's work is a tribute to exploration and the joy of staying connected. Inspired by curator Lily Ackerman's cherished letters from her grandfather, marked with "Par Avion" during her university years, these works celebrate every journey, whether across oceans or across time, capturing the beauty of shared moments and timeless connections.

For this exhibition, both artists are presenting never-before-seen large-scale versions of their work for the first time.

ELLA FREIRE

Working from her Wimbledon studio, London-based screenprinting artist, Ella Freire is inspired by vintage travel ephemera.

Freire's screen prints pay homage to the Golden Age of travel, meticulously recreating the vibrant graphics and bold typography. Printed on 100% cotton archival paper, each piece is mounted, cut to shape with perforated edges, and finished with a reinforced tab and punctured hole, mirroring the authentic details of these iconic luggage labels.

Her work blends nostalgia with precision, celebrating the elegance and adventure of mid-century air travel in striking, large-scale designs.

Freire's work is featured in the Pan Am Museum Gallery in New York, and her luggage tag prints were exhibited at the Royal Academy of Arts Summer Exhibition in 2024.

GUY GEE

Pantography was established by London-based artist Guy Gee, drawing inspiration from the Ancient Greek pantograph—a tool historically used to scale drawings. Notably, pantographs played a key role in producing the world's first postage stamps, introduced in England in 1840.

This innovation sparked a global revolution in communication, with nations swiftly adopting and personalising the concept. As one of the earliest forms of mass media graphic design, stamps have long served as a canvas for cultural storytelling.

Gee's ambition is to create an artwork representing every country in the world. Each artwork is realised by extensively researching thousands of stamps and then selecting one to reinterpret. These intricately engraved miniatures are then enlarged and digitally reimaged, offering a fresh, contemporary perspective on their original designs.

Over the past decade, Gee has meticulously refined his collection, working with over 400 stamps from nations, states, and capitals. His body of work is a celebration of heritage, geography, travel, and the art of communication.
